Three School Boys Break Three Arms And One Leg

One Fell Out of Chestnut Tree, Another Off Bicycle and Third Was Jumping.

During the past week three school boys have shared four broken limbs as the results of accidents of which they were victims.

Master Jim Matthews, son of Mr. T. F. Matthews sustained a broken leg while jumping. Master Jack Turner, son of Mr. Achilles Turner, had an arm broken in a fall off a bicycle, and Jim Schweig, Silverbrooke Street, fell out of a chestnut tree, on Wednesday, after school, breaking both arms and receiving severe cuts and bruises about the face. The latter two boys attend Queen Mary's school.

Jack Turner was riding a bicycle with another boy when they ran into a dog and were thrown to the ground.

HIBERNIANS ELECT OFFICERS

At one of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings of the year, the Ancient Order of Hibernians held their County Convention at their rooms on Hunter street last evening. The result of the election was as follows:

Birth of a Nation Tests Knowledge of Good Music

Mr. Harry Soper of New York Conducting Orchestra Playing Here Mentions Classics in the Programme

FOSTERS MUSICAL TASTE

The audience that heard the Birth of a Nation orchestra last night would probably be surprised to-day to learn that this was its first work as an organization. Following the three weeks' engagement in Toronto which concluded on Saturday night the orchestra that played for those pictures started this week on a west ern tour, while Mr. Harry Soper of New York City was placed in charge of a new orchestra, accompanying the pictures which are now booked for Eastern Canada. And the smooth area of last nights performance speaks volumes for the ability of Mr Soper and the musicians under his baton. The leader and some of the members have had previous experience with Joseph Carl Breil's ugly, old accompaniment to David Griffith's first big film, but this fact in no way detracts from the musicianship evidenced in the first appearance of this orchestra. A week hence the co-ordination of leader and orchestra should be even more pronounced and effective when they have come to know each other better.

The wonderful success of "The Birth of a Nation" is due to a large extent to Mr. Breil's music, and like wise to the fact that Mr. Griffith himself an accomplished musician, recognized the effect of harmonium, the varying sentiment of the picture with appropriate music. Mr. Breil composed the introduction, the Perfect Song theme, and other parts of the music, and enhanced his original work by an excellent choice of selections from folk songs, old favourite and standard overtures. The Peer Gynt suite, Weber's "Freischutz," Tschaikowsky's "1812 Overture," Wagner's Ride of the Valkyrie, and other classics were drawn from for the potpourri providing a test of an audience's musical knowledge. The pretty starin in the old song "In the Gloaming" and another is an old negro melody which will be noted in the Jungle scene where Miss Stone has strums a banjo.

Another feature of the music are the different strains which constantly return with the various characters. For instance there is a striking negro effect played with every appearance of the mulatto Lynch and the blacks, the Perfect Song is the strain for Bob Cameron and his sweetheart, there is another distinctive passage for Stoneman, and so on. Careful attention to the music will emphasize this feature to the audience.

A word regarding Mr. Soper, who by the way is a real, regular fellow. His musical education commenced in is eighth year and at seventeen he was on the road. Now at 28 he shows all the evidences of capable leadership, and is big enough to give full credit to the members of his orchestra. It is his opinion that the average audience appreciates standard music, and that the Birth of a Nation excites the public's taste in that direction.

candidates receiving the highest votes were elected.

South Vancouver.

Richmond.

New Westminster.

Prohibition, yes, 1,062; no, 845.

Sloan, Liberal, 1,012. Planta, Conservative, 340. Skinner, Socialist, 222.

Small outlying polls up country give a decisive vote on prohibition, although Jaffray, a mining town, carried it. Suffrage is trailing. The party political vote is close.

Rossland.

Hon. Lorne Campbell, Minister of Mines, is 100 votes behind his opponent in Rossland City, with only two comparatively small polls to be heard from.

Grand Forks.

Hon. E. E. Miller, one of Premier Bowser's new Ministers, has lost by a substantial majority.

Returns from Skeena, where Hon. Wm. Manson, the new Minister of Agriculture, is candidate, indicate he, too, is among the fallen.

Conservative Many Years.

Until the year 1903 the Government of British Columbia was supposedly non-political. In that year Hon. J. H. Turner became Premier, and the Administration became nominally Conservative. For a few months in 1900 "Fighting Joe" Martin was Premier, with the only Liberal Government British Columbia ever knew. Then Col. Edward G. Prior, who was really a Conservative, attempted to carry on a non-party Government for a few months, but was finally displaced in June, 1903, by Mr. (now Sir) Richard McBride. McBride held sway until last year, when he resigned the Premiership to accept the Agency-General of the Province in London, England. He was succeeded by Hon. W. J. Bowser, formerly Attorney-General.

At the last general election in 1912 the Government secured a sweeping victory in a Legislature of forty-two members. The Conservatives elected forty, the Socialist, two, and the Liberals none.

presentative of the Ford Car Motor Co. of Canada, was also on the ground, meeting friends and taking a lively interest in the Ford exhibit.

One of the cardinal points which the Ford designers keep constantly in mind is to continue the Ford as a car that is easy to drive; in fact, a car that almost drives itself. The control mechanism works easily and without effort. There is no necessity to stretch and strain the arms or body in operating the car. The brake and clutch pedals are just right, providing greater leverage and bringing about a consequent ease in operation. There are various other ways in which the comfort and convenience of passengers has been anticipated, all with the idea in view of making possible a total relaxation on the part of the occupants, and rendering the act of driving almost automatic.

The Ford car must be seen a favourite at the Fair, judg ng by the interest it has created. Suffice it to say it is safe to predict that the new 1917 Ford is destined to please many new customers before the snow flies.

BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY'S THOUGHTFUL DONATION

The Directors of the Peterborough Industrial, as well as thousands of visitors to the Fair grounds are indebted to the Bell Telephone Company for their very thoughtful contribution was a practical evidence of Though the courtesy of the officials of the Peterborough branch office, a very convenient public exchange was installed on the grounds, alongside the Secretary's office. This contribution was a practical evidence of the enterprise of the Bell Telephone Company, and is also evidence of the business appreciation of the company for anything calculated to promote the city's advancement.

Mr. G. O. Cameron, the obliging local manager, was personally in charge of the exchange, which was fitted up with instruments and all the necessary attachments for local calls. The efficiency in hearing and speaking was remarked by all. Good prompt service was maintained at all hours and central was never very far away when called in an emergency.

The interior of the exchange was tastefully furnished, and decorated seating accomodation was provided for talking, as well as waiting patrons, so that if the line was busy it was a pleasure to wait for a minute.

This practical indication of the Bell Telephone Company will no doubt have the effect of an object lesson to many who have no telephones. It was a courtesy, too, free to all—no charge being made for any city calls. The manner in which this service was appreciated was plainly evident during both day and evening sessions of the Fair.

RICHARD HALL AND SON

The firm of Richard Hall & Son took up one-fourth of the entire space in the main building with an attractive exhibit of rugs, home furnishings and samples of upholstering. This exhibit was skillfully arranged and naturally was the cynosure of all feminine eyes. The ceiling and floor of the exhibit had been especially prepared for the setting. Exquisite examples of imported Anglo-Persian Wilton rugs accentuated the display and was the leading feature of the exhibit.

The featuring of something different and exclusive is one of the "ruling passions" of the Richard Hall and Son store. Especially is this to be seen in the home furnishing department, where the ingenuity of the Manager is strongly accentuated. The attention that has been paid to new lines and upholstering has been productive of increased sales in these lines, and is continuing along lines which is increasing from year to year in this department.

Another feature is being done in the recovering of old furniture with bright cretonnes and chintz patterns were shown. Each piece of furniture with differently patterned designs, presenting a pleasing contrast-ion that could be made to harmonize with any room in the home.

Richard Hall and Son have specialising in suggestions for home furnishings and effects in drapings. If a lady comes in and says she wants to do up a certain room or do up a whole house, a member of the staff, usually the manager, visits her house in order to see what the surroundings are, the furniture, the paper, the lighting of the rooms, and so forth. He will then draw up a plan for her showing the style and colours she should use for this room and that one; will suggest a carpet to tone in with the wall paper or he new drapery, or wall-paper to match the carpet which she does not intend to renew. If she has a corner she wishes fitted up a stock will be made and the same way with a window. He will then take her through the department in the store and show her various patterns and styles and shades, and suggest those that would fit the various rooms. They would then go over with the drapery to the rug section and match up a rug suitable for the drapery. In this way the customer knows exactly what the room will look like and the cost. Contracts are usually made without delay. It takes experience and considerable artistic ability and this firm has developed experience to supply furnishings of taste and distinction.

PETERBOROUGH HARDWARE COMPANY'S CREDITABLE DISPLAY

To big crowds of visitors the Peterborough Hardware Company, wholesale and retail hardware merchants, 368 George street, put up an effective exhibit, consisting chiefly of Guernsey, Oxford Steel Ranges and other types of these stoves for which they have been appointed local agents for this city. There was also shown and demonstrated the interesting Chi-Namel graining process of the Ohio Varnish Company of Cleveland. The exhibit of the Guernsey stoves and range was most complete, showing a wide selection of their famous makes, both in steel and cast iron. The "Chancellor" combination range for coal, wood, and gas, especially came in for the greatest attention, its "economizer" feature demonstrating how the fuel bill can be cut down. Guernsey stoves were made 70 years ago and with those years of experience it is safe to say that there is nothing about stoves the Guernsey people do not know.

Since the addition of this new Guernsey stove department, the Peterborough Hardware Company, with many other lines, the firm have been amply repaid for the wisdom of their venture. It was heard from a representative of the firm that these stoves have met with speedy demand since introduced by them. Some of the inducements offered buyers is the unusually close prices the various Guernsey stoves and ranges are sold at. In addition the freights and all delivery charges are paid on all stoves sent out, and repairs can be had here at any time.

Mr. Rocamora, a representative from the Guernsey Foundry lucidly explained the various important features of these stoves.

The Chi-Namel graining process, which the Peterborough Hardware Company have given so much attention to, was fully explained and demonstrated by an expert from Toronto, Mr. E. Trosinco, representing the Ohio Varnish Company. The transforming effect of the Chi-Namel upon floors, chairs, doors, etc., was well shown. The color is governed by the shade of the varnish and varies from light oak to dark oak, while mahogany or cherry or any other natural wood-color can be as easily produced. The outfit for the work is not by any means expensive and includes, stippling brush, stencil grainers and material for graining.

"The Birth Of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" can apparently assing around the theatre circuit any old time without losing much of its original attractive appeal. It played to a large crowd at The Grand last night and should do equally well to-night. The Griffth picture came here from Toronto, where it was on through a stretch of three weeks, drawing capacity crowds every day. It has already been shown 110 times in Toronto, the nearest approach to this record being "The Bonnie Briar Bush," which played 46 times.

If you haven't seen "The Birth of a Nation," don't postpone your visit beyond to-night. The picture alone is worth the price of admission, and the same may be said of the incidental music. After a long arid season musically speaking, "The Birth of a Nation" orchestra is as welcome as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. As one gentleman remarked in the lobby of The Grand last night. "I haven't missed one performance of "The Birth of a Nation" yet, and I'm coming back to-morrow night." That is a characteristic of this feature film, it doesn't satiate or cloy the interest.

COST ONE DOLLAR TO BE FOUND SICK

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., Sept. 15.—A practical physician in Central Ontario has been found guilty, according to a statement by the assistant director of medical services, of rendering false health certificates to soldiers who desire to prolong their leave. For a dollar or two he would give a soldier a certificate for a few days because of an imaginary ailment.

A soldier was despatched to the doctor after being examined by two medical men in camp and found in perfect health. He paid a dollar to the physician and was given a certificate declaring him unfit for work for several days, he was suffering from tonsilitis.

On return to camp he was again examined and found to be in good health. The matter has been reported to the Council of Physicians and Surgeons.

Troops Will Not Be Billeted

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—There will be no billeting of troops in small Canadian cities and towns this winter. The experience of the Militia Department last winter with regard to billeting in small detachments throughout the country was not such as to encourage the continuance of the practice, but a concentration of large bodies of troops at important centres will be adopted.

New Uniforms For the Firemen

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council met yesterday afternoon for the purpose of inspecting the annual issue of the new uniforms for the firemen. The Committee visited the Central Fire Station and the members expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied with the work. The contract was put through by Mr. George Ball. Today the men, attired in the new uniforms, appeared for the first time in the parade to the Fair Grounds.

MISS E. G. GORDON.

Miss Enid Grace Gordon is the Toronto member of the quartet of women to enter Osgoode Hall this year to begin their first year at law. Miss Gordon is the daughter of Mr. J. W. Gordon, 412 Markham street, Toronto, a retired barrister. She is a former student of Victoria College and will spend this year in the office of her brother, G. N. Gordon, city solicitor of Peterborough. In answer to the question, "Why are you going to take up law?" Miss Gordon says: "It is a wonderful profession. It seems so fine that it is at last open to women, that I couldn't resist the opportunity to take it up."

Baronetcy For H. V. Meredith

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—In connection with his approaching departure the Duke of Connaught has recommended a Baronetcy for H. V. Meredith of the Bank of Montreal. Sir Vincent Meredith is a member of a London Ont., family of that name. Col. A. P. Sherwood will also be made a knight. Sir Percy Sherwood is chief commissioner of the Dominion Police.

An inventor has combined a phonograph and an electric table lamp, the sound waves being directed against the shade for distribution.

Revised Returns of the Elections

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

VANCOUVER, Sept. 15. — Revised returns of yesterday's voting in the Provincial election indicates that out of forty-seven seats in the Legislature the Liberals have at least forty, and the Vancouver Sun (Liberal), claims forty-three. There are three seats, however, in which the results are rather indefinite, and with the soldiers' vote not yet counted, might turn over into the Conservative column. Slocan constituency, to date, is a tie, but will probably go Liberal. There seems no doubt that prohibition and woman's suffrage are both carried beyond a chance of the soldiers' vote upsetting it. It is understood that the Bowser government's resignation is in the hands of the Lieutenant-Governor, and the Liberal leader will be called on to form a new government to-day.

Vancouver, Sept. 15.—The majority for prohibition was six thousand, and for Women's Suffrage, seven thousand.

BANK BILLS STOLEN MANY YEARS AGO BEGIN TO APPEAR

Buffalo, N.Y., September 15. — In the early nineties several thousand dollars worth of unsigned ten-dollar notes of the Consolidated Bank of Montreal, were stolen and never recovered, and some two years afterwards the bank suspended business. All the notes excepting the stolen tens were redeemed at their face value at all the Canadian banks up to 1894.

In the past two days two of the stolen tens have been presented to Buffalo business men. One was accepted to-day and sent to the Sterling Bank at Fort Erie, Ont., to learn its value. Manager Alcock to-day replied that it was valueless, the signature on the note being forged. The note was sent to the Sterling Bank and afterwards to the Canadian Department of Finance.

Medical Men of The City Will Not Relieve Drought

Physicians Will Not Give Prescriptions For Liquor in Any Shape or Form Unless to Patients Actually Under Their Care—Reduction in Number of License Inspectors

THE DROUGHT

The medical men of Peterborough wish it explicitly understood that they will not give prescriptions for liquor in any shape or form, or narcotics unless to patients actually under their care, since any one sufficiently ill to require a stimulant is or should be under the care of a physician.

This in brief expresses the attitude of the medical men of this city. The men who figured on making a fortune out of a pet snake at so much per bite will have to peddle their wares elsewhere. The medical men do not welcome the prospect of becoming tangled up in the new liquor legislation so they cannot be looked upon to relieve the drought that will set in to-morrow commencing at seven o'clock.

License Inspectors.

The new legislation will also mean a big reduction in the number of license inspectors.

Many license inspectors who drew a salary of six or seven hundred dollars per year from the Government in the past, are about to find other jobs. Under the old license system there were approximately 110 inspectors and, the Ontario License Board has recommended that this number be cut in half. New inspectors will receive salaries on a scale from $1,000 to $1,800.

The License Board, it is understood, has made its recommendations to the Cabinet, but there are a few appointments to be decided and announcement may not be made for a day or two.

The Ontario Temperance Act provided that there should be one inspector to each county, except where there was a city, and then one could be appointed for the city and one for the remainder of the county. The present number of inspectors runs about the same as the number of constituencies.

The work of the new inspectors will, in addition to the inspection and regulation of standard hotels, include the squelching of illegal sales of liquor and the unearthing of blind pigs. They must devote all their time to the work. The board will increase its staff of private police and some of them may be given the legal authority of constables.

MR. A. L. AMYS WILL REMOVE TO PETERBORO'

PRESTON, Sept. 15.—The resignation of Mr. A. L. Amys as manager of the Preston branch of the Bank of Toronto took effect on Wednesday and Mr. T. F. Little, for five years manager of the branch at Milton, took charge Mr. Amys, was manager of the branch for the past ten years, and had the satisfaction of seeing the business grow from meagre proportions to that of a large banking business, largely due to his personal efforts and also the natural growth of the town. Previous to his coming to Preston, he had been associated with the Toronto Bank for seventeen years, making a total of twenty-seven years' service. He was manager of the branches at Petroleo, Port Hope, Omemee and other Ontario towns.

In business he was resolute, yet fair to all customers of the bank, and gentlemanly in his manner of transacting business. As a citizen Mr. Amys always took a deep interest in municipal matters and kept himself well posted in the affairs of the town, or a number of years he performed the duties of Secretary of the Board of Trade in a most satisfactory manner.

He will remain a citizen of Preston until the end of the month, when he and Mrs. Amys will return to Peterborough, his old home town, to live free from the strenuous duties of bank life and engage in some outdoor pursuits more conducive to good health. The citizens will regret much to lose Mr. and Mrs. Amys, as they have endeared themselves to a large circle of friends, who are loath to part with them.

Mr. Amys is a brother of Dr. C. H. Amys of this city.

TRAIN ROBBERS CONFESS CRIME

Got Over $100,000 in Unsigned Bills

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 14. — Charles Jefferson Harrison, of San Antonio, Texas, made a full confession of the train robbery with which he was charged in the United States court here before Judge Dayton. Sentence of 12 years imprisonment in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., was immediately imposed.

The crime was the robbery of a Baltimore and Ohio train near Central station, W. Va., on October 8th, 1915. With Harrison was implicated Eugene Dies, who will be placed on trial next, and H. Grady Webb, who never has been arrested.

The robbers took from the express car of the train more than a hundred thousand dollars in unsigned bills, much of which has been recovered.

The Chilean Government has appointed a commission to make a study of the water power available for hydro-electric development.

MILITARY NEWS

The Canadians.

Who were the boys when the day looked black
Hung on to their trenches and broke the foe's back,
With a shot for a shot and a crack for a crack,
Gallant Canadians.

Who were the men of Ypres Lord French praised up,
Who "saved the situation" and "smashed the Hun Kruppe.
And at the end of the battle were still "thumbs up?"
Bravo Canadians.

Who are the boys who are fond of the girls,"
True to their Empire and true to their pals,
And who made the Prussians scent like hell?
Hot stuff Canadians.

Who are the "fighting blood" boys on the hill,
Training to "get fit" to lick Kaiser Bill?
Who are the boys when hit—hit to kill?
"Some" fighters—The Canadians.

Then cherish the "memory of the boys gone west"
And honour the men who stood the "great test"
At Ypres, Festubert, Givenchy, Plug-street and the rest, Honour the Canadians.

Then a rousing yell for the boys of the first,
Second, third, fourth contingent, too,
They all pull together with a "cheer boys cheer,"
Nought shall conquer the Red, White and Blue.

INSANITY WILL BE DEFENCE PLEA TO SANE MURDERER

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—"The man is in a state bordering on lunacy and has always been considered a weak-minded man."

Such was the statement of Mr. Napoleon Champagne, counsel for Alphonse Barre, committed for trial on a charge of wife murder, who last night arrived home after the preliminary hearing at Casselman. On the other hand some neighbours say he was normal.

According to counsel for the accused, people of the farming district of Rose Corner and neighbours, and those who have known the accused for years, have believed him a weak-minded man, and Mr. Champagne says that trouble over the enlistment of his son had caused worry and mental disorder in his client.

The trial of Barre will be held at L'Original about November 1st, and it is understood that the defence is prepared to admit that Barre did the shooting and base its case on the mental condition of the prisoner.

The revolver with which the shooting was done, and which the eldest daughter of the accused swears she saw him holding in his hand, was gotten by the authorities yesterday, having been in the possession of a farmer, said to have been a relative of the accused, living near Rose Corner.

Made No Statement.

Denial to the statement that the accused had not been warned that anything he said would be used against him, is made by Village Constable E. Bissonette, who says that Barre after being taken into custody did not make any kind of a statement.

Stories of the troubles between man and wife differ largely, the sisters-in-law of the accused having stated that Barre was the cause of the trouble in the house and did not treat his wife well. Mr. Champagne, on the other hand, says that the mother was the cause of the trouble and says that since her son enlisted, that she had blamed the father's action for driving him away from home and she wanted to go and bring him home again.

Think it Irrational.

The actions of Barre after having fired the shots, and walking two miles to St. Isadore and pulling a church bell and then returning home and turning himself over to the authorities, is referred to by some as constituting an unusual act for a rational man.

Then again the story of one of the sisters-in-law that Barre after putting three shots at least into his wife went out to a store, and returned and fired another shot into the body lends another unusual feature to the affair.

Partial corroboration for the story of the sister-in-law, is included in the evidence of Mr. T. Leduc who lives about one and one-quarter acres from the Barre homestead.

Mr. Leduc's testimony on this point was that about fifteen minutes after five o'clock on Thursday morning he saw Barre going toward the store.

FLAME SQUIRTERS ON FOE BALLOONS

Germans Have New Device for Protecting "Eyes of the Army."

LONDON, Sept. 15.—A French correspondent on the west front, referring to the anchored observation balloons, which are the "eyes of the German army," says the Germans have adopted a new means of defending these from the British aeroplanes, which already have downed several of them. This defence is a gun below the balloon which emits high reaching flames to scorch the wings of an aeroplane coming too close.

PREDICTS RISE IN WHEAT

Corner in October Grain, Says Winnipeg Operator.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 14. — "Wheat will touch the $1.75 mark within six weeks," said a prominent operator this morning.

"Why?"

"Because there is a corner here in October wheat and not enough wheat in sight for contracts. The season is late and every rain makes it more difficult to get the grain required. The farmers are in good shape and not anxious to sell. Every speculator is short of wheat—the big fellows have it."

Heroic Verdun Town Honoured by King

French Army Receives Decoration With Pride, Says President Poincare.

LONDON, Sept. 15. — President Poincare telegraphed King George in reference to his award of the Military Cross to the town of Verdun:

"The French army has received with pride this high testimony of esteem given by the august Sovereign of a great friendly allied country."

The King in reply said:

"It was a real pleasure for me to award the Military Cross to the heroic town of Verdun, whose name ever shall evoke recollection of victory in her glorious resistance against the stubborn and reiterated attacks of the common enemy."

The city of Verdun has been decorated by Premier Poincare with the Russian St. George's Cross, the British Military Cross, the Italian and Serbian gold medals for valor, the Belgian Cross of Leopold, the Montenegrin gold medal, given by rulers of the countries named, and the French Legion of Honor and War Cross.

The Canadian Troops Take Part In The Recent Fighting

MARTINPUICH HAS BEEN CAPTURED BY THE BRITISH

German Line Crumbles Before British Assault Martinpuich Captured

Canadian Troops Reported to Have Advanced on a Front of Fifteen Hundred Yards—British Army is Confident—Could Strike on 100 Mile Front With Force Equal To That Exerted on the Somme Front

GREAT NUMBERS OF TROOPS

LONDON, September 16.—Martinpuich has been taken by the British. The German line crumbled before the British assault. A despatch says that the Canadian troops secured and are holding an advance of fifteen hundred yards, in the recent fierce fight at close quarters. Certain battalions suffered severely. Lord Brooke, commanding the Tenth Brigade, Canadian Infantry, has been wounded at the Somme.

THE BRITISH ARMIES.

LONDON, September 16. — In a cable from British Headquarters in France, under date of September 12, Arno Dosch-Fleurot, a staff correspondent, says:

The most impressive thing about the big new British army on the Somme is the universal belief that nothing can stop it from driving the Germans completely out of France.

Each new division coming up to the trenches passes over miles of captured German trenches before reaching the battle line. Long before they are under shell-fire they are already on ground held by the Germans two months ago.

The inspiring effect of this is such that the fresh troops can hardly be held back in reserve, but want to push on in emulation of the troops already gone before. I have asked many soldiers of all ranks if they want to quit.

EAGER TO PUSH ON.

"What, quit when we have them out of the deep redoubts and on the move? Never We will not quit while there is a German soldier on French soil. Now they are steadily losing something every day. One of these days we shall have them on the run."

If there is anything in numbers, equipment, and determination, the British will succeed. When I asked about peace, they said what every one says in France:

"Time enough to talk about peace when the Germans are back in Germany."

GREAT NUMBERS OF TROOPS.

I believe Great Britain has enough troops in France to advance on the whole 100-mile front as much as on the Somme. Von Wiegand said in a cable that he had seen the German reserves in France, and was greatly impressed. I have seen the British reserves in France, and whatever the Germans may be, the British are vastly superior.

Von Wiegand also said the Germans jealously guarded theirs. The British do not. They have so many they do not care who sees them. They could hardly hide them if they wanted to. I saw a small village grown into one of the biggest cities in France, all under tents. Another was nearly as big.

To get even a glimpse of the British military organization in France took four hard days of motoring. Everywhere were British soldiers and British bases. Touching the firing line at several points between Loos and the Somme, a distance of ninety miles, I found the British better off everywhere in ammunition and aircraft. The British are firing five shells to the Germans' one, except on the Somme.

GERMANS ART HANDICAPPED.

Here on the Somme the Germans are unlimited, and they are using enormous contact shells, but they cannot gauge their fire because the aircraft dare not go up to watch. A German observation balloon has just tried to go up, but was frightened down by a fleet of British aeroplanes. Meanwhile I can count eight British observation balloons that have been up all afternoon. The Germans are obviously handicapped seriously in the air.

INEXPENSIVE IN LIVES.

Though the new methods of trench fighting are more deadly than formerly, the small gains from day to day made by the British on the Somme are astonishingly inexpensive in lives. Even under steady drum-fire British troops are advancing on new German trenches every day without serious loss. It is frequently less expensive to go on.

The Germans cannot prevent them from making sorties anywhere, and from this side of the line it looks as if the Germans, in spite of their undeniable courage, were weakening before the steady British assaults. The French at Verdun, under a similar attack, never gave up trenches as the Germans do.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

Cattle Market.

Prices appear to be again on the up-grade in the Toronto market, this week's trading showing a substantial advance of 25 cents or more over last week for the best butcher steers or heifers. While the general tone of the market has been firmer, the improvement was seen most in the best grades of cattle, the poorer grades meeting a slower demand and not more than holding their own. Choice heavy steers sold up to $9.10, and the demand was good for this grade of prime beef cattle. A good class of medium-weight butcher steers and heifers was in good demand all through the week. The advent of cooler weather has helped not a little in giving a steadier and firmer tone to the market all round.

After a prolonged period of comparative inactivity in the stocker and feeder trade there were signs this week of a better enquiry for good stockers. One or two of the best known among the larger buyers of cattle for winter feeding were present in the market on several occasions during the week "taking a look around," but evidently with a view to early operations. It was remarked that the enquiry for stockers did not come from the Ontario farmer, but was again from buyers for Michigan and other States. Surprise is expressed that in view of high prices likely to prevail for some time to come for finished cattle that our own farmers are not going more extensively into the stock-raising and feeding industry.

Following the general trend of the market, the demand for small stock has been good and active all week, and sheep and lambs have shown advances from 25c. to 50c. Choice veal calves have also shown considerable strength.

ONE GERMAN TOWN HAS FIVE THOUSAND WIDOWS

Besides This There Are the Unmarried Men Who Have Fallen---Letters Found on Prisoners Reveal Losses of Enemy---Soldiers Want Peace---Anxiously Inquire As to What Progress is Being Made.

NO LONGER TALK VICTORY

(By Philip Gibbs.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, September 16.—It is extraordinarily difficult to know whether all the British shell fire and all the dead have yet begun to shake the confidence of the Germans in the strength of their war machine. Some of the officers who have come in as prisoners still keep their pride. They have seen the losses inflicted on them in and behind their lines, but say: "You can't beat us. We can't be beaten."

NO LONGER TALK VICTORY.

That is different from the old phrase: "We're winning. Victory is certain for Germany." And it is a long way from the acknowledgment of defeat or possible defeat. There are times when the pessimists among us are tempted to think that the Germans have mysterious reserves of strength from which they can heal their wounds, and that the success gained is only local, and has not yet injured the German war machine in any vital part or struck a blow which has reached to the heart of the German people.

LETTERS TELL THE TRUTH.

The cure for such pessimist is found in letters captured in the German dugouts and on the German prisoners. They draw the veil aside and tell the naked truth. Through all these letters, written by men whose sons are fighting or dead, and by comrades-in-arms, not hiding their thoughts from each other, there is a cry against the bloodshed and the misery of this war and for peace at all costs.

"By now the town of Offenbach has 5,000 widows, and besides that there are the unmarried men who have fallen."

"Our company lost all its officers and ten men, but that is the same with every company and every regiment on the Somme. I, alas, could not get the much-desired wound to send me home."

RIOTS IN HAMBURG.

There have been riots in Hamburg and other places, according to letters found in the trenches, and in the spirit of civilian Germany, there is rising anger against those who made the war and caused all this misery and who keep it lasting for political and dynastic reasons. The German Socialists, it seems, are at last beginning to find their voices again, if one may judge from such letters as the following, written by an educated hand:

"You ask how far the peace movement has advanced.

"It is impossible to say anything definite, but we Socialists are now going to present the imperial chancellor a great peace memorial, containing the signatures of those citizens who want a speedy peace without annexation, and without violence to other nations. These will put their names on the lists, and those lists will be collected from the whole empire and handed to the chancellar. God grant that their names may be put down in millions, that the Government may see that the great mass of the people want an early peace.

"One may hope this accursed murdering of people may come to an end soon, but, unfortunately, the obstinate ones have no wish for peace. They are working in all countries against it, working with all their power, for the international capitalists can do no better business than they are doing now, and their purses appear not full yet.

"With us the distress gets greater from day to day and already many poor people are suffering from under-feeding. We will, however, hope and act, for surely the good sense of the peoples may conquer in the end."

GERMANS SUPPLIED THE TRANSPORT

Ambulance Attendants Were Tortured and Then Murdered.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Arthur Ransom, telegraphing to the Daily News from Bucharest, says:

"The Roumanians, declaring war, crossed the Carpathians in a single night. Before the second night they reached positions for which they had calculated to fight. The Germans themselves supplied the mobolization waggons, for they had sent waggons to Roumania to fetch grain. These returned laden with Roumanian soldiers.

"We passed many troop trains and waggons from Essen and Bremen and other German towns. The further advance into Transylvania depends largely upon the events on the southern front. The fall of Turkukai is of no great importance. Its defence by a handful of troops against the heaviest odds of artillery is a glorious page in the history of the Roumanian army.

"When the troops retired from the outer fortifications, they found Bulgarian troops in the town, who tortured and murdered unarmed ambulance attendants. The town was finally taken. The Bulgarians massacred the soldiers and inhabitants alike.

"All Germans in Bucharest have been interned at the Grand Hotel. All motors and horses have been requisitioned."

COBOURG'S NEW INTAKE.

COBOURG, Sept. 15.—The Russell Construction Company of Toronto is making good progress on the 900-foot intake pipe being installed for the waterworks here. Already one course has been blasted in the rock trench to the end of the intake. It is expected that the drill work will finish the second course of rock in the trench before bad weather sets in.

FROST IN THE WEST.

But It Comes Too Late to Damage Wheat.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 15. — Light frosts visited many points in Alberta Wednesday night, and as much as eight degrees was recorded in a number of Saskatchewan districts. Russell, with two degrees, was the only point in Manitoba to report frost. But a cold driving rain put a stop to harvesting operations, and there were prospects of a sharp frost last night.

The crop, however, is everywhere beyond frost damage, practically all the wheat being now safe in stack or stook.

French Musicians Suffer Greatly From Prolongation of War

PARIS, Aug. 20.—French musicians — instrumentalists, concert singers and teachers, excepting those who have gone to America — are among the greatest sufferers from the prolongation of the war. Those who had savings had eaten them up in two years waiting for the revival of social life and concert and soiree engagements, while to-day that revival seems to be as far off as it did a year ago.

Some musicians have had engagements, such as opera singers and cafe concert artists. Although they have suffered less than those who have had nothing to do, they have felt the situation acutely. One singer, who held title roles at the opera and who received about 600f ($120) a night before the war, now gets 10f ($2). There are also teachers who have been able to obtain pupils, but with a reduction of from fifty to seventy-five per cent. in prices. There are many others who have not been able to maintain their classes at all. They, with the instrumental artists out of employment, are in the worst position, for a teacher is obliged to keep up appearances, generally pays a pretty good rental and has a rather expensive household.

"You would be surprised," said an American musician in Paris, "if you knew the names of some great artists that I could cite who are in the persons from all over the world, is prolonged idleness. One of them, a woman who has been applauded by persons fro mal lover the world, is living on almost nothing, doing her washing and cleaning her own apartment. Another is selling off his rare furniture, piece by piece, though before the war he posed as a man of considerable means. The rare engagements that such artists now get is only a drop in the bucket, for some of them had incomes of from 20,000 francs ($4,000) upward before the war, lived accordingly, and now have nothing.

The musician in greatest distress in Paris is not the poorly clad and worn-faced street singer or musician who goes the round of the Paris courtyards. To-day the latter are the aristocrats of the profession. One of these playing in the courtyard, with a baby lying in her violin box, looking much worn, attracted the attention of charitable persons who investigated her case and found that she had in her year taken the first prize at the conservatory. Having located her, these persons offered her such as she required, but she made no reply. The inference was that her courtyard work brought her more than these charitable persons offered.

The number of musicians who have smothered their pride and gone into the street is very limited, however. Most of them are in dire straits in spite of their comfortable appearance in public, and some of them are nearly starving. Their relief is a most delicate and difficult matter, as few of them are willing to expose their needs. A good deal has been done in this direction, however, by a society of musicians, French and American, called "L'Aide Affectueuse aux Musiciens," who through their personal acquaintance with their fellow artists find it easier than most charitable organizations to extend a fraternal hand. As the year goes by, however, with a constant multiplication of charitable committees of different sorts and repeated demands upon charitable persons for funds, there is less spontaneous and generous response for the relief of such poverty as this.

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

HATTIE WARREN

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for "Fruit-a-tives" and would never be without them".

"The Waters of the Sea"

After many dreams and sweet memories, was led by fancy back to the home of childhood, a pretty spot in Ulster, in the County of Down, Ireland:

Though many years had passed and gone,
When e'er I'd be alone,
Sweet recollections came to me
Of a place I once called home;
So I tossed the foaming billows
And ploughed the raging deep,
Crossed again to that old land,
Where my forefathers sleep.
My mind went back to childhood,
In dreams I'd often be,
In that little Isle surrounded
By the waters of the sea.

Once more I saw those hedges
And roadways all in bloom;
It was an ideal morning,
Being in the month of June.
There were autos there and Char-a-banc
To drive me near and far;
Of course my fancy led me
To the dear old jaunting car.
No more imaginations;
Things were real then to me,
In that little Isle surrounded
By the waters of the sea.

My heart beat high and faster
As I rode along so light,
The well remembered landscapes
Were coming into sight.
That little rural school-house;
Ah, me, that pretty scene,
It was covered o'er with ivy,
With its rich, dark shades of green.
No more dream nor fancy,
The original, it must be,
In that little Isle surrounded
By the waters of the sea.

And still, a far more sacred spot
Awaited on before,
It was a little graveyard,
Laid close upon the shore.
For many years my kindred there
Lay sleeping side by side,
In a lonely, lovely, quiet spot,
Down by the ebbing tide.
I felt a shade of sadness,
Though as happy as could be,
In that little Isle surrounded
By the waters of the sea.

I gently opened up the gate,
And stood before the stone;
Forty years had done its work,
The carving barely shone.
My eyes began to moisten,
The tears, they fell like rain,
As I traced the time-worn letters,
They spelled my very name.
It was joy and sorrow mingled,
Wherever I would be,
In that little Isle surrounded
By the waters of the sea.

The sun was shining overhead,
The roses there were fair;
Still, I was not satisfied,
For long I lingered there.
To gaze upon that earthly mound,
For years had covered him
Whose hand I'd watched,
Bring forth sweet strains
From his old violin.
I have often heard it quiver,
Standing by his knee,
In that little Isle surrounded
By the waters of the sea.

Another gate is open, leads
To a land more fair.
There will be no moistened eyelids
Nor aged tombstones there.
For the King has won the victory
O'er this grim death and sin,
And he asks us guilty sinners
To believe, and enter in.
It's there I'll meet my kindred,
With the greatest King there be,
Far, far above that little isle,
O'er the waters of the sea.

From Pepy's Diary of the Future

BY A CANADIAN OVERSEAS

1946 January 1.—The thirty-second year of the great war, and men so customed to it now that many afraid of mighty dislocation if peace should ever come. My friend Tom Dope doth say it would ruin him, he having been a brewer before the war, the brewery now turned into a factory for poison gas, and all his work people now forgotten how to make beer. Whereupon Parry, a pert fellow who dined with us, said that if his memory of Dope's ale served him, no change of the present brew will be needed. Whereat high wards and much coolness. But strange to think of many of great estate who will be ruined by peace; and last week Oliver Grote, the millionaire, maker of luminous wrist-watches, did cut his throat at but a rumour of it. Also to-day did talk with my tailor, who hath a doletul tale that scarce any cutters now left, and the feareth that when our gallant men come home, and there be monstrous ordering of civil clothes, they will have to rig themselves in woman's habits. For, in sooth, the women's dressmakers are more multiplied than ever. But my tailor fears the present fashion in women's skirts will be too short for men, the taste of the Highland regiments. And so, how to dress all our men Heaven knows.

February 18.—A tale flying about the town to-day that Emperor Francis Joseph hath at last died, and that, none willing to accept the Austrian crown—the archduke, his heir, being least willing of all—it lieth begging. Sad to think of this, even of enemies, remembering how great and puissant a kingdom this once was, and now but the size of Yorkshire. A rumor also that the Kaiser hath become insane from too much travel and did last week order the Imperial railway train to start for the east and the west fronts at the same moment, and did himself shoot the engine-drivers, and thereafter was with difficulty withheld from chopping himself in halves so that he could carry out his purpose. Whereon the Crown Prince sent for in hot haste from before Verdun. And our pessimists here say that this be a blow to Joffre.

March 3.—The papers now are full of talk upon the government to take action to control food prices, which be monstrous now past all belief. This morning a letter published from a working man, earning only 15 pound weekly in the hot air furnaces of one of our airship factories, demanding how he can exist with bacon at 60 shillings a pound, butter the same price, loaves 9 shilling each, potatoes one shilling the whole fruit, and sugar 3 shilling per carat, mutton 5 shilling, the apothecaries scruple, and milk one shilling per drachm.

Strange that while we have command of the seas, food should ever ride in cost, and marvellous the patience of the people. But when I did cry out the other day to see that certain millers had made a year's profit of half a million, my friend Hughes, who hath office under the government as some sort of inspector of inspectors—of inspectors, did argue that the more profit that millers, shipowners and other patriots make, the better for the people, inasmuch as 70 per cent. returneth in taxes and is helping to pay for the war. From his argument these be in truth sad, hard times for millers and shipowners, and some of them have bought great country estates, wherein to retire and bear their sufferings in secret.

April 21.—My wife horrid angry in the morning, and vexed me to the blood, discovering a haberdasher's account in my pocket for two pairs of jessimy gloves, and fell to rating me. I did then put her to confusion by going into my library and bringing her the gloves in the haberdasher's box with my legend, written on it, "To my dear wife, from her faithful Sam", whereat she fell to weeping, poor wretch, and did entreat me to forgive her, promising henceforth to abate vile suspicion. And so, forgiving her, I to the office, grateful to providence, but broke into cold dew when suddenly I remembered that, in my haste I had not dryed the ink on the box. Home with my heart in my mouth in the evening and nothing said. So all well, and more careful in future.

May 19.—Great talk of a new move by the bishops, who do seem to have gained much domination during this war. Some men indeed do say that it is their Lordships intent to forbid all human diversions, except breathing and sleeping. The Bishop's new programme of "Publique Decorum" doth remind me of their first great rally, in the year of one war 1916, when they fell foul of musique halls, picture palaces, tea shoppes, taverns, restaurants, parks and gardens and publique walks and did fill us all with a panic that no place of amusement in London would be left open, saving the Geological Museum in Jermyn street, and even that only to those of ripe years.

June 5.—All the tow avery merry with a tale of a rich spinster of Bayswater, who hath patriotically engaged in letter-writing to a lonely soldier at the front. Many documents they exchanged, ever becoming kinder until she wrote to the lonely soldier that their letters to each other must cease unless there were mroe understanding (or else the lonely soldier wrote that his colonel had ordered that letters must end unless some assurance lay that his man's heart were not to be broken). So be it, howsoever, they became plighted, and the lonely soldier sent a ring made by himself from a Hun cartridge. And yesterday the lonely soldier came home on leave from his trench, and in a great flutter his bethrothed took cab to Waterloo to meet him and was greeted by a grisly veteran of seventy years. It doth appear that the man was already 38 when he was sent out to fight in the year of our war 1914.

August 4.—The anniversary of our entry upon the great war, kept solemnly in London, and many fine speeches, notably by Mr. Asquith, who is now grown an oldish man, but did rouse the house to excitement by his declaration that he had now no intention of ever sheathing the sword, so trusty a weapon hath it proved for postponing a general election. Many good articles on the war in the newspapers (the government waiving this day the paper embargo and allowing issues of sheets, full five inches square) and I did read with pleasure and hope, and find very well construed, the argument of our writer, that peace is assured this year, his contention being that there are now so many prisoners on all sides and so many British in Germany and so many Germans in Britain, that in fighting Germany we are fighting ourselves, and that this country is now Germany, and Germany is Britain, and that it were civil war and suicide to continue. And in truth there be rumours that our fleet and army be now manned mainly by Germans, and their fleet and army by Englishmen, who have been pressed into service. So Heaven grant this may prove the end of it.—(Copied from a London paper)—J.E.H. (Canadian Overseas.)

Why?

Because white lead and white zinc, mixed in these proportions, produce a paint that resists the elements better than that made by any other formula. Scientific tests and practical experience extending over many years absolutely prove this to be so, and that is why is made by this formula. It is pure paint in the truest sense of the word. A mixture of 10% white lead and 90% white zinc might be called "pure paint" but the expression would be misleading, because the compound would not fulfil all the requirements of a first-class exterior paint.

B-H "English" Paint is pure paint that works easily, penetrates deeply, spreads well, holds its color and lasts years longer than ordinary kinds.

Girls Who Neglect Rest Invite Broken Health

Eight Hours is Nature's Demand—10 p.m. to 6 a.m. Best Period —Vacation Spent in Nightly Dancing Means Easy Exhaustion Now

The summer is at an end and most of the city workers are back in town—hard at their tasks again. The great majority of them have had their two weeks' vacation out in the country by this time and have come back fresh and brown, feeling, for the most part, greatly rested and infinitely stronger than before their holidays.

You girls who hold business positions are probably back in the office now, facing the long winter's daily grind. If you have spent your vacation profitably you should be feeling fairly well and strong now. Of course, if you went to one of the big resorts and danced until late at night every evening of your holiday, you are probably exhausted by this time. However, the number of foolish girls who fritter away their holidays in useless good times is steadily decreasing year by year.

Working girls who depend on their earnings for their living, usually find after flirting that they come back too tired to do their work well and after a couple of such experiences they usually forswear similar vacations in the future. If you do belong to the number who have thus wasted their holiday resolve here and now to spend it differently in the future.

HEALTH GAINED IN HOLIDAY.

You girls who have been away in a camp or on a farm where you have lived out in the open air practically every minute of the two weeks, are now feeling the wonderful result of such holidays. But now you must strive to keep up the good work commenced by your vacation and build up a strong, healthy, constitution for yourselves.

So many girls come back to work after such a holiday in the open and after a week or so slip back into their old ways of living, late hours, no outdoor exercises and hurried, worthless meals. The effect of this right-about-face from their holiday living, with ten hours' sleep, constant exercise, and three full, nourishing meals a day, is usually to make them very tired and worn out.

Girls, now that you have a fine start in building up a strong constitution, keep up the good work. No matter what your work may be you need as much strength as you can get. There is no calling which is not bettered by bringing health and energy to it. So for your own sake and your work's sake, make up your mind not only to keep the health that you have gained, but to add more to it each day.

SUFFICIENT SLEEP.

The necessity of working girls sleeping sufficiently cannot be too frequently emphasised. It seems deadly dull and stupid to most girls to go to bed early every night. After they have worked hard all day they want some amusement in the evening.

But, girls, no constitution can stand going night after night without sufficient sleep. Furthermore, your work will suffer terribly by such neglect of your health and you cannot afford to have your work suffer if you are dependent on salary.

But you can have a good time, too, if you will just make this a rule, to get at least eight hours sleep every night, and if anything prevents you having the whole eight hours one night to make it up the next. But you cannot afford on any night except Saturday to go to dances where you are kept up until two or three o'clock in the morning.

In order to get at least eight hours sleep you should go to bed at half past ten and get up at half-past six, or at ten if you prefer, and get up at six, because you need the early morning hours before you go to the office for exercise. Take at least an hour's walk or tennis, if possible, every morning.

Don't let your meals grow less nourishing or less full. Eat a good breakfast—fruit, cereals, eggs, milk, or chocolate (or coffee, if necessary) and toast. Luncheon should be just as nourishing as possible. Eat well sleep well and exercise well, and you will grow ever stronger.

A Forecast of The Fall Styles

New York, Sept. 15.

Before very long, thin summer frocks and light suits will have to be put away for the heavier fall garments to take their places. It often happens that the first chill winds catch us unprepared, and certainly there is nothing more upsetting than to realize that we had not given a thought to the coming of fall and were consequently not ready for the change in the weather.

The autumn styles are already well established, so no one need to be afraid to make her own selection in suits and gowns early, for there is no danger that they will not be in good style later. The suit models that have come over from Paris are as attractive as they can be. The coats are mostly three-quarer length and some of them are shorter. They reach to the hips, the finger tips or the knees. The skirts are quite full; just as full as they were last fall, but not so flaring. The lines are straighter as a rule, and the skirts just a trifle longer than they have been worn in the past seasons. Strictly tailored suits, of course, do not have very wide or long skirts.

Among the coat styles there are some Russian effects seen, which most women will be happy to learn. One of the favored models is fitted above the waist and quite full below it, and there are many variations of this idea.

A suit that gives promise of being very well liked on account of its generally becoming lines is illustrated here. It has deep pockets which are cut in one with the fronts of the coat, and a narrow belt going around the sides and back but not the front. The skirt that completes this suit has pockets corresponding in cut to those on the coat.

SUIT FABRICS AND COLORS.

There are charming suit materials for fall, which will perhaps make it difficult to decide on what to get. Besides the old stand-by, serge, there is its staunch companion, gabardine; then there are wool poplins, wool velours, broadcloth, cheviot, mixtures, and many fancy twills and suitings. For dressy wear, velvet, velveteen and satin will be very much in the foreground. The checked wool velours are very stylish in two tones, as, for instance, black and brown. They are most practical too, for they wear very well. The fashionable self tones are navy blue, dark brown, green, taupe, gray, burgundy, and black.

BOVRIL

YOU ARE SURE OF BEING NOURISHED If you take Bovril.

BEAUTY.

Alcohol is one of the bitterest enemies of the woman who would retain her youth and beauty. It kills the dainty, luring dress of beauty, brings baggy eyes, bad skin, hardens the arteries and weakens the system generally.

Too strenuous exercise is unwise for the woman who would be beautiful because it effects her health. With the loss of health beauty soon departs.

Foods of the right sort play such an important part in Milsy's scheme that chapters can be written on the subject. Only do believe that the brightness of the eye, the clearness of the skin, the carriage of the body, all the things that go to make up attractive, beautiful and charming women depends on health—and health depends upon a properly cared for stomach.

To do this live a regular and careful life avoiding excesses of all kinds and all harmful medicines, foods, exercise and thoughts.

MUD STAINS ON SILK.

To clean black silk from mud stains the following process is often very successful: Pare and cut into very small pieces one potato and pour over it a pint of boiling water, cover and let stand over night.

Then add enough spirits of wine to give it the consistency of very thin starch. Sponge the silk rapidly with this liquid and rub each spot carefully, letting the liquid wet the material thoroughly.

Press the silk dry on the wrong side, running the iron up and down the silk, not across it. To clean mud from white or colored cotton fabric, soak in kerosene for a few hours.

WOMAN'S SHARE IN WAR WORK IN THE OLD LAND

Women have answered the call to substitute for men who have joined the colours to the number of 634,000, according to figures obtained from the Board of Trade. The statistics have been compiled from July, 1914, to the end of April, 1916, and show the number of women thus employed in Great Britain and Ireland to be distributed as follows:

	July, 1914.	April, 1916.
Professions	68,500	81,500
Transport workers	9,500	25,000
Agriculture	100,000	137,000
Commerce	474,500	655,000
Finance	5,500	32,000
Entertainment	172,000	166,000
Industries	2,115,000	2,467,500
Central government	65,000	107,000
Local government	164,000	205,000
Totals	3,263,000	3,897,000

It may be noticed that the great army of domestic servants is left out of this tabular statement for the reason that so far from showing any increase this group of female workers has been drawn upon for something like 100,000 by the occupations set out above. Always hard to find the domestic servant in war time may almost be described as a disappearing class among women workers, says a London letter to the New York Sun.

126,900 in Metal Trades.

Of the total increase of women workers in the industrial group which is given by the Board of Trade as 287,500 in the period under review, the metal trades have claimed no fewer than 126,900. This, of course, is largely accounted by the increased manufacture of munitions. The distribution of women in the various sections of the metal trades is indicated in the following figures:

Trade	July, 1914	April 1916
Iron and steel	5,000	10,400
Tin plate	3,000	3,300
Wire drawing	15,000	20,600
Hardware	25,000	33,000
Engineering	12,000	80,700
Electrical engineering	13,000	22,300
Shipbuilding	1,000	2,400
Motor cycles	9,000	2,400
Carriages, carts, etc.	1,000	1,600
Cutlery, tools, etc.	21,000	22,400
Small arms	1,000	6,800
Scientific instruments	4,000	5,900
Other metals	14,000	17,000
Jewellery	10,000	10,000
Musical instruments	10,000	15,000
Totals	144,000	270,900

Up to the end of April of this year the women workers in the hosiery trade have been increased from 55,000 to 71,000 since July, 1914, and the success of the experimental introduction of women in place of men is well indicated in the case of one employer in the Midlands, who is now employing thirty-three women to one man to his complete satisfaction in all respects.

Many in Coal Mines.

In the building trade the number of women workers was almost doubled in the first twenty-one weeks of war, having been lifted from 7,000 to 13,400. Even the coal mines were able to increase their female employees from 7,000 to 9,200, and an addition of 100 women was made to the 2,000 who were already working in the quarries. Of the 287,500 extra women classified under the industrial group the Board of Trade estimates that only 216,000 can be said to have been directly engaged to fill the places of men withdrawn for military service.

Reports at hand from various labour exchanges in the country contain many interesting examples of the replacement of men by women. In the boot trade, for instance, the women are showing remarkable interest and aptitude for the work. One firm employs 540 women and 280 men and is producing 12,000 pair of boots a week, including 3,000 pairs of army boots, besides 5,000 half soles and 20,000 tip pieces.

The processes upon which the women in this particular establishment are employed number twenty-eight, and their wages vary from $4.50 to $15 a week. Fifteen dollars is an extreme figure, but several of the women are regularly earning $10 a week, which is high pay for females in England.

In the textile trades, in contrast with many other groups, there has been a movement since the war which many regard as wasteful from the industrial point of view. The women have been attracted from their useful work in the mills and weaving sheds to the munition factories, partly on account of the extra money to be earned and partly from a feeling that they must be engaged in the manufacture of munitions in order to give efficient service to the nation.

The Board of Trade, through the labour exchanges, is striving to combat this tendency by a campaign of posters depicting a woman on the steps of a mill calling to her old associates to return to their old work.

To Help Nature Shed A Bad Complexion

Beauty devotees are enthusiastic over the beautifying qualities of mercolised wax. Nothing discoved within recent years accomplishes so much, so quickly, without harm, at such small expense. The principal reason for its wonderful merit is that it works in harmony with physiological laws. Instead of hiding complexion defects, it removes them. It actually takes off the aged, faded, sallow, freckled or blotchy surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience. It is Nature's way of renewing complexions. When the natural process is retarded because of deficient circulation or nerve tone, mercolised wax comes comes to the rescue and hastens the skin shedding. The new complexion which appears is a natural one, youthful, healthy, exquisitely beautiful. If you've never tried mercolised wax, get an ounce of it at the drug-store, use at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning.

Another natural beautifying treatment—for wrinkled skin—is to bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witch hasel. This is remarkably and instantaneously effective.

THE MAKING OF CITIZENS

There are few greater doors of opportunity for the truly religious man than the privilege offered at present to show brotherliness to some of the 10,500,000 immigrants who have landed in the United States since the opening of the 20th century. We have a Christian duty toward them which has not been fulfilled. Certain churches are joining the various immigration and educational societies working for these people and assisting in teaching them English and inviting them to special services arranged in accordance with their needs.

What definite Christian thing can I do for one or more of these people? One friend of ours was the means, last year of helping over 100 immigrants to discover what a Christian civilisation really meant, by meeting them in his home, teaching them and assisting them in securing their naturalisation privileges. What have we done?

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS

By Anabel Worthington

In the design illustrated the separate guimpe is of Georgette crêpe. This material washes easily and well and for this reason is very practical. Colored batiste or organdie may be used, or the plain white ground, but will be better in a dress for special wear only.

The jumper dress in the picture is in fancy outline at the top with insertion banding for a finish; the shoulder straps are made of the banding and the pockets are beautified with a strap of it also, and at a raised waistline a band encircles and takes credit for a belt.

For a school dress this may be made of woollen mixture in block or check, or shepherd plaid is nice for school frocks. Other fabrics are linen, gabardine, ratine, gingham, voile and silk.

Of course a jumper dress will do service in being remade a second season. Any one with a knack for clothes can copy the model shown without effort and with little demand upon her time.

The pattern of No. 7,894 is cut in sizes six to 12 years. To make in size ten will require 1½ yards of 36 inch material for the guimpe, 1⅝ yards for the dress and 2¼ yards of banding.

The joy of having, among other summer frocks, a jumper dress with "wing pockets" is as much as any girl could ask. Contrasting goods and colors will make such dress very effective, even ... fabrics may be used.

You may obtain the pattern by sending ... to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

GIRL IS KILLED WHEN AUTOMOBILE GRAZES WAGON

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Miss Vivian Darville, until recently a "Winter Garden Girl," was killed while seated in an automobile as it grazed a loaded wagon on Pelham Bay Bridge, the Bronx. Harry A. Lambert, of No. 2,954 Decatur Avenue, the Bronx, driving the automobile, said the wagon was on the wrong side of the road and that in passing it a part of the wooden frame projecting from under the load of hay hit Miss Darville.

Following the blow the girl fell against J. W. Welsh, who said he was a Special State Inspector of automobiles, of Albany, seated beside her. Others in the automobile were Miss Betty V. Brown, of No. 9 Fort Washington Avenue; Miss Ruth M. Hewitt, of No. 1,762 Undercliff Ave., the Bronx, and Robert Ganzennullam of No. 2,983 Marion Avenue, the Bronx.

Mr. Lambert hurried to Hunter's Island Inn, not far away, and from there an ambulance was called from Fordham Hospital, but it was found Miss Darville was dead. The police questioned all those in the automobile; but did not detain them. The hay wagon disappeared and its driver was not found.

THE MIRACLES OF SURGERY

BY CANADIAN OVERSEAS

One of the triumphs of the war is the great and swift advance that has been made in the treatment of wounds and war injuries. Since the outbreak of the war surgical art has leaped forward half a century, and even the surgeons are surprised. For the wounded soldier, the improved treatment means that he will escape most of the deformities that formed the terrible aftermath of previous great wars.

Now, wounds are healed in a few weeks, that would have taken three times as many months under pre-war treatment; badly broken bones are mended in marvellously ingenious ways; bent arms which would formerly have required many months of painful stretching are now rapidly and painlessly straigthened out by wonderful splints invented during the war; greatly shortened legs are brought practically to their normal length by new methods; lost noses, jaws and other parts are replaced by substitutes that almost defy detection.

Some time ago I wrote about maa kind in the re-making in France and in England: how the soldiers were given new limbs and new hope. But the other branches in surgery are doing even more wonderful things, giving new life. Some of these cases I saw myself, and others were explained to me. The details may be harrowing, but not so terrible as they would be if nothing could be done.

Nerves and Muscles Repaired.

Some of these cases are very wonderful. One man had completely lost the use of his hand through paralysis of the muscles of the back of the arm. He had a "dropped wrist," and had no power to straighten the hand. In this case the main nerve which supplied the extensor muscles with motive force was destroyed by a shrapnel wound. Before the war this would have been considered a hopeless case, and the hand would have remained useless. A London surgeon took six muscles, of which the nerve supply was uninterrupted, from the front of the arm, and transferred them to the back. With the muscles which before served to close the hand, the man can now open it, while he closes it with the eight muscles which still remain on the front of the arm.

Another soldier had a bullet wound near his collar bone, which severed the nerve controlling the muscles of the wrist, and he too had "wrist-drop." The surgeon in this case reunited the severed nerve, and there is every prospect that the hand will be as good as ever.

There is a still more wonderful nerve case. This man had the fleshy part of his arm shot away, carrying with it four inches of nerve necessary to control the hand movements. The surgeon rang up several hospitals until he found what he wanted—the amputation that afternoon of a limb. The limb happened to be a leg. No sooner was it off than four or five inches of practically living nerve was removed from the calf, placed in a saline bath and rushed by taxi-cab to the other hospital. Here the patient was ready under an anaesthetic. The wound in the arm was opened with a lance, the ends of the nerve quickly found, and the circuit re-established. Today the man is in a fair way to regaining the use of his hand.

Disfigured Faces Restored.

Some of the most cruel wounds are those in the jaw. The disfigurement is often horrible, and it is perhaps from these wounds that the soldiers suffer the greatest agony of mind. Speech and mastication are impossible.

The surgeons have found a means (involving the wearing for many weeks of what looks like a strange double set of false teeth) of gradually pressing back the remains of the jaw into their natural position, of restoring motion and flexibility to the lips, and of smoothing out the most ghastly scars.

In one case a soldier had an eye, part of his cheek and part of his nose shot away. The disfigurement was terrible, but now, through the wonderful act of Lieut. Derwent Wood, A.R.A., one would have to make a close examination to detect any difference between his face and the natural faces of other passers-by.

With the help of photographs of what the person was like before being wounded, Lieut. Wood will make false features of silvered copper artistically painted to match the surrounding complexion, which completely defies detection. This silvered copper may be moulded to the shape of any of the natural parts, painting it to correspond with the other side of the face, putting in an eye when an eye has been lost.

Small pieces may be attached with spirit gum, but this is found too irritating when applied to a large surface, so other methods have to be used.

Every variety of facial repair is down at the Wandsworth Hospital. Eyes, noses, cheeks, lips, and even moustaches are replaced with artificial substitutes so natural looking that they are not noticeable.

Self-Caring Splints.

At the Hammersmith Hospital there is a soldier wounded by shrapnel in the elbow. His arm is bent and firmly fixed at an angle of 48 degrees, and of course completely useless. Under the old form of treatment, it might take a year of painful manipulation to break down the fibrous adhesions which hold the arm at this angle. But this patient can actually cure himself without pain, in a very short time. To the upper arm and lower arm are attached the two legs of a hinged splint. The parts being encased in plaster of paris. By means of a bar with a finely cut screw, these legs can be separated as desired. The patient can give the screw a slight twist from time to time and slowly straighten out the arm.

"Gas Gangrene."

Gas gangrene is caused by the presence in a wound of certain types of bacilli, classed as 'anaerolin"— i.e., bacilli which cannot live in air, the vital principle of which is oxygen. They exist (like the tetanus bacilli) in cultivated soil, and it is because the war is being fought in France among the peasants' fields that they are introduced so constantly by ricocheting bullets, or scraps of earth-stained clothing, into the wounds of our soldiers. Once there, they set about producing gas bubbles among the tissues, hence the name "gas gangrene." The gas they cannot endure is oxygen, so oxygen is introduced into the innermost recesses of the wound. This is secured by various methods according to the nature of the injury. A hole right through the shoulder will be sterilized by the use of a wick, drawing peroxide of hydrogen from a small tank above the bed. Another kind of wound will be sprayed with ozone, and a third dealt with by means of a perforated tube fed with oxygen gas from a cylinder.

It would be possible to write of many other marvels—of the man who had a piece of shrapnel, three-quarters of an inch square, taken out of the back of his heart, while it lay bleeding in the surgeon's hand; of the new anaesthetic which is so harmless that a patient can remain under it for two hours, yet smoke a cigarette in comfort a quarter of an hour of regaining consciousness; or of the electrical treatment by which shrunken muscles are coaxed back to health and strength.

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.

BUT—

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the publi: and of his wife and children for him.

Complete and absolute Family protection may be had by your taking a policy in THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA—The LEADING CANADIAN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

FOR HUNTERS AND FISHERS

Owing to the fact that a good deal of misapprehension exists in reference to the Fish and Game Laws now governing such forms of recreation, the Brockville Recorder has published a synopsis of the same as published by the Ontario Department this year. A number of changes were made recently, and a brief resume of the leading features is as follows:

Game—Deer.

No person shall hunt, take or destroy any deer except from the 1st day of November to the 15th day of November, both days inclusive.

Moose, reindeer or caribou lying south of the main line of the C.P.R. from the 1st day of November to 15th of November, both days inclusive.

Partridge, Etc.

Any grouse, pheasants, prairie fowl or aprtridge, except from Oct. 15 to Nov. 15, both days inclusive; but no persons shall take more than 18 partridges in any one day, and no grouse, prairie fowl or partridge shall be hunted or killed before Oct. 15, 1918.

Woodcock.

Any woodcock shall not be taken except from Oct. 15 to Nov. 15, both days inclusive.

Quail, Squirrels, Etc.

Any quail, wild turkey, black or grey squirrel shall not be taken except from 1st day of November to the 15th November, both days inclusive, and no person shall take or kill more than six quail in any one day or 25 for the season.

Geese.

Any swan or goose, except from Sept. 15 to the 30th day of April in the following year, both days inclusive.

Ducks, Water Fowl, Etc.

Duck of any kind or any other water fowl, snipes, rail, plover or any other bird known as a short bird or wader shall not be taken except from the 1st day of September to the 31st of December, both days inclusive.

Hares.

Hares may be taken and by any means at any time between the 15th of October and the 15th of November, and between the 23rd of December and the 2nd of January in the following year, and may be taken at any other times by any other means than shooting.

Muskrat.

No muskrat shall be taken, hunted or killed in that part of the province lying south of the French and Mattawa Rivers, except from the first day of March and April 21st. No muskrat shall be shot or speared or muskrat house damaged.

Mink.

No mink shall be hunted, taken or killed between 1st of May and 1st of November following.

Licenses.

No person shall hunt, take or kill any deer, moose, reindeer or caribou except under the authority of a license and the animals shall not be under the age or one year.

Number of Deer.

No person shall during one year or season kill or take more than one deer, one bull moose, or one bull reindeer. Two or more persons hunting together cannot kill an aggregate of not more than one deer for each member of the party. Dogs are not permitted to run at large during the close season in any locality where deer are usually found

Water Fowl.

No person shall hunt water fowl such as ducks, goose, etc., from a sailboat, steam or other power boat. No blinds or decoys shall be placed at a greater distance than 200 yards from the shore or natural bed thick enough to conceal a boat or from a water line bounding private property. All decoys shall be removed from the water during the hours in which shooting is prohibited, and no person shall set out more than one flock of decoys. No person shall kill more than 200 wild ducks in one year. It is unlawful to discharge in hunting any gun between sunset and sunrise.

Angling.

In angling no one person shall use more than one fishing line, and it shall not be provided with more than three hooks.

Bass.

No one shall fish for, catch or kill any large or smallmouthed bass from 1st of January to June 15th, both days inclusive. But eight bass are allowed to be caught in one day by one person.

Maskinonge.

No person shall fish for or catch any maskinonge from 1st of January to the 15th of June in each year, both days inclusive. Any person is allowed to catch four maskinonge in one day.

Pickerel.

No person shall fish for or catch pickerel (dore) from 15th of April to the 15th of June, both days inclusive. Not more than 12 pickerel may be taken by one person in one day.

Salmon Trout.

No one shall fish for or catch salmon trout in either Big or Little Nipissing Lake in one day By angling more than three salmon trout.

Speckled Trout.

No person shall fish for or catch any speckled trout or brown trout from 15th of September until April 30th in the following year.

Trolling.

In trolling no one shall use more than one line and not more than two lines shall be fished from one boat, and no one shall troll from a boat, which is being towed by another boat.

They had parted long years ago. Now, in the deepening shadows of the twilight they met again.

"Aye, an' here be our initials that you carved, Sandy," she replied.

The ensuing silence was only broken by the buzzing of an aeroplane overhead. Honey-laden memories thrilled through the twilight, and flushed their glowing cheeks.

"Ah, Mary," exclaimed Sandy, "ye're just as beautiful as ye ever were, an' I ha'e never forgotten ye, my bonnie lass."

"And ye, Sandy," she cried, while her blue eyes moistened, "are just as bigga lecar as ever, an' I believe ye jist the same."—Tit-Bits.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Jimdandy Auto Company

It Made Good In the Nick of Time

By F. A. MITCHEL

Julian Stafford was an example of the ups and downs of life. Born with a silver spoon in his mouth, he never knew during his childhood and youth what it was to want for anything. Instead of having to go to work when he was a boy, like many other children, he was associating with companions of his own age, both boys and girls, whose parents were well to do, and the kind of cravat he wore or the cut of his coat was of infinitely more importance to him than the money required to pay for such articles. Indeed, he had only to order them. When the bills came in to his father they were paid, and Julian did not even know of the fact.

However, this happy period ended. About the time Julian came of age his father lost a good deal of money. Julian went to work and earned enough for his necessities, which were not great. But a better period was in store for him.

Money is like quicksilver. So long as quicksilver is incased in a tight receptacle, with the top screwed down, it won't get away from you. But the moment the volatile metal finds a place to break through, no matter how small, there is no holding on to it.

When we have plenty of money, when we are making money, its value seems negligible. But when it has once broken away from us it is like the quicksilver—it is mighty hard to pick it up again.

At twenty-five Julian Stafford was, to speak figuratively, in a bed of roses. He had inherited $10,000 from an aunt. For several years the country had been under the depressing influence of a commercial panic, and all sorts of property could be bought for a song. At the time Julian received his inheritance a change had begun to come over monetary affairs, and he was advised, instead of investing his money at a safe and simple interest, to buy something with it. It didn't make much difference what he bought. Everything would for some years to come be increasing in value, and he would be able to sell his property for more than he had given for it.

Securities seemed to Julian to be the simplest form for such speculation, and he bought $10,000 worth of railroad shares. The stock market soon boomed, and he sold out, making, as he considered it, 50 per cent profit in six months. That was at the rate of doubling his money in a year. At 5 per cent interest it would require twenty years to do that.

Julian sold out just before the wave of speculation broke, and after it broke what he had sold could be bought again for what he had paid for it before. This time, instead of confining himself to what securities his money would buy, he bought on a margin. Instead of buying $20,000 worth of securities he bought $100,000 worth. Again the market boomed. Every day for several days Julian was making twice as much as his aunt had left him.

At this time life to Stafford was filled with delight. In addition to making a fortune every day he was engaged to the dearest girl in the world. They had expected to live on a thousand a year in an apartment of four rooms, none of which was much bigger than a large closet. Julian figured up one night and found that he could sell out his stocks and have an income of $10,000, derived from gilt edge property. They could live in a stone front house.

One day when the market was jumping half a point or so on the ticker with every recorded sale Julian, who was standing over it and making a thousand dollars with every point, felt a tap on his shoulder. Turning, there he saw Erskine, a former schoolmate.

"Hello, Jim!"

"Hello, Julian! How are you making out?"

Julian very excitedly confided in his friend that he was getting rich so fast that he couldn't keep track of his funds.

"Let me have $500, won't you, Julian? I've got a chance to go into a deal that I think there's millions in. There's just one share on the ground floor left, and I can get it dirt cheap. I'll take you in for half of it."

Julian was making money so fast that he didn't want any more profits for himself. He was well disposed toward Erskine, and what was $500 to him, since he had made ten times that within an hour? He gave Jim an order on his broker for $500, and Jim received the amount before leaving the office.

That was a very exciting day for Julian—in fact, the most exciting day of his life. He made more money in that one day than in all the time of his speculations. Just before the closing of the market there was a peculiar shakiness. It was the trembling of the wave before it breaks. The "bears," who were watching their opportunity, the next morning put out a report that one of the biggest banking concerns in Wall street was in trouble. Then commenced the tremble.

It was the old story with Julian. He saw his fortune melt away before him. Down it went like a stack of card houses. Just before the closing hour his broker closed out his account, leaving him in debt for something like $10,000.

This time when the market reached low tide it remained there for a long while. But this did not make any difference to Julian, for even if it had gone up again he had no money to buy with. At the beginning of the next month his broker sent him an account current showing his indebtedness and asked him to pay up. There were numerous credits and numerous charges. Julian didn't try to decipher it. He knew that his fortune had died as suddenly as it had been born, and he was too sick at heart to dissect the corpse.

Julian's girl turned out to be a trump [illegible] was a trump for Jim if not for herself. She had not shared her lover's wild enthusiasm while he was building an inverted pyramid of air, but now that he had gone under she did not desert him.

"It's lucky it came to you early in life, Julian," she said. "I think you are naturally visionary and that it was sure to come in time. Besides, even if you had for the present kept a fortune made in this way it would have taken wings later on. Now you can begin life on a more solid though a much slower basis."

Julian secured a position at $25 a week, and on this he married Rose Meriweather. She proved an excellent manager, though the hardest thing she had to manage was her husband. It is not to be expected that a man who has made money at the rate of $1,000 an hour and for the time being considered it as easy to produce as pumping water from a well will at once look out for small change. When Julian went home in the evening and reported that he had spent 30 cents for luncheon, 10 cents for car fare and 25 cents for two cigars, Rose figured that this totaled 65 cents, or about $200 a year. Other expenses in proportion would bring ruin.

After many backslidings Julian got himself down to hard pan and many an evening when dead tired permitted a trolley car to go by him while he walked the two miles between his business and his house. But a baby came, and everybody knows that a baby brings added expense, which increases and multiplies till the child has grown and left the parental abode. Notwithstanding Rose's management and that she got Julian pretty well trained as to expenditures, they had a hard time of it. Doctor's bills, which are hard to take into consideration in laying out funds, came in, and every cent went for ordinary essential expenditures.

But the hardest blow came when Mrs. Stafford, struggling against insurmountable obstacles, broke down. Julian was provider so far as he was able, and Rose was dispenser. Neither could supply the other's place. When under such circumstances the woman has to throw up the sponge the bottom drops out of the household.

The couple could not afford a servant, and when Mrs. Stafford was unable to be up to cook the meals her husband was obliged to handle the skillet, which he did unsuccessfully, spoiling many a meal. This was hard both on his wife and himself.

Julian was too poor to buy a newspaper, but during the noon hour, while eating a lunch brought from home, he looked over the paper in the office. During his wife's illness he was one day reading the financial news—from force of habit—when he saw it stated there had been a sudden rise in Jimdandy Automobile. The company had succeeded in purchasing valuable patents and for a year past had been earning large profits. Julian finished browsing over news that he had no reason to suppose concerned him and his luncheon at the same time and went back to work.

A few days later when Julian had prepared the breakfast and was taking some toast and tea up to his sick wife he stopped at the front door to answer the postman's whistle. He was handed a letter, which he carried on up with the breakfast. Having put the breakfast down beside his wife, he looked at the letter. On the left hand corner was printed, "Jimdandy Automobile Company, James C. Erskine Secretary." He opened the letter and read aloud:

Dear Julian—Our venture after a long period of distress has at last made good. Under a reorganization our interest is 1,000 shares. As soon as the new certificates are issued I will send you your 500 shares. Since the recent advance the market price is 80. This makes your lot worth $40,000. The reason I haven't given you any information before is because there was no good news to report. Yours, with congratulations, JIM.

"What does it all mean?" asked Rose.

"I don't know. Some one has made a blunder."

Rose suggested that he go next door, where the inmates had a telephone, and call up Erskine. He did so, and Jim undertook to remind him of the check for $500 that Julian had given him when he was making money on the ticker at a thousand dollars an hour. But Julian had no remembrance of the incident and could not recall it. However, Erskine assured him that the money had been invested in what led up to the Jimdandy Auto company, indirectly through the holder of valuable patents, and that Julian was holder of 500 shares of stock worth $80 a share.

When Julian went back to his wife and assured her of their good fortune she jumped out of bed, and the pair did a tango on the floor.

Jim made over three-quarters of his fortune to his wife, then proceeded to lose the remaining quarter in speculation.

But he never got his hands on the balance.

May Banish Flies.

There is an expectation at Ottawa that the bill which has been introduced in Washington to restore the halibut trade from Prince Rupert and Canadian railways to Seattle and United States railways, will not become law. The bill proposes that the shipment of goods in bond through a foreign country (Canada), be recognized only when the shipments are bonded from one United States port to another. Canada has taken a third of the North Pacific halibut trade, because of the marketing facilities at Prince Rupert where the fish is shipped in bond for points in the central and eastern States. The effort of the legislation now proposed would be to turn this trade back to Seattle and the Government is watching the situation with considerable interest.

Sunday

The Corn Aches

You apply a little Blue-jay plaster. The ache ends instantly, and it never will return. You can prove that in one minute. A million women prove it every month. A corn will never pain again after Blue-jay once goes on it.

Monday

No Corn Pain

On Monday you won't know you have a corn. It is gently disappearing. You know that corn is done for. You know it won't come back. You may also know that soreness will not follow. For Blue-jay is as gentle as efficient.

Tuesday

The Corn is Gone

In 48 hours Blue-jay ends 91 corns in 100. The other 9 per cent are tough corns which need another application.

Such has been the history of 70 million corns, since Blue-jay was invented. And any user will assure you that such results are certain.

Prove that fact tonight.

NOW I CURED MY CATARRH

OLD IN A SIMPLE WAY

Without Apparatus, Inhalers, Salves, Lotions, Harmful Drugs, Smoke or Electricity.

Heals Day and Night

It is a new way. It is something absolutely different. No lotions, sprays or sickly sickening salves or creams. No atomiser, or any apparatus of any kind. Nothing to take or inhale. No steaming or rubbing or injections. No electricity or vibration or massage. No powder; no plasters; no keeping in the house. Nothing of that kind at all. Something new and different, something delightful and healthful, something instantly successful. You do not have to wait, and linger and pay out a lot of money. You can stop it over night—and I will gladly tell you how—FREE. I am not a doctor and this is not a so-called doctor's prescription—but I am cured and my friends are cured, and you can be cured. Your suffering will stop at once like magic.

I Am Free—You Can Be Free

My catarrh was filthy and loathsome. It made me ill. It dulled my mind. It undermined my health and was weakening my will. The hawking, coughing, spitting made me obnoxious to all, and my constant sneezing made me miserable. My breath was foul and my sense of smell was destroyed. My delight in life was dulled and my faculties impaired. I knew that in time it would bring me to an untimely grave, because every moment of the day and night it was slowly yet surely sapping my vitality.

But I found a cure, and I am ready to tell you about it FREE. Write me promptly.

RISK JUST ONE CENT

Send no money. Just your name and address on a postal card, thus: "Dear Deal Man: Please tell me how I can cure catarrh and how I can save money." That is all you need to say. I will understand, and will write to you with complete information, FREE, at once. Do not delay. Send postal card or write me a letter today. Don't think of trying this or that remedy until you have tried the wonderful treatment that can do for you what it has done for me.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS FOR WAR VICTIMS

The artificial arms now being produced for the benefit of those mutilated in the war are no longer merely designed to mask the loss of a member. They are ingenious mechanisms, based on sound physiological considerations, devised with cunning and put together with art.

For those amputees we have preserved the elbow joint, an American firm constructs an artificial arm with which are possible a large variety of movements. Flexions of the wrist, opening and rotation of the 'hand', placing the 'fingers' in certain positions and holding them firmly there, are all accomplished with no intervention of the other hand except to engage and disengage a catch.

Recently organized exort has been made by the French authorities to place the entire technique of artificial limb supply upon a standardized scientific basis. Very elaborate investigations have been made in thousands of cases. In accordance with rules established by these investigations, it is now possible to prescribe for individual cases in such a way as to insure a degree of accuracy and efficiency hitherto unknown in artificial limbs.

The ordinary type of arm supplied to laborers and mechanics consists of a thin steel bar terminating in a sort of crab-feet attachments. The base of this is a steel cup with leather backing, to fit about the stump. The steel and leather cup is firmly strapped to the shoulder in such a way as to be governed by a band passing about the chest and under the opposite arm-pit. There is at the point where the steel bar enters this cup a most ingenious joint combining the ball and socket and the screw principles, while in addition the bar carried an ordinary hinge joint. After a little practice a workman can work almost as well with this hand as with a natural hand.

For the clerical or professional worker and the skilled artisan there is a much more elaborate hand. It is of nickeled copper with separate fingers. The metal shell of the palm is made in two pieces, front and back, leaving, when fitted together, holes from which project the fingers. Each finger is hinged onto a common axis inside the shell of the palm, and held in closed position by a spring. Levers or steel passing over a cog wheel control these fingers and at this cog wheel terminates a flexible steel cable passing in a leather tube under the arm and about the chest.

The motive power for the operations of this hand is furnished by expansions and contractions of the chest, which effect the flexible cable. The mechanical arrangements of the hand are such that the fingers imitate in their workings the motions of those of a natural hand. The wearer is able to grasp all manner of objects, either the the hand or between two fingers, even the handling of a match or a pin is not beyond him.

An inventor living at Troy, N.Y., has patented a laundry machine that irons an entire shirt over a conical roller at a single operation.

It flows freely in damp weather. It is something new and better for table use.

WHAT THE MORGAN FIRM HAS DONE FOR THE ALLIES

LONDON, Sunday, September 12—The Times publishes from a correspondent an article on "America and Munitions", in which the writer pays tribute to the wisdom of the English Government in appointing Messrs. Morgan & Co., its purchasing agents in America. He says:

"We made no mistake when we entered into the Morgan contract. It turned out a good thing for us and our allies, and it has been equally advantageous to the United States. In the early months of the war all the allied Governments were competing furiously with one another for American goods and products; not only that, but the naval and military authorities attached to each Government were likewise bidding against each other for the same commodities and, in addition, all the Allied capitals were overrun with American agents and contractors on the hunt for orders.

The result may easily be inferred Prices soared sky-high. Many contracts were made with irresponsible persons and with firms of inadequate resources. There was a very serious risk of our getting into wrong hands, receiving poor service, and accumulating an aftermath of ligitation and resentment. That would have been bad for us and not less so for America.

KNOCKED OUT MEN OF STRAW

"What the Morgan contract has done for the Allies is this: It knocked out the men of straw and gamblers. It placed contracts for material in the hands of some of the best and biggest firms in the country. It brought system and cohesion, local knowledge and experience into the business of allotting orders, or arranging terms, or settling on the spot the innumerable and complex details that enter into all manufacturing enterprises.

"Mr. Lloyd George declared last year in the House of Commons that the arrangement with Messrs. Morgan had saved the Allies millions of pounds sterling. He was quite right. How many millions I do not know, but I should judge that what had been paid to the firm in commissions had been returned to the Government multiplied something like twelve times over in the economies they have been the means of effecting."

KEEP EMIGRATION WITHIN EMPIRE

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Speaking at a luncheon in honour of the Premier of Newfoundland, Rt. Hon. Bonar Law, the Colonial Secretary, said: "The end is perhaps not within sight, but it is coming. I wonder if you have begun to realize as I do the problems which will confront us. One of the most important is the question of emigration. It is not an easy problem. We must give to the men fighting our battles the best chance and the widest outlook available. There will be emigration, and the Government will be much to blame if they do not make two things certain. One is, whatever emigration does take place shall be within the British Empire and shall not lessen the strength of the Empire as a whole. (Loud cheers.) The other is, whatever emigration there is to be shall take place under the best conditions for the men who have fought in this war — so far as the Dominions are concerned, being carried on under conditions which never existed in the world before, and which it is almost incredible to believe could have existed now. These great Dominions are, in fact, independent states. We could not have compelled a single one of them to send a man or contribute a penny, but they have sent their best, not so much to help us as to help the Empire of which they are a part. These conditions can never occur again. It requires great good-will and good sense on the part of both Dominions and authorities at home to enable an arrangement to work by which one set of men should contribute lives and treasure, and should have no voice as to the way in which those lives and treasures shall be extended. (Hear, hear.) That cannot continue. There must be a change. (Cheers.) The war has done more, I believe, than many generations in other circumstances could have done in uniting the Empire. The people of this country are prepared to accept any system of closer union which the Dominions may desire to see adopted."

Got DIARRHOEA FROM DRINKING BAD WATER

Had To Give Up Work

Mr. H. M. Ryckman, Port Rowan, Ont., writes: "Last year I was out in Saskatchewan. The water was very bad and I was taken with diarrhoea. In a few days, I was in such bad shape I had to stop work. I got a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and had only taken a few doses when it was stopped, and I was soon able to go back to work again."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past seventy years, and has had such great success in curing all bowel complaints that many firms have undertaken to provide a substitute for it even going so far as to use a similar name.

Do not be led into taking a substitute for "Dr. Fowler's" but insist on getting what you ask for.

Another Side To More Production

The repeated cries for 'more production' in order to enhance the wealth of Canada are apt to cloud the fact that prevention of waste by Governments themselves is the most direct and obvious means of filling the country's purse.

When one knows that the Governments issuing the admonition are themselves fully empowered to eliminate waste in such assets as agricultural and forest lands, the proposition to fill a leaky pail loses some of its reasonableness.

Ontario's forest fires this year represented a straight loss of about six million dollars in the Claybelt alone, counting only the immediate property damage. The fires in Quebec certainly will show a substantial financial injury. Were all the provinces and the federal government to add their forest fire debits, after a complete and frank survey of destroyed areas, the result would illustrate the fallacy of trying to make an extra million out of wheat and at the same time tossing away its equivalent in preventible forest fires.

The growing forests represent the easiest money Canada ever will lay her hands on. No less than seven and a half millions a year are paid into provincial and federal treasuries each year from timber operations. Five thousand industries look to living forests for their supplies. Our mines, fisheries, agriculture, are helpless without the co-operation of a cheap wood supply. When we abandon the guardianship of this precious pillar of our prosperity to the fire fiend himself, we betray the interests of present and future. "More production" as far as the forest assets of Canada are concerned, means nothing until the responsible provincial and federal governments provide "more protection."

OUR SOLDIERS ARE TRUEST SORT OF CHRISTIANS

"It is quite the exception to find a man showing the slightest sign of depression or even irritation. What I regard as the spirit of Christianity is most extraordinarily strong in our men. Up there near Trones Wood last week I found a man with a badly injured foot who had been ordered back to get his foot dressed. What do you think he had done, with never a word about it from anyone, before starting? He had heard, or fancied he heard, a faint sound of moaning from a shell hole, out beyond the trench in which he was injured.

"He had crawled out there and had found there a wounded man who had lain in that hole for three whole days and nights, utterly helpless, chilled to the bone at night, scorched and blackened by the pitiless sun in the days; with earth caked about his lips, and never a drop of moisture of any kind. The man with the injured foot had secured the fill of his own water bottle to help him on his limping way down to the dressing station. What does he do now?

"He used the whole of his treasured water to cleanse the month of the man in the shell hole, and for that poor chap to drink; then, with infinite labor, dropped him back to back, and when I found him, was carrying the man pick-a-back, and limping along with him to the dressing station—his own right foot being really badly injured, mind you.

"I have seen things like that during every single day of this offensive. Nobody had told the man with the injured foot to do anything but look after himself. He was entirely unconscious that he had done anything in the least out of the way; and could not for the life of him see what I could find to admire in his action any more than I should admire him for the loan of a match. Our fellows are doing this kind of thing all the time; often using abominably bad language while doing it; and always taking such things with a laugh and a joke, as an ordinary part of the day's work. If this is not true Christianity, what is it?

"God bless their brave hearts. We have an army of heroes. They are the truest sort of Christians; many of them without knowing it. Do you know what have become the most beautiful material objects in the world to my eyes? Shells, guns, munitions. Why? Because they are substitutes for the most precious flesh and blood in the world, the flesh and blood of our truest Christians. The more we have of the one, the less we need to sacrifice of the other."

BRIDGE LOSS IS $1,200,000

Construction to Go Ahead on the Same Lines as Before.

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—Commissioners Monserrat and Borden, of the Quebec Bridge Board, are in Ottawa to-day in consultation with Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Frank Cochrane regarding Monday's disaster. The construction work, it is announced, will go ahead, and on the same lines as before. It is intimated that the plan will not be changed, the essential cause of the accident being attributed, not to any fault in the design, but rather to the method of elevating the mass of steel in its final position.

The loss, which is placed around $1,200,000, is to be assumed by the St. Lawrence Bridge Co., which will attend to the salvaging of the collapsed span if it is possible to bring it to the surface. It is understood, however, that an entirely new span will be constructed. With good luck the span may be completed in another year.

DARCY DONS THE KHAKI

Famous Australian Boxer Decides to Do His Bit.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Les. Darcy, the famous Australian middleweight champion boxer, who defeated Jimmy Clabby, of Hammond, Ind., on points in a twenty-round contest at Sydney, N.S.W., last Saturday, has, with his trainer, "Mick" Hawkins, joined the colours and will shortly go into active service.

This information has been obtained from the London office of the High Commission for Australia. In spite of the many thousands of Australians now in England and at the front, boxing is still flourishing in the Antipodes.

Darcy can find few opponents among his fellow-countrymen because of the whole-hearted enthusiasm with which they have responded to the call to the colours, but "Snowy" Baker has filled the breach with importations from the United States.

It is understood that Darcy's enlistment will not interfere with his projected contest with the American middleweight, George Chip.

"Bill" Squires, the former Australian heavyweight champion, who was knocked out by Tommy Burns of Canada in the States, has given up farming and also joined the forces for active service. Hugh Mehegan, another famous Australian boxer, has arrived in England with the latest contingent of colonial troops.

There's considerable talk about the square neck and plenty of the autumn models show it, but many women find it trying.

British Drive Successful on Wide Front

Bulgars Driven Back In Disorderly Retreat

British Capture 2800 Prisoners And Take Three Villages Also

Courcelette, Martinpuich and Flers Are in British Hands As Result of First Twenty-four Hours Fighting in New Somme Offensive---Centre Thrust Forward 500 Yards North of Foureaux Woods Announces General Haig ---Victorious Serbs Drove Bulgars Back Towards Monastir.

BULGARIAN LOSSES ARE ENORMOUS

LONDON, September 16. — Fighting desperately to save themselves from retreat on a wide front, the Germans this morning are throwing battalion after battalion into action against the storming British columns north of the Somme, in an effort to check General Haig's advance. By the glare of illuminating bombs men fought like demons all night, with bayonets and grenades in the shell-torn country between the roads leading down upon Bapaume, but the German resistance is growing more stubborn as the British advance out of the area wrecked by their artillery. Courcelette, Martinpuich and Flers are firmly in British hands. The German prisoners total 2,800, and other German losses are said to be frightful.

Four German field guns were captured south of the Ancre last night, and two local counter attacks by the Germans failed. Though the Germans resisted desperately, the Teutonic commanders made no attempt to organize a great counter attack. The British carried out many successful night raids, entering the enemy trenches at several places.

LONDON, September 16.—The British centre has been thrust forward to a point 500 yards north of Foureaux Wood, in the violent battle raging north of the Somme, General Haig reported to-day. Five hundred more prisoners have been captured, making a total of 2,800 Germans officially reported captured in the first twenty-four hours of the renewed Somme offensive.

400 Prisoners Taken By The French

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official), September 16.—German attacks both north and south of the Somme were repulsed by the French last night.

North of the Somme, the French consolidated new positions and repulsed a German attack east of Clery, taking several prisoners. South of the river the Germans attempted to attack east of Berny, but were checked by French screen fire. Four hundred prisoners were taken by the French in yesterday's fighting. To illustrate the heavy German losses the War Office reported that in a single trench 86 German corpses were found. In addition to the nine German aeroplanes previously reported shot down yesterday, six others were defeated and fell behind their own lines.

British Troops Have Crossed The Struma

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

SALONIKA, September 16.—British troops have crossed the River Struma, and are attacking the Bulgarians at Dzamimah, Komaja and villages along the upper and lower Gudeli, it was officially announced to-day. Artillery duels are going on along the Doiran front.

Flouna Re-Captured By Allied Troops

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 16.—Russian and French troops, co-operating with the Serbians, are reported to have recaptured the important Greek town of Florina from the Bulgars, said a Central News despatch from Salonika to-day.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 16.—Premier Zaimis has finally decided to attempt to reform the Greek Cabinet, and his suggested to King Constantine that ex-Premier Venizelos, leader of the pro-war party, be invited to lead the new ministry, said an Athens despatch to the Evening Star to-day.

MR. STEWART IS INSPECTOR FOR THE WHOLE COUNTY

His Appointment Is Announced From Toronto To-day—District Includes City of Peterboro' as Well as the County

SALARY INCREASED

Mr. Joseph Stewart, who for the spector under the Ontario License Act for the district of West Peterborough, has been appointed inspector under the new Ontario Temperance Act. Mr. Stewart's territory has been considerably increased, and he will now be inspector for the whole county of Peterborough, including the city of Peterborough. His appointment to the more responsible position is a tribute to the manner in which Mr. Stewart has carried on his duties in the past ten years, as the License Board has intimated that the inspectors appointed to carry on under the new regime are the pick of the staff. Only some 50 inspectors have been appointed instead of 110 under the old system. Mr. Stewart has been working in the interests of law and order for the past thirty years, having been for twenty years a member of the Peterboruogh police department. His record has been uniformly good.

A Toronto despatch says:

License inspectors for the Province of Ontario under the operation of the new Ontario Temperance Act were announced at the Parliament Buildings yesterday. They were formally appointed by the Government, on the recommendation of Mr. J. D. Flavelle, representing the Provincial Commission.

Some fifty inspectors under the new regime are appointed. Seven more will be added later. These officers will cover the entire Province. In all but three or four cases, in which entirely new men have been appointed, the inspectors have seen service under the license law. At the preseng time there are approximately 110 inspectors in the Province, one to each electoral riding, excluding the cities, some of which have special staffs of their own.

Pick of the Staff.

The inspectors who are retained in service are, the Board believes, the pick of the existing staff. Many of them have their territory largely increased, and, at the request of the Board and in order to centralize operations, certain of them will move their residence to more convenient points.

Salaries will be generally increased, the new salaries of inspectors ranging from $800 per annum to $1,800, in accordance with the amount of work to be done and the size of the district to be covered. The salaries will average $1,200 per inspector. One of the new men takes a territory hitherto covered by four inspectors.

CANADIANS HAD SHARE

Dominion Soldiers Took Part In Yesterday's Great Drive In Which British Smashed German Third Line

GAINED 1500 YARDS

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Information reached us to-night that there was nothing for the Canadian infantry to do but walk forward. The position which faced them was strongly fortified both above and under-ground. Even when the artillery ceased and the infantry went forward it was certain there were many of the enemy still living and waiting with machine guns to give the Canadian assailants a fierce reception. However, our infantry went forward steadily. I may perhaps be allowed to state that included among them were certain battalions who suffered pretty severely in heavy encounters. They were all right in their movements this time, though, advancing steadily and maintaining their driving force even when the casualties began to look large. Germans were found hiding with machine guns in pretty well indestructible emplacements, but gradually they were killed or taken prisoner. There were prisoners, indeed, by the score. Many of them surrendered in batches, while the trenches captured were filled with German dead. The Canadians secured roughly an advance of fifteen hundred yards, and maintained all the gains. A large quantity of enemy stores, especially machine guns, were also secured.

The foregoing despatch, from the correspondent of the Canadian Associated Press, evidently has been cut by the censor. The reference to "certain battalions who suffered pretty severely in heavy encounters" probably concerns the first division, which was recently reported to have been moved from Ypres to the Somme. No doubt they took part in the British advance between Combles and the Pozieres-Bapaume road.

A REAL STRENUOUS TIME AT THE FRONT.

Many of the good times enjoyed by the boys at the front are the result of the activity of the Y. M. C. A. which arranges numerous sports including tugs-of-war, such as the one here shown. These periods of relaxation lighten the strain and serve to keep the men's minds occupied. A description of this line of work will be given to-morrow, Sunday afternoon, at the public meeting to be held in the Opera House at 4 o'clock which will be addressed by Major Frost and Captain Pearson. The public is invited, including the ladies.

In Spite of Unfavourable Weather Early on Friday Afternoon Attendance Was Very Large and To-day's Crowd Promises to Be Better.

A SPLENDID EXHIBITION

The total attendance at the Exhibition yesterday exceeded the second day last year by 200 people. The grand stand receipts were also larger. Probabilities are bright for a record attendance to-day.

Although the outlook at half past one yesterday afternoon did not look brilliant for the financial success of the second day of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, sunshine quickly succeeded the cold rain and the result was a huge crowd. Fortunately the morning had been fine, with the result that there were hundreds of visitors from out of town points. The rain in the early afternoon halted the city people for a few minutes, but they quickly rallied under the cheerful influence of the sun, and poured down to the Exhibition grounds. At half past two the grounds were thronged and the grandstand was filled. The attendance continued to grow until well on into the afternoon.

It was raining when the official opening took place, and as a result the opening speeches were delivered in the main building. Short speeches were made by Mayor Duffus, Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, president of the Exhibition, Mr. R. J. Soden and Col. J. W. Miller, representing the Speakers' Patriotic League.

The Whitehead Torpedo.

A feature that was of great interest was the Whitehead torpedo loaned to the Exhibition by the Admiralty. The big "tin fish" was surrounded by big crowds who listened with interest to Instructor Miller's explanations as to how the torpedo is operated and used in naval warfare. Some people evidently thought they were looking at a submarine. "My gracious how can anyone get inside that," the Examiner heard one woman say last night.

The Baby Show.

The baby show was a big feature yesterday. Girl babies had the floor yesterday and to-day the boys have their innings. The competition among the girls yesterday was of the keenest, with about fifteen entries in each class, and the judges, Ald. A. H. Stratton, Adjt. McElheney and Mr. Jos. Wearing, had a big contract to decide upon the winners. The judging took place in the main building and the judges, babies and proud mothers were surrounded by a big crowd. The results were announced as follows:

Girls Under One Year—

Third Prize—Mazie Lane, born Sept. 22, 1915, weight 24 1-2 lbs., daughter of Thos. Lane, Frank street.

Girls Over One Year and Under Two.

Third Prize— Daisy Castle, born July 29, 1915, weight 26 lbs., daughter of P. Castle, 151 Rink street.

PTE. THOMAS FROST OF 93rd BATTALION IS SERIOUSLY ILL

Peterboro' Boy Admitted to Hospital in England Suffering From Spinal Meningits---Two Recruits Signed On By 247th Yesterday---Recruiting Meeting in Norwood Monday---To-day's General Military News.

Mrs. Mary Frost, 513 Albert street, received an official communication this morning from Ottawa that her husband, Pte. Thomas Frost, of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, is officially reported seriously ill and admitted to Moore Barracks Hospital, Shorncliffe, England, on September 15, suffering from spinal Meningitis. Pte. Frost is a well-known Peterborough member of the 93rd, being a member of No. 5 Platoon, B Company, Captain Hale's "Red tigers," as the platoon is affectionately known to the rest of the battalion. He is Canadian born, and a son of Mr. John Frost, Albert street. Two other brothers are overseas, one of them, Pte. Arthur Frost, being also in the 93rd. Pte. Frost's many friends will hope to hear of his speedy recovery.

The uptown department of the 247th Battalion as represented by Lt.-Col. Johnston himself, rather put it over the recruiting squad at the Exhibition yesterday by gathering in two recruits at the Armouries. The Exhibition recruiters drew a blank as far as actual signing recruits was concerned, although they had an opportunity to put things squarely before many eligible young men and elicited a number of promises which will undoubtedly be redeemed later. The two who joined the 247th yesterday were both from outside the city, Albert Rowe, who lives outside of Lakefield and has several brothers overseas being one, and Austin Crank of Indian River, the other. Lt.-Col. Johnston will visit Norwood on Monday night when a recruiting rally in the interests of the new battalion will be held.

His many friends will be interested in learning that Capt. W. H. Blanchard, A.V.C., is at present at the front. His address is 55th Heavy Artillery Group, 1st Anzac Corps, B. E. F., France.

ENNISMORE WOMAN INJURED IN COLLISION

Mr. and Mrs. M. Geary, of Ennismore, homeward bound in a buggy on Stewart street, last night at 7.45 were struck at the Charlotte street crossing by an automobile driven by Dr. Harvey. A street car was travelling west at the time and the occupants of the vehicles in collision could not see each other in time to avoid the accident. The buggy was considerably damaged and Mrs. Geary was injured about the head. She was removed to Dr. King's office and received first aid from Dr. Harvey and Dr. King and later removed to St. Joseph's Hospital. It was reported that her injuries were not serious.

At the Grand To-night

The attraction at the Grand Opera House on Sept. 16th will be "A Pair of Silk Stockings." This comedy is in its third season in the United States, having played for one solid year in New York at Winthrop Ames Little Theatre. The play is the work of Cyril Harcourt, and deals with the troubles of a young married couple who have a quarrel over what make of motor car they shall select. The husband, seeking a reconciliation, hides in her bedroom. He is discovered by a former admirer of hers, and is bound with a pair of silk stockings. The result of this encounter furnishes material for three acts of screamingly funny situations.

MORE THAN HE ASKED.

The late Premier Bowser, of British Columbia, is credited with wishing that he could have a stronger Opposition in the Legislature. He has got his wish in full measure. He has not only got a stronger Opposition, but he will have the honour of leading it.

HOLIDAYING WARRIOR.

The despatches tell us that Sir Sam Hughes, Canada's Minister of Militia, is holidaying in Scotland. What is he doing there? There is not much chance of recruiting in Scotland. Her glens and braes have been reaped and gleaned clear of men. There is a better chance for Sir Sam helping recruiting in Canada, where enlistment is at present, not quite rampant in its activity. Sir Sam airily promised that Canada would easily supply 500,000 men. We are 150,000 short. We wish Sir Sam were here "on the job" —to show how easily it could be done. The efforts of patriotic individuals has done its best, and without substantial and effective and organized government backing cannot do much more. It is time the government took its innings in the recruiting game. If Sir Sam is not going to resign his portfolio and take up his rifle on the fighting line, he should be at home stimulating recruiting and speeding up munitions supply.

PREMIER BREWSTER.

Hon. H. C. Brewster, the new Premier-elect of British Columbia is, like many of our Canadian statesmen and leaders in literature and learning, a product of the Maritime provinces, a native of New Brunswick. By virtue of his natal origin he doubtless has, so to say, the marine mentality, the fish-reinforced brain that proverbially helps the people of the provinces down by the sea to succeed in getting "into the swim." He was elected to the Legislature in 1907 and re-elected in 1909, but in the general election contest of 1912 he was defeated, but next year he got a seat and was elected leader of the Liberal Opposition or rather, leader of the Liberal party, for there was no Liberal Opposition in the House, to lead. Now he comes back from the people with a majority at his back of forty-one in a house of 47. He is at the age when his physical and mental fitness should be in their prime—forty-five—and will no doubt give a good account of himself in the disharge of his new responsibility.

CIVIC MORALS AND STREET TREES.

Here is a question, ready made, for the new Calebite Society of St. Andrew's church to whet their wits upon—the proposal to remove street trees, to permit of access to private garages.

It involves consideration of the relations of private citizens to the public and vice versa, as well as the relations and moral and legal obligations to both of aldermen as custodians of the interest and protectors of the right and promoters of wishes and welfare of both.

The discharge of the duties and the meeting of the obligations, arising out of these relations are subjects to fundamental principles.

The governing theory of our laws fixing the relations, and defining the mutual delegations of citizenship, is "the greatest good to the 'greatest number'", that is to say, the interests of the individual must be subordinate to the interests of the whole or the general body of citizenship.

On principle the wishes and convenience of a private citizen have no status where their fulfillment or concession, conflict with the wishes or welfare of the public. A private citizen may not maintain anything on his premises, though it is as it is to him a harmless thing, and perse, quite within his rights, of his neighbour, the public object and by a very easy process of accord, gets it declared a nuisance. It is thus a principle of law and recognized in practice, that the rights and welfare of the public takes precedence of private convenience or wishes.

It therefore becames a nice question of civic ethics, whether aldermen have a right to give privileges to private citizens that come in conflict with public—to grant personal favours at the expense of the public.

The aldermen in giving permission to private citizens to remove two or three trees to provide garage entrances, insist that the removal must be done at the expense of the private citizens expensed, thus declaring that the permission constitutes a personal favour, founded on no right, no matter how desirable and convenient a thing the removal of the tree represents. If the removal of the tree were in the interests of the public, it would be the duty of the aldermen, to remove the trees at the public's expense.

It is very evident that it is a very difficult matter in the case in question to hold the balance justly and fairly—not to speak of legal considerations—between the public and the private citizen.

Trees are planted on the streets and by law become joint public and private property; and both owners have equal right of enjoyment of their shade and beauty.

Collectively, the street trees make for the beauty and comfort of the city as a whole, and their maintenance is in the interests of the public.

It becomes a very delicate question to decide between citizenship, convenience, and the individual partial property rights of the owner of property where a street tree stands, and what justifies permission of removal, that is manifestly contrary to the interests of the public.

One undesirable feature of such a permission is that it establishes a precedent that cannot be ignored in dealing with other similar requests, or in dealing with requests for other private favours as against the public.

If the aldermen give permission to remove street trees for garage entrances they cannot, on principle, logically deny a private request to use part of a street for a site of a garage if there is not sufficient private ground for the purpose.

The whole thing may seem a small matter, but it becomes a very important one, as involving the relation and inter-relation of the city, the public, and the private citizen to the street tree problem. We must at all reasonable cost of effort and action preserve our street trees, the crowning glory of Peterborough, the chief element of nature's contribution to the beauty of the city.

If the City, on mature consideration, decide that it is a good policy to permit of the removal of splendid street trees, as a matter of favour, to be paid for by the beneficiary, it should also provide that no tree should be removed from any street without another tree being planted at some place in the vicinity where it is needed; and not only another, but several street trees, for it will require a good many young trees to make up for the removal of a tree such as Engineer Parsons declares "a splendid tree," whose removal is a heart-break to a man who loves the stateliest and greatest gift of Providence to man.

The situation brings into prominence the whole question of the relation of the city to street-tree planting and maintenance. The aldermen are too busy to deal with it; and, if they are good men for the position, are too much concerned with the business aspect of civic government to deal, with any interest or success—for the two are inseperable—with any æsthetic enterprise, or one that does not cost a great deal of money.

It comes to this that the street tree problem will not be satisfactorily solved unless its solution is intrusted to some body like a Park Commission, to be charged with the whole responsibility.

The city turns over the care of our parks to the Horticultural Society, and very properly makes a liberal grant of money—money well spent, too,—to provide a beauty that perishes with the season.

A similar sum, or half a similar sum, would provide many street trees and much much-needed care for something that would be growing in beauty and charm and comfort-giving for generations.

Even now, as things are, the beauty that trees and flowers and the pleasant lawns of Peterborough combine to yield, challenges the envious admiration of visitors, and the beauty of all could be greatly enhanced by systematic measures of propagation and preservation.

Lest We Forget, Lest We Forget

The average casual reader of history often could not, at a moment's notice, tell why certain wars happened and what justification either or any of the belligerents had for unsheathing the sword. In our present efforts to obtain recruits and look into details, the reasons for Britain being in this war may be overshadowed A correspondent sends The Herald the following query:

Why and when did England guarantee the neutrality of Belgium, or what did England receive in return?

MARGARET REID.

Hawkestone, Ont.

Belgium's neutrality was guaranteed under Treaties of London in 1831 and 1839, the treaties being signed by Great Britain, Austria, France, Prussia and Russia. When the Franco-German War of 1870 came on, Great Britain—forseeing the danger of one of the belligerents doing just what Germany has done in the present war—warned both that the integrity of Belgium must be respected, intimating that she would enter the war against either party who violated that integrity. On August 8, 1870, "the warm gratitude of the King and people of Belgium to Great Britain" was officially expressed. On July 22, 1870, the integrity and neutrality of Belgium were reaffirmed by Count Bismarck, as Chancellor of the German Empire, and on August 9, 1870, Great Britain had a new treaty, guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium, signed by herself and Prussia, and two days later by France. This is the famous "scrap of paper" that Germany ignored, to her lasting future discomfort.

In the spring of 1913, while a debate was in progress in the German Reichstag on the Military Budget, the German Secretary of State said: "The neutrality of Belgium is determined by international conventions." The German Minister of War, in the same debate, said: "Belgium does not play any part in the justification of the German scheme of military reorganization. The scheme is justified by the position of matters in the East. Germany will not lose sight of the fact that Belgian neutrality is guaranteed by international treaties."

On July 31, 1914, Herr Von Buelow, German Minister at Brussels, assured the Belgian Department of State that he knew of a declaration which the German Chancellor had made in 1911 to the effect "that Germany had no intention of violating our neutrality," and "that he was certain that the sentiments to which expression was given at that time had not changed."

Now the tearing up of the "scrap of paper" comes. The Chancellor of the German Empire, in his speech to the Reichstag, and his announcement to the world on August 4, 1914, said: "We are now in a state of necessity, and necessity knows no law. Our troops have occupied Luxemburg, and perhaps are already on Belgian soil. Gentlemen, that is contrary to the dictates of international law. It is true that the French Government has declared at Brussels that France is willing to respect the neutrality of Belgium, so long as her opponent respects it. We knew, however, that France stood ready for invasion. France could wait, but we could not wait. A French movement upon our flank upon the Lower Rhine might have been disastrous. So we were compelled to override the just protests of the Luxemburg and Belgian Governments. The wrong — I speak openly—that we are committing we will endeavour to make good as soon as our military goal has been reached. Anybody who is threatened, and is fighting for his highest possessions, can have only one thought — how he is to hack his way through."

Our correspondent asks, "What did England receive in return?" Nothing but the world's respect for her plighted word, and her own self-respect. She endorsed that little "scrap of paper," and in doing so pledged the word of the British Empire, thoughtfully and carefully, but absolutely, and the uttermost resources of men and money of every part of the Empire will be exhausted to prove that British endorsement is good.—Montreal Herald.

Prohibition Statement of N. W. Rowell

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—The following statement was made by Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., Leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, on September 8th, before leaving London, England. The Liberal leader sailed from Liverpool on September 9th:

"September 16th marks a new era in the industrial and social life of the Province," said Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Liberal Opposition in Ontario, in speaking to The Globe to-day with reference to the coming into operation of the new Ontario Temperance Act. Thousands of our fellow-citizens have given years of unselfish service to secure the coming of this day; others have cheerfully given up for the public good that which they claimed to be their right; and the bill which passed the Legislature without a dissenting voice comes into operation as an expression of deep conviction as well as of the patriotic spirit of the people of the Province. All I have learned from Russians of the effect of the prohibition of the sale of liquor in Russia, and all I have seen and learned in France and Great Britain, confirm the wisdom and patriotism of the course pursued in closing all drinking places in Ontario during the war.

"When the war is over, and our gallant soldiers who survive the conflict have returned to their homes, and normal conditions have been re-established, the people of the Province will have the opportunity of saying whether they wish the law to continue, or to revert to former conditions. I am convinced that if the law is well enforced it will be as permanent as our local option laws have proved to be, and the benefits to the whole Province will be as great as, or greater, than those which have accrued to citizens in local option communities.

"The passing of the law removes from those engaged in the hotel business the civil and social disabilities from which they have hitherto suffered by reason of the bar, and I am persuaded that if the law is well enforced the time will yet come when even those who most strongly oppose the present act will acknowledge that the closing of the drinking places during the war was a wise and patriotic course to pursue.

History of British Columbia Government

The New Government, Virtually the Only Liberal Government in Its History—Not a Single Liberal Elected in General Elections 1912

Until the year 1895 the Government of British Columbia was supposedly non-political. In that year Hon. J. H. Turner became Premier, and the Administration became nominally Conservative. For a few months in 1900 "Fighting Joe" Martin was Premier, with the only Liberal Government British Columbia ever knew. Then Col. Edward G. Prior, who was really a Conservative, attempted to carry on a non-party Government for a few months, but was finally displaced in June, 1903, by Mr. (now Sir) Richard McBride. McBride held sway until last year, when he resigned the Premiership to accept the Agency-General of the Province in London, England. He was succeeded Hon. W. J. Bowser, formerly Attorney-General.

At the last general election in 1912 the Government secured a sweeping victory. In a Legislature of forty-two members the Conservatives elected forty, the Socialists two, and the Liberals none. Now the sweep is quite the opposite.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

The regular meeting of the Red Cross Executive was held in the Public Library Monday afternoon. The Packing Committee reported but 9 cases of supplies had been forwarded to Toronto including articles sent from Ashburnham Women's Patriotic League. Lily Lake Red Cross, South End Red Cross, the C.L.A. of Trinity Methodist Church and Lakehurst Red Cross.

It was unanimously decided not to re-open the General Work Room in the Public Library. The making of surgical supplies till further instructions should be received from Headquarters, but to concentrate on those supplies which were most urgently asked for, viz., socks, comfort bags, flannel shirts, dressing gowns and pyjamas—all of these articles are being made by Red Cross workers in the different churches.

In addition to the regular contribution to the Prisoners of War Fund a special sum was set aside this month for the purchase of canned fruit for the use of our Canadian Soldiers in France.

SPECIAL REPORT ON VISIT TO FRANCE, JUNE, 1916.

In company with Lt.-Col. Marshall, your commissioner arrived in Boulogne on Monday evening, June 12th, being met at the landing stage by Capt. Blaylock, Assistant Commissioner in France, who accompanied us throughout the trip.

We have during the first two days carefully inspected the stock of the Boulogne office and warehouse, and find that Capt. Blaylock has everything well in hand and that the receipt and distribution of Red Cross supplies is very ably managed by himself and staff. The indents received from the various Canadian Hospitals indicate that the supplies asked for are in many instances altogether over and above the class of supplies received from Canada, but that the extras have in most instances been met either by purchase in France or by indent upon the London Office.

I am pleased to report that the Boulogne Office has been able to deliver the supplies to the various Field Ambulances, Casualty Clearing Stations and Hospitals by means of the lorries now in commission, but owing to the fact that there may be an increase in the Canadian Field Ambulances and hospitals, as well as the possibility of our lorries breaking down owing to the great wear and tear under the extraordinary conditions existing, it may be necessary to ask for sufficient funds to supplement the present lorry convoy.

We found the stores in excellent condition—the stock well arranged and the books kept in a business-like manner—and would particularly mention the good work of Sgt. Testar, who has been connected with the Boulogne Office for over a year and has rendered most valuable service.

The work of Mrs. Blair in connection with the sick and wounded officers is worthy of special notice. Her reports to the Information Department, London, have been of great assistance and can be described in our official report.

The Assistant Commissioner spoke in the highest terms of the work of the motor drivers, who have been most faithful in the discharge of their duties, often carried on under most trying circumstances, and he singled out for special mention Private C. R. Grinham.

In company with Lt.-Col. Marshall official visits were paid to No. 3 General Hospital (McGill) and Nos. 2 and 3 Stationery—where we were most graciously received by the O.C's and staff, who expressed themselves as pleased with the assistance rendered to them by the Society through Capt. Blaylock, the Assistant Commissioner.

It is with peculiar pleasure I have to refer to the Recreation Rooms erected by the Society in connection with No. 3 General and No. 2 Stationary. These buildings are much appreciated by the patients, and the O. C. staff of the hospitals are most generous in their appreciaton of the great benefit afforded to the men by these buildings. It was our pleasure to attend concerts in each of these huts and words fail me to tell of the expressions of thanks of surgeons, nurses and patients. These recreation huts are exclusively found in Canadian Hospitals, and as adjuncts to Military Hospitals, it a conceded on every hand they are a great success and are appreciated by all.

During my stay in Boulogne it was my privilege to inspect the work incident to the receipt of a hospital train from the front. It was night. The train was met at the station by a convoy of Red Cross Ambulances amongst them some from Canada. The O. C. in charge was an officer of the R.A.M.C. The unfortunate wounded were from different parts of the Empire. The walking cases were all cheery and their wounds had evidently been well cared for at the front. As they defiled before an officer of the R.A.M.C., they were carefully and expeditiously detailed to the ambulances for conveyance to the several hospitals in Boulogne and vicinity, and it affords me the greatest pleasure to testify to the kind and sympathetic manner in which the (to me, unknown) officer of the R.A.M.C. handled these unfortunate men. It would be wrong of me to close this portion of my report without placing on record my appreciation of the careful manner in which the stretcher bearers dealt with the lying-down cases, as well as of the easy way in which the ambulance drivers drove them to the hospital.

Leaving Boulogne on Thursday morning, we arrived in Paris that evening, and were met by Capt. Blaylock. On Friday we visited No. 4 Canadian Stationary Hospital, St Cloud, where the patients are all French soldiers.

We have here a depot of supplies which is made good use of by the Hospital, and the Chief Surgeon stated that it would have been impossible for him to have done the work he had accomplished without the aid of the Canadian Red Cross.

At this Hospital we have erected a recreation hut which is chiefly for the use of the Nursing Staff as the Nurses had no accommodation of the kind. Both the O.C. and Acting Matron, as well as several of the Nurses we met there expressed their appreciation of the benefits of the place.

A visit was paid to the buildings erected by the French Governments for the Red Cross stores intended specially for the French Hospitals, and arrangements were made for the expansion of this portion of the Society's work. Subsequently we were fortunate in obtaining from M. de Piessac the promise that the French Government would accept the receipt in London of some five thousand cases of supplies each month, and the Assistant Commissioner was instructed to secure additional help, whereby the work could be expanded so as to meet the requirements of the French Hospitals as regards Red Cross stores.

In this connection I would particularly note the valuable assistance we have received from the Hon. Phillippe Roy, General Commissioner for Canada in Paris, who for months past has rendered most valuable services in the work of distribution of our stores to French Hospitals. It is regrettable that owing to his official duties the Society cannot continue to have the benefit of his voluntary services. We greatly appreciate all he has done for the Society in the past, but realize it is impossible for him to give so much of his time to more closely supervise the work as is now necessary, but we are assured that he will assist us as far as his official duties will permit.

In company with Col. Marshall, calls have been made and interviews have been obtained with the representatives of the three French Red Cross Societies, viz: Secours aux Blesses Militaries, Association des Dames francaises and Union des Femmes francaises.

Each of the Societies expressed its thanks to the Canadian Red Cross Society and the people of Canada for their generosity and kind libetality and gladly accepted the offers of increased assistance in the placing of large quantities of stores at their disposal.

Commissioner

WAR LOAN
DOMINION OF CANADA
Issue of $100,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st October, 1931.
PAYABLE AT PAR AT
INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st APRIL, 1st OCTOBER.
PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.
ISSUE PRICE 97½
A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st APRIL, 1917.
THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above named Bonds for subscription at 97½, payable as follows:—
10 per cent on application;
30 " " 16th October, 1916;
30 " " 15th November, 1916;
27½ " " 15th December, 1916.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred million dollars exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of October, 1916, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the October instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, or Victoria.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 23rd September, 1916.

TOMBS TO LET BY YEAR.

On the summit of the Cerro del Trosada, to the west of the city of Guanajuato, Mexico, is the Pantheon. The four high walls surrounding the cemetery consist of vaults, tier upon tier, in which the remains of the dead are placed pro tem., or in perpetuity, according to the ability of the relatives to pay rent. It is not an uncommon but a grewsome sight to see a rubro plodding wearily up the hill with a casket hired for the occasion, strapped on its back.

At the gates disposal of the remains is summarily made if the deceased was poverty stricken, or maybe a niche in the walls is rented for a period of five years, after which time the bones will be placed in a common ossury. For a small fee the attendant will admit the visitor to the "chamber of horrors." A winding stair leads to the abode of the dead.

A CANADIAN DRAMATIST WHO IS SUCCESSFUL

Successful Canadian dramatists have not been numerous, but William Andrew Tremayne, author of "The Black Feather," which the sparkling and ever popular comedian, Albert Brown, is to present here within a day or two may justly claim an honourable record in that respect. For upwards of twenty years his pen has been busy, and though of late years, his name has not been often seen, it is because he was one of the pioneers of the movie scenario. Millions of playgoers have applauded his scenarios, unaware that the creater of them was a Canadian. With "The Black Feather," he returns to the acted drama, with a well-written, exciting and amusing play. His home is Montreal, and his father was a prominent citizen of Quebec. His mother was a daughter of Prof. Andrew of Aberdeen and McGill Universities. He himself was born in 1864, and as a young man entered the offices of the G.T.R. at Montreal. At the same time he devoted himself to the writing of poetry and short stories, and his entry into the theatrical field was as author of "The Notary," a one-act piece written for the great character actor, Felix Morris. This was in 1893. In 1895 he produced the delightful farce, "Lost 24 Hours," in which Robert Hilliard starred for two seasons. His next successful offering was a romantic drama dealing with the Mississippi bubble, which set all France by the ears in the eighteenth century. This was produced by Robert Mantell, and was long retained in his repertory. In 1899 he made a successful dramatization of Joseph Hatton's novel, "The Dagger and the Cross," which Mr. Mantell also used for many seasons with unfailing popular approval. In 1901 his drama of mediaeval Germany, "A Free Lance," won wide approval in Great Britain. Tremayne has written several other plays which are still used in the various stock companies of the United States, including "J. Brown, M.D.," "The Triumph of Betty," "A Lesson in Diplomacy," and "The Morning After." Mr. Tremayne is a quiet, unobtrusive gentleman of wide scholarship, and he regards the comedy he has written for Mr. Brown as his best effort.

FOOD IS SOUGHT IN GARBAGE PILES

LONDON, Sept. 15.—An American woman who recently returned from Beirut, Syria, by way of Turkey, Bulgaria, Austria-Hungary and Germany contributes to The Times an account of her two years' experience there. She says:

"The Levant is starving. This is no figure of speech, but the literal truth. Our party crossed the whole of Europe at war, visited the four countries of the Central Powers, and saw a lot we had rather forget than remember but nothing existing in Europe can even be compared with the present condition in Asiatic Turkey."

She then describes the plague of locusts in 1915, which she says, began the calamity. After the initial swarms had passed over and settled in the plains, where they laid their eggs, the Red Cross ad other institutions sent out men and boys to dig up the eggs. Thousands of bags full were gathered but all in vain. Presently the larvae appeared.

"Like armies of black ants they marced across the plain. Every growing plant was stripped, herbs, bushes and trees were left naked, robbed even of their bark. At the end of July the whole olive and grape crop had gone.

"Toward spring cases of starvation began to be known. People were found in the streets unconscious. We passed women and children lying by the roadside with closed eyes and ghastly pale faces. It was a common thing to find people searching the garbage heaps for orange peel, oud bones or other refuse, and eating them greedily. We even heard that in a barren district of the Lebanon range cases had been found of eating human flesh."

NO RICE FOR KAISER.

Swiss Export Commission Refuses Request of 'All Highest.'

PARIS, Sept. 16.—The Swiss export commission has refused a personal request of the Kaiser to furnish his table with rice. Baron von Romberg, the German minister at Berne, asked the Swiss Government to authorize the shipment of 200 pounds of rice for the consumption of the Emperor and his family, but the export commission, being tied by an agreement with the allies, was unable to comply with the request.

A SCRAP OF PAPER.

A scrap of paper—"Killed in action." So
Die all the dreams of happier days to be!
And yet, thank God, you were the first to go
When Empire called for Men to keep it free.
Thank God for that pure, manly heart and true
That kept your face for ever towards the light
That lit the only path you ever knew
And made you victor still in death's despite.

[redacted]

Not all our sighs, not all our selfish tears
Can call you back, but you whose clear young eyes
Looked on the promise of the coming years,
You never grudged the final sacrifice.
Is it not written that your latest breath
Bade him who brought you succor not to stay
But to pass onward through that land of death,
To lead your well-loved soldiers in the fray?

[redacted]

A scrap of paper? Nay, a sacred scroll,
A great and glorious treaty, signed and sealed
In your heart's blood, wherein our Empire's soul
For those who shall come after stands revealed.
So thank we God who in His mercy gave
His own dear Son to death upon the tree,
For all who follow Him, who died to save
And win the deathless crown of victory!

Take Iron For Your Blood
Makes You 100% Stronger in 10 Days
Phosphorous For Your Nerves

Doctors are now finding thousands of people who are going through life in misery with kidney trouble, liver complaint, nervous prostration, headache, nervous indigestion, rheumatism, constipation and numerous other complaints, all due to lack of Iron in the blood and Phosphorus in the nerves.

Just as soon as the blood becomes thin, and nerves weakened you are unable to digest the little food you eat and at once your system becomes poisoned, causing liver trouble, kidney pains, headaches, rheumatism, indigestion, heart trouble, and you soon are a living thin, run-down, nervous wreck, and life to you then is a burden. The first thing you should do is to go and get weighed; then go to the nearest drug store, and get some Bonised phosphorus with Iron tablets and take one or two after each good meal and you will find that in ten days you are 100 per cent. stronger. The Iron will give you good rich think blood and the phosphorus will strengthen your nerves and the food you eat will give you 100 per cent. more nourishment than before: you will begin to get fat, your nerves will be stronger, and you will feel like you used to when you were 16 years old. You know as well as ever, doctor, that there is nothing like good old iron to give you strength and build you up, while phosphorus acts wonders on the nervous system.

The iron recommended here is an entirely new form of iron which will not blacken the teeth or upset your stomach.

Life is short but you can lengthen it by 25 years if you take Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, which gives you digestive strength, and the food you eat will be nourishment to you instead of poisoning your system, causing so many complaints, which you know bring you to an early grave. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron does not contain an atom of arsenic, strychnine or any poison which has been proved so harmful to ailment every tonic. It is harmful to take and is taken up by the system almost immediately, making you feel 100 per cent. stronger in 10 days. It is dispensed in this city by F. C. Webber stores at 50c a box.

CONDITIONS WERE ABOUT NORMAL

There Was Little to Indicate That a Prolonged Drought Was at Hand

To-day, there was little if anything to indicate the advent this evening of the Prohibition Act. A few drunks made their presence known, but conditions as a whole were normal considering the fact that this is the closing day of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition and more than the usual number of people visited the city. All the hotels in the city did a land office business, while the liquor stores were fairly inundated with customers. The approach of the closing hour may present some abnormal features occasioned by the attempt of many to observe the event in a practical way.

Chance For Cabarets.

That the bars will also use the player piano and the phonograph as a means of entertainment for their guests is also likely. Even on Sunday it appears that this form of entertainment may be given, as there is nothing in the new act which strictly prohibits it.

Another phase of the new law is that although cards were strictly prohibited in the bar under the old law, in making mention of this fact the new law merely states that they cannot be played for gain to the establishment or the parties playing. In mentioning the question of cards it does not say that a friendly game cannot be indulged in. The new law, it is said will permit music even on Sunday in the hotels. Whether the hotelmen will adopt this means of attraction or not, they have not decided.

EASY WAY TO SCALE FISH.

We all know what a tedious job it is to scale fish and to my way of thinking it was a red letter day when I discovered such a simple easy way, says a lady. Lay a fish in a dishpan, or any large vessel and pour over it boiling water, quickly pour off, and plunge the fish into cold water. The scales will then easily come off without flying all over.

Italians Reported On Offensive Everywhere

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ROME, September 16.—Italian troops are now on the offensive on the whole Isonzo front from Goritz to the sea, and the Austrian line has been broken at several places. The Austrian losses in two days of fighting are said to exceed 10,000.

Bulgars Retiring In Disorderly Retreat

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

SALONIKA, September 16.—Victorious Serbian troops are driving the defeated Bulgars in disorderly retreat back toward the Serbo-Greek frontier in the direction of the Serbian town of Monastir, said a Serbian official statement received here to-day. The Bulgarian losses are enormous, one regiment losing 1,500 men.

King Congratulates Commander

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, September 16:—King George to-day sent the following message to General Sir Douglas Haig, British Commander in France: "I congratulate you and my brave troops on the brilliant success just achieved. I have never doubted that complete victory will ultimately crown our efforts, and the splendid results of the fighting yesterday confirmed this view."

LARGE SUBSCRIBERS ARE RETICENT—WHY?

MONTREAL, Sept. 15. — Large subscribers, both corporations and private individuals, are displaying a singular degree of coyness in making known their subscriptions to the new Canadian war loan. One application of $600,000 from New York and a couple of local subscriptions ranging from $25,000 to $50,000 were announced yesterday. Apart form this, information vouchsafed to the public as to how the loan is going was confined to generalities.

Just what reasons lie behind the unwillingness of large investors, corporation and private, to help along public interest in the offering by making known that they are doing their bit, it would be difficult to say. Banks and investment houses that are closest to the situation take no stock in the attitude that the announcement of large subscriptions deters small investments. Rather the contrary, as they see it.

At the offices of Greenshields & Co. it was stated that the New York banking house of A. B. Leach & Company had applied for $600,000 in the loan, the subscription being placed through the Greenshields firm and other Canadian houses. This was the largest subscription made known here during the day. The Guarantee Company of North America, at a meeting of its Board of directors, decided to apply for $50,000 allotment. The North British & Mercantile Insurance Company, which had subscribed $175,000 through the Dominion Securities Corporation, increased the amount to $[illegible],000, and, also through the Dominion Securities, the Occidental.

Miss Grace Nevins Dead From Acid

WEALTHY SUFFRAGIST BELIEVED TO HAVE ENDED LIFE BECAUSE OF ILL HEALTH

New York, September 15. — With a bottle which had contained acid at her side Miss Grace Nevins, fifty-four years old, wealthy and an active suffragist, was found dead in bed in her apartment on the 4th floor of No 223 West 83rd Street The police having been told by neighbors that they had not seen Miss Nevins since last Friday, forced an entrance. They declared the case one of suicide, probably due to ill health, and notified the coroner.

Miss Nevins was a sister of Alexander G. Nevins, one-time editor of the Chicago Tribune, who died in 1902, and a niece of the late Cadwallader C. Washburn, founder of the Washburn-Crosby Mills, in Minneapolis, Minn.

Miss Nevins became prominent as a suffragist several years ago. Although she lived alone and seldom invited anyone to her house, she spoke at many suffrage meetings and contributed liberally to the cause.

No letters were found in her apartment, but spread about on tables and in other exposed places were a large sum of money and valuable jewels. Two bank books showing large deposits also were found.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer on account and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Hass, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three cakes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

Merely to See Our Wallpapers Is To Experience a Thrill Of Enjoyment

Let the home take on a cheery aspect for the dreary days are at hand, when you will turn to your den or living room to find enjoyment before the cozy glow of the crackling fire and nod over the evening paper, or some volume from the near-by bookcase. How do shabby walls fit into the picture? Not at all, they mar the scene, and yet how complete it can be made by a small expenditure in our Wallpaper Department.

We can supply you with the most elaborate or inexpensive papers which ever is most suited to your pocket book or the location of the room in your home.

We are the Agents for the Robert Graves Co. of New York who are the greatest makers of Wallpapers on the Continent; our stock exhibits many of their notable designs.

Now is an excellent time to have your papering done before the busy season is under way and the paper hangers are crowded with work.

Eggs Jumped To 35c. On Market

Eggs at 35 cents were the feature of a rather light market this morning. They opened around 32 cents and under a light supply the price soon jumped to 35 cents and some women stated that toward the close they had received 38 cents.

Butter was plentiful at 38 cents. It was even top heavy and moved off to 36 cents after eleven o'clock.

Chickens ranged from 90 cents to $1.25 per pair. Ducks were in fair supply.

The potato supply was light, but apples are coming in freely, selling around 75c. a bag.

WANT A BETTER PATERSON.

Evangelistic Association Enters the Campaign to Start a "Clean-up."

PATERSON, N.J., Sept. 10.— With the hope of "making Paterson a better place to live in," the members of the North Jersey Evangelistic Association, headed by George Arnold, a millionaire retired silk manufacturer, and "the man who brought Billy Sunday to Paterson," have tossed their collective hats in the ring and have entered the political fight in the city. Six Aldermanic candidates, all Republicans, have received the indorsement of the association. It was only recently that two of Paterson's Aldermen were convicted of selling liquor on Sunday and President George Arnold of the evangelists said to-day that his followers were prepared to work against "all evil influences."

THE STORE WITH EXCLUSIVE STYLES

Barrie's FURRIERS

LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR DEPARTMENT

¶ An impression appears to have gained credence in some quarter that this department only carries the Higher Grade Garments in SUITS, COATS, DRESSES, WAISTS and SKIRTS, and while this may be and as a matter of fact is actually true, in a general sense, on the other hand the BARRIE policy is to cater for all tastes and pockets, exactly the same care being exercised in the selection of the more reasonably priced garments as in the case with the more expensive ones.

¶ Further, a lady desiring, say for example a suit at $15.00, $20.00 or $25.00 is absolutely certain of receiving just the same measure of courtesy and attention as a lady buying one at $60.00 or $70.00.

¶ Several ladies visiting the store for the first time have commented on this fact remarking also that Barrie's Limited is one of the prettiest and best equipped stores in Canada while the attention and service given is beyond question.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, and dissolves the fatty tissues, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $5.00 postal note or money order. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 290, Montreal, Can.

INTENSITY OF INTEREST IN THE WAR FRONTS CAUSES LULL AT HOME

Nobody Cares About Politics Just Now in Watching the Progress of the Gigantic Battles---Public Opinion in British Isles is Extraordinarily Optimistic.

By T. P. O'Connor

London, September 16.—The cannons roar louder and more incessantly than ever making the silent lull that has come over the political world at home seem more eloquent by comparison.

The intensity of interest and the anxiety concerning the many battle fronts in fact overwhelm every other topic, although occasional attention is given to such subjects as the relationship between capital and labor after the war. Nobody really cares about anything except the progress of the gigantic battles.

Public opinion remains extraordinarily optimistic. Even the Roumanian reverse was discounted as a mere sideshow which will be obliterated when the Russian masses have joined the Roumanians in overwhelming force against the Germans and the Bulgarians.

A sigh of relief also has gone up at the break of the long stalemate at Saloniki, although as yet accurate information from that quarter is very scarce and there is much uncertainty as to what can be done by the allied forces under such topographical conditions.

Ireland has come more to the front this week than any week since the opening of the war. Two Irishmen are among the new recipients of the Victoria Cross. The extraordinary dash and valor of the Irish regiments in the battle for Ginchy and the death at twenty of little Corporal Holmes, an Irish Catholic boy, born at Fulham, a London suburb, have thrown the bravery of the Irish soldiers into the forefront of even the gigantic battle panorama.

CHANGED SPIRIT.

It is a sign of the changed spirit of the times and of the substitution of Lloyd George for Kitchener at the War Office. The events, above described, are now recorded in full and even enthusiastically in all the English newspapers.

The news from Ireland itself shows that the reaction in favor of Redmond and the Irish party, which began as the horror over the executions diminished, has made again progress within the past few weeks, but there must be a lull yet awhile. The Irish leaders are remaining silent, though all recognise the enormous improvement in the temper of the people.

At the moment there is a curious paradox in that the eagerness for a settlement of the Home Rule problem is perhaps even keener among Englishmen than among Irishmen. But times, however, are not yet ripe for the re-opening of the question.

FORMLESS OPPOSITION.

I have described how the formless and leaderless opposition in the House of Commons in time became coherent and formidable by the successive breaking off in the ranks of the Cabinet. The first to go was Mr. Hobhouse, a good administrator and a fair speaker, but he had not attained a sufficiently strong position in the Cabinet to be a leader of a formidable Opposition. The first real stroke of luck for the new Opposition was the resignation of Sir Edward Carson. Sir Edward Carson's career as a Minister was somewhat curious. He never has cared for office, and it is believed that he would not have gone into the Cabinet if it had not been for the strong pressure put upon him by Mr. Bonar Law, who has always had a very high regard for both his intelligence and his energy. His appointment to the Cabinet was, and most people know, a great mistake. It was one of the score of causes which helped the Sinn Feiners to obtain recruits and to precipitate a rebellion Sir Edward, however, was not long within the Cabinet until he found himself entirely out of harmony with his colleagues. He is a man of considerable firmness and a great deal of energy; hates vacillation and inaction; is lacking in the patience of such temperaments, and found in a composite Coalition Government with many conflicting tendencies and many very different personalities a machine which struck him as incapable of making war vigorously. There was no fiercer assailant accordingly of any lack of energy in any department, and he was especially severe on the shortages of the War Office as it was then constituted. The coming of his revolt was indicated in a curious way. One day while the Cabinet was sitting he was seen at a table in one of the smoke-rooms of the House of Commons in conversation with his old group of friends, of whom the chief are Mr. Ronald McNeill and Colonel Craig. Everybody instinctively knew what was up, and it was no surprise that in a day or two his resignation was definitely announced. It is one of the many curiosities of this topsy-turvy time, that the colleague in the Cabinet he was leaving for whom Sir Edward Carson had the greatest admiration was Mr. Lloyd George. There was a certain similarity of temper between the two men which brought them together in a strenuous time.

WINSTON CHURCHILL.

For some time Sir Edward Carson was more or less alone, but then came the resignation of Mr. Churchill, followed by his return to his old regiment, and then by his reappearance in the House of Commons. For some time it looked as if Mr. Churchill's stay on the Front Opposition Bench would be short. When the death of Lord Kitchener led to the promotion of Sir Lloyd George to the War Office, there was a strong movement in favor of Mr. Churchill's return to the Cabinet as Minister for Munitions. His dynamic energy, his extraordinary powers of work and his resoluteness of character were supposed to fit him especially for a Ministry in which such qualities are very necessary. There were, I believe, also some of his former colleagues who actively supported his candidature. But it was otherwise decided by those in authority, and Mr. Churchill remains in Opposition. It is not the kind of life that suits him—especially in the middle of a big war—for he is essentially a bird of storm. If things were as formerly and a fierce Parliamentary combat were still going on, undoubtedly he would find himself thoroughly at home as one of the leaders of a bellicose Opposition. But in times like this any such attitude would be futile and unpopular. He has now and then given indications that he must be counted with and has been an active and vigilant critic, if not of the government as a whole, at least of some members of it. Experience and some adversity have had their effect in mellowing his character and giving it great self-control, and most of his speeches are entirely free from reproach; they state his objections clearly, but without anything, at least in appearance, of personal feeling. Even this, however, has not entirely saved him from attack of himself. He is one of those potent and vehement personalities that have the power of creating strong personal animosities. Probably, also, in his regime at the Admiralty he trod on the corns of many members of the great Naval Service who are only too glad to have an opportunity of retorting in kind. He cannot rise to make a speech of any importance without being immediately followed by Admiral Lambton Meux. Admiral Meux is not an orator, but he is one of the favorites of the House of Commons because of the blunt and rather original way in which he expresses his views, and Mr. Churchill seems unable to lift his head without the Admiral finding it impossible to keep from hitting him. It is a little like the vendetta which, for some reason or other, the Morning Post has always carried on against him. Lord Charles Beresford is now hiding under the mantle of the peer, but he also had his own apparently special reasons for disliking and distrusting the brilliant young politician, and rarely missed a chance of assailing him so long as he was in the House of Commons.

SELF-RESTRAINT.

The House of Commons is, as a rule very self-restrained, and it is against all the canons of parliamentary tradition to unveil motives of either personal dislike or personal disappointment in any speeches addressed to it. All the same, human nature asserts itself even there, and now and then you see in public utterances some of the springs of personal dislike or personal bitterness which play so large a part in the relations of men. As a rule, however, the springs are very well concealed from public sight.

The Opposition, with the two formidable figures of Mr. Edward Carson and Mr. Winston Churchill, immediately produced a change in the whole temper of the House of Commons. Criticism of the Government relapsed to something of the old spirit of the pre-war times. Any pronouncement from the Ministerial Bench, and especially from Mr. Asquith, was immediately subjected to pretty severe criticism. Many times mistakes, as to which the general tendency in war times, is to keep silent until the war is over, were immediately pounced upon, and exposure and discussion were compelled. Every Government, of course, makes mistakes in war time, and no government except that of Germany, in the first months of the war, could claim great victories over the enemy. The creation of a great new army and its equipment in this country, were necessarily slow processes, and anybody with a critical temper could find plenty to assail. In addition there were two such ghastly failures as the Dardanelles and Mesopotamia. For some weeks the tide ran steadily against the Government, and more than once it seemed to be quite impossible that it could survive. Sir Edward Carson had become meantime the central figure in one of the so-called "Ginger" Committees, and this committee gradually increased its strength and became intensified in spirit as the errors and the failures of the government came more into evidence.

FAMOUS PRECEDENT.

At last a crisis seemed inevitable. Sir Edward Carson's forces had at one moment reached to as high as 100 members of his own party. On the other side of the House there was also, as is known, another "Ginger" group and between the two groups there was a certain affinity of purpose and outlook. Sir Edward Carson apparently had brought things to a climax when he put upon the notice paper a motion for an enquiry into both the Mesopotamia and Dardanelles failures: and it was quite clear that any such motion as that, if put to discussion and division, would gain either a majority in the House of Commons or at least a minority formidable enough to make the position of the Ministry untenable. People began to recall the famous precedent in the Crimean War, when the appointment of such a committee of enquiry led to the downfall of the Ministry of Lord Aberdeen and substituted the more vigorous personality of Lord Palmerston as Prime Minister, and there would be another reconstruction of the Ministry.

OTHER LEADERS.

But these calculations left out of account the extraordinary and almost unparalleled adroitness of Mr. Asquith. Other leaders of the House of Commons may have had more commanding personalities, such for instance, as both Gladstone or Disraeli, but there has never been a leader there who had a greater power of saying exactly the right word for a delicate situation. Instead of waiting for the attack of Sir Edward Carson, he anticipated him.

On the very day that everybody was expecting that Sir Edward Carson was going to lead a tremendous assault on his position, Mr. Asquith got up and in the blandest way himself gave what the leaders of the Opposition was going apparently to extort from him. In a very brief and simple address and with perfect sang froid, Mr. Asquith announced the appointment of commissions on Mesopotamia and the Dardanelles. So what could Sir Edward Carson do? His guns were spiked, his position taken, and all he could do was to put in his pocket the passionate address he was doubtless going to make, and accept the proposition made by Mr. Asquith, and in less than half an hour a proposition which had been so menacing, full of thunder-clouds and potential earthquakes, became as smooth as a summer sea; and Mr. Asquith once more was triumphant over all obstacles and all opponents. It was all done so simply, so quietly, apparently with such spontaneity, that people had not time to wonder till it was all over.

DRINKING CUP MACHINE DID NOT WORK, BUT DR. BRADY STARTS THE ADMINISTRATION MACHINERY.

Albany, N.Y., September 15.—Dr. William Brady of Elmira, who upon the never to be forgotten day of September 5 dropped one cent in a drinking cup machine on a train near Elmira, has lodged a formal complaint with the up-State Public Service Commission. He seeks the cup or the coin, avowing that when the copper hit the midriff of the machine there was a click, two gurgles and a sniff, and that nothing at all came forth.

The claim put in motion all of the great administrative machinery that would be required for $111,000,000,000, two bits or a nickel. Dr. Brady declared that he had no interest in what it set in motion unless it was the cup machine.

them by the 57th band at 2 o'clock until 5.30 p.m. there were few dull moments. In addition to all the amusement features, a number of classes were judged in front of the grand stand adding to the interest.

Splendid Races.

Acrobats are all right and so are high-wire performers, but it takes a good horse race to bring the crowd on its feet, remarked Dr. Sinclair in the judge's stand yesterday, and the excitement that attended the two races at the Exhibition yesterday certainly corroborated the statement of the veteran starter. The first two heats of the 2.35 class were alone worth the price of admission; in fact one well known Cobourg man was heard to remark that the second heat was in itself worth the trip from the Lakeshore town.

The 2.35 race provided one of the most exciting contests seen on the local track for some time and had the crowd cheering madly. There were five entries, Danny Fisher, owned by J. Staples of Midland, Ora Tariff, owned by Charles Fife of Keene, Princy, owned by T. Hetherington, Peterborough, Minnie Brino, H. Ingram, Lindsay and Ora Medium, F. Montgomery, Peterborough, and there was something doing all the way. In the first heat Danny Fisher led all the way until a few feet from the wire, when Charlie Fife brought his Ora Tariff through in a driving finish, winning the heat by a nose. The second heat was a beauty. Danny Fisher just won, with Ora Tariff at his shoulder and Princy, the Peterborough trotter which behaved very badly in the first heat, a bang-up third, coming from away back to challenge the leaders at the wire. The four horses were in a bunch. These were the two best heats of the day, Danny Fisher taking the next two and the race, although Ora Tariff gave him a battle in both.

Ora Medium, Frank Montgomery's mare, took two spectacular spills during the race. The first came just at the finish of the third heat when Ora Medium stumbled and fell, her driver, Merton Storey of Peterborough, catapulting over the mare's head. Fortunately neither mare or driver were injured and Ora Medium was back for the fourth heat. In scoring up, however, she went down again and for the second time escaped injury, finishing the race. The summary.

2. Ora Tariff, C. Fife, Keene	1	2	2	2
3. Princy, T. Hetherington, Peterborough	5	3	4	3
4. Minnie Brino, H. Ingram, Lindsay	4	5	3	4
5. Ora Medium, F. Montgomery, Peterborough	3	4	5	5

The 2.50 class was another splendid race, although not as exciting as the faster class. Helen Patch, owned by J. Fox, of Orillia, won in straight heats, with Sedelia, owned by R. Elmhirst, of Keene, second, and Dr. Johnston, owned by E. W. Jones, Peterborough, third. Lady Mildred, a mare owned by J. Staples, of Midland, was first under the wire in the third heat, but was set back to fourth place for running. The summary:

2 Sedelia, R. Elmhirst, Keene	2	2	2
4 Lady Mildred, J. Staples, Midland	4	4	4

Dr. Sinclair of Cannington, who has officiated for many years at the Peterborough Industrial, is acting as starter again this year and gave every satisfaction yesterday.

The Jumping Horses.

Great interest was taken in the jumping contests by the string of magnificent horses from Cobourg. The crowd saw some splendid riding and clever jumping and the demonstration was thoroughly enjoyed.

Night Performance.

There was a huge crowd at the night performance, which was greatly enjoyed. Prof. Hardie, the La Tow Sisters and the Arab Troupe all staged sensational acts and the Queen's Field Ambulance greatly pleased with their exhibition. Mr. Jos. Wearing on behalf of the Speakers' Patriotic League, delivered an eloquent appeal for recruits for the 247th Battalion during the evening, pointing out that men, money munitions and Red Cross supplies were needed now as never before.

Queen's Field Ambulance.

The big military event of the afternoon and one that proved unusual and attractive, was the demonstration by the squad from Queen's Field Ambulance, Barriefield Camp, in charge of Sergt.-Major Beesley. Their work was new to the crowd and every detail was followed with keen interest. The squad, half of which come from Peterborough, are bright, clean looking soldiers, who carry themselves nicely and who show every evidence of careful training and intelligent instruction. Their stretcher drill was smartly carried out, the clockwork precision with which each command was obeyed winning the admiration of all. With six of the Collegiate cadets acting on the role of wounded soldiers the Ambulance boys gave a clever demonstration of bandaging, etc., and then showed how the wounded men are handled. The care with which the "injured" were placed in the stretchers and slowly and steadily carried off was commented upon. The effect as the six stretchers, each with a bandaged figure on it, passed the grandstand, was a striking one, more than one mother in the crowd was noticed to furtively wipe away a tear, thinking no doubt of her own boy at the front.

After the stretcher drill the squad followed with a splendid exhibition of first aid methods. Members of the unit simulated sudden injuries and illnesses and the balance of the squad applied first aid methods in a manner that evidenced they have made much progress in their training.

The performance by the Q. F. A. was produced to a close by a smartly carried out exhibition of physical exercise, their work being thoroughly appreciated. The whole performance was an eye-opener to the big crowd and the verdict was that if the whole Queen's Field Ambulance were as capable and as efficient as the squad sent here, they are a unit that is a credit not only to Barriefield Camp, but to Canada as a whole. Peterborough people were proud of the local boys who took part and pleased to welcome their comrades who hailed from other places. It was a splendid feature and the demonstration will undoubtedly result in more Peterborough recruits for the Q. F. A. Only twenty men are needed to complete the strength and Peterborough will undoubtedly add to its already splendid quota with the Red Cross men.

Attractions Were High Class.

The programme of grand stand attractions secured by the directors for this year's exhibition was undoubtedly the best offered here and the Peterborough Industrial is to be congratulated. Professor Hardy, the high wire marvel, lived up to his press notices and his performance on the wire stretched high overhead, was a thriller. Hardy made his appearance in a clown costume and his antics thoroughly amused the crowd. He followed with a disrobing act that was screamingly funny and then came a number of sensational features, including sitting and standing on a chair balanced on the wire, riding a bicycle, and walking the cable blindfolded and tied in a bag.

The Slayman Ali troupe of acrobats seven in all, staged a thrilling performance. Their pyramids were cleverly executed, but the seven scored their biggest hit when they came out on the race track and pulled off some rapid fire tumbling that electrified the crowd.

The Law Tow Sisters also scored heavily in a varied performance. One of them did wonders on a slack wire, while the other was responsible for an equally effective performance on a rolling globe. Afterwards the two united for a spectacular aerial act in which they performed all kinds of evolution while suspended by their teeth.

SAXON "SIXES."

The Saxon Motor Car was demonstrated for the first time in Peterborough at the Fair. It was shown on the Fair grounds by Mr. W. B. Sample. The general interest taken in this model is not confined to the large cities, as it scored well in review before the thousands of visitors at our own Fair.

The Saxon has a smooth-running mechanism and a great record of speed. It was the Saxon that made the fastest time ever made by an automobile from New York to San Francisco. The distinctly characteristic road performance of the Saxon is convincing evidence that it represents a marked advance in automobile construction. It is a car that rides easy and holds the road well, and is steady and smooth in action.

MESSRS. R. G. STURGEON & CO.'S ATTRACTIVE DISPLAY.

Among the strongest exhibits in the main building which is attracting much attention is that of Messrs. R. G. Sturgeon & Co., the local expert sanitary plumbers, and hot water heaters, of No. 202 Charlotte Street. "The Hydro Shop," as they have characterized their business, has certainly demonstrated that they can put up an exposition of their leading lines that does them credit.

This firm made an interesting and seasonable showing of "Good Cheer" cooking stoves and ranges made by the James Stewart Manufacturing Co.; also the Detroit Jewel Gas Stove, and various ranges of plumbing goods and sanitary fixtures. Besides these, the greater portion of the exhibit was occupied in showing the new Canadian "Briscoe" motor car, for which Sturgeon & Co. have been appointed sales distributors for Peterborough, Burham and Victoria.

The Briscoe car is made by the Canada Carriage Co. of Brockville. It attracted a lot of attention at the Toronto Exhibition and the beautiful lines and equipment of this eight-cylinder car received similar attention at Peterborough Fair.. The specifications of this new fleet-footed motor, which some one said "should run like a deer," was explained to hundreds of interested visitors, and prospective buyers were eager to learn all about its leading features. Most cars have some one talking point on which all of the stress is laid. But it is said that dealers like to handle the Briscoe because it's a real car throughout—mechanically and artistically. The Briscoe dealer can take up the car in detail from radiator to rear axle, and find at every step a selling point. Economy in a motor means a long stroke with relatively small bore. The Briscoe Twenty-four motor has an extremely long stroke—it claims to have the longest stroke motor among the host of cars. With a bore of 3 1-8 inches and a 5 1-8 inch stroke, it utilizes to the greatest degree the explosive force of the gas.

The other features of the Sturgeon exhibit were the "Good Cheer" stoves, which have been making fast friends wherever used. Their working qualities are highly spoken of, the fire-box especially having proved a great success. The "Good Cheer" is one of the handsomest pieces of kitchen furniture yet designed. Their "Pennant Junior" two-fuel gas and coal stove, combining a coal range in winter and a gas range in summer, was much admired. The Plumbing display consisted of bath tubs, toilet fixtures and water closets of the newest and most approved sanitary designs.

THE EMPIRE MECHANICAL MILKER.

Crowds of farmers and dairymen were attracted to the interesting exhibit of the Empire Cream Separator Co., made by their energetic representative, Mr. Fred J. Doughty of this city.

The wonderful mechanical milker was inspected by hundreds, who were specially interested in the modus operandi of the new invention. Practical farmers who have had the machine installed say that the Milker works to their entire satisfaction. Cows that had sore teats before using the machine are now all right. One farmer says he has milked 37 cows in 40 minutes with two double units, one man and a girl, and with practically little or no stripping after the machine. It is so simple that the demand among dairy men is rapidly increasing. Mr. Doughty reports a remarkable record of attached sales, himself having the honour of carrying off four of the $20 prizes offered by the Empire Co. for the salesmen who made the largest monthly records. The prospects for sales in this section was reported to be excellent.

The Empire Mechanical Milker claims to have valuable improvements over others. Instead of compressed air, the Empire uses simple atmospherical pressure. This is said to be safer and more economical. The vacuum pump and tank which operate the milker is driven by a gasoline engine, and works quietly and steadily. The vacuum pump is the famous Quincy pump, which has for half a century held first place for its efficiency. The self-oiler and self-regulating gauge are important features of this Milker. The outfit is sold in units, single or double, 35, 50 and 75, can be furnished with this outfit. One man can operate two or three single outfits, and milks quickly and without ill effects to the cows.

This Milker is advocated by all the leading dairymen, and it is interesting to see how quietly and contentedly the cows will stand while being milked.

Two of the Empire "Sta-Rite" gasoline engines were exhibited in operation, and were much admired for their wonderful simplicity and power. The Empire Cream Separator was also exhibited, for which large sales are being made every year on account of its superior qualities in skimming and for its durability as well.

DE LAVAL DAIRY SUPPLY COMPANY.

Opposite the main building the De Laval Dairy Supply Co. of this city, made a comprehensive exhibit of their products.

Apparatus and supplies of especial interest to the dairy farmer who believes in up-to-date methods as applied to dairy farming, including the world's standard De Laval Cream Separator, Alpha Gas and Gasoline Engines.

In the exhibit a separator was shown driven by a small H.P. Alpha gasoline engine, just the thing for dairy use; while a larger engine of 4 1-2 H.P. was in motion nearby, of sufficient size for almost any farm work.

The De Laval Supply Company handle Babcock testers and milk scales for those who believe in keeping a record of performance of each individual member of their herd; milk and cream coolers, sanitary milk and cream cans, sanitary milk pails, etc., for farmers who dispose of their product for city milk supply, or to creameries.

Mr. Chas. Cooke, manager of the silo department of the De Laval Co., was in charge of this exhibit, assisted by a number of expert representatives, who were kept busy explaining the merits of the different machines.

"OAK HALL" SYMBOLISES WHAT MEN SHOULD WEAR

The "Oak Hall" Clothing Store of George Street were the only exhibitors of Men's Clothing and Furnishings at the Fair. The enterprising local manager, Mr. J. H. Maher, put up a very interesting exhibit in their unique tent, on the main thoroughfare, which received many callers during the Fair. "Oak Hall" has been picking the winners in Fall styledom for men's and boys' wear and an excellent demonstration of their smart specialties was shown to exhibition visitors. Discriminating dressers were interested in this novel way the firm had of showing what the modes of the Fall season indicated by the smart styles being portrayed from different patterns of the new suitings.

Men's Fall ulsters were shown with belted backs, close fitting and short models, some with velvet collars, made of Scotch tweeds. Whitneys, chinchillas and tapioca cloths. Men's Fall and winter suits were shown in short models, two and three button effects, handsomely tailored from new checks, worsteds and tweeds, smart samples of the "Sovereign" brand, Sandford manufacture. Boys' natty suits were shown in different rough cloth effects, with lettered designs, and military features, the "British" design being the newest model for growing lads.

The exhibit was also a mirror of the new styles in men's sweaters, hats and caps, a specialty with Oak Hall being Warne Bros., St. Catherines' make of tweeds. Busy representatives from Oak Hall George street store passed out hundreds of pretty pictoral novelty card blotters, telling the story of good clothes at moderate prices. A unique puzzle card was presented to callers at the exhibit which entitled the holder to a discount of one dollar off on men's clothing bought at the Oak Hall store, and fifty cents off on any boys' clothing purchases. Also any person holding one of these puzzle cards, who makes a purchase of $5 or over, and can guess the nearest to the correct number of faces that can be made with the puzzle, is entitled to compete in a grand prize of a $10 suit, overcoat or raincoat. Get a puzzle card and try your ingenuity on this prize.

THE CHEVROLET CAR COMES TO THE FRONT

Three new models of the dashing Chevrolet motor car were shown on the Fair Grounds by the proprietors of the Manning Garage, Water street. This exhibit was in splendid view of all visitors, being situated opposite the main building, and was daily thronged by interested motorists. Mr. Manning, Mr. Howson and Mr. Appleby were kept busy explaining the leading features of their new machine, and a lively interest was taken in its handsome features and mechanism.

The Chevrolet models of Roadster and Touring car are powerful, quiet running machines, and the specifications will justify its claims that, for commercial and professional use, or for pleasure, the Chevrolet for 1917 will extend its circle of patrons in this territory. The Manning Garage is fortunate in securing the agency for the Chevrolet. The members of the firm are capable, hard workers, and expert and reliable in their business dealings.

There are now over 20,000 Canadians enjoying the pleasures of motoring with the Chevrolet, proving it to be a well-equipped automobile, at a price they could afford to pay. Such has been the phenomenal success of this car that modern methods of building and industrial expansion have been taxed to the limit to supply the demand. To-day the Chevrolet is built in the extensive Chevrolet Works at Oshawa—one of the largest and most complete automobile factories in Canada. The Chevrolet is distinctly a Canadian-made car, backed by a million-dollar corporation in which every shareholder is a Canadian.

"How's My Husband? Why, He's Divorced," Says Mrs. H. C. Egan

SO MANY PERSONS "ASKED AFTER" ONE-TIME GOLF CHAMPION THAT SHE MAKES AN EXPLANATION.

Chicago, Ill., September 15.—Declaring that she had tired of being asked how her husband was and wished to be relieved of further embarrassment, Mrs. Henry Chandler Egan announced that she had obtained a divorce on July 17 last.

Mr. Egan formerly was the western national and intercollegiate golf champion. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Egan of Highland Park of this city, and Mrs. Egan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McNally of the same suburb. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Egan lived at Medford, Ore. Mrs. Egan returned here two years ago, and since has lived with her parents.

Mrs. Egan obtained her decree secretly on the ground of desertion. She won the custody of a daughter, Eleanor. She intended to keep the divorce secret, but the recurrence of the question, "How is your husband?" embarrassed her wherever she went.

"I never imagined so many persons were deeply interested in my husband or so solicitous of his health," she is quoted as saying.

WHEAT CROP ESTIMATE 163,811,000 BUSHELS

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—In a bulletin issued the Census and Statistics Office publishes the first or preliminary etimate of the yield of the wheat crop. After a reference to the reduced yield in the western provinces, the bulletin says:

In Ontario and Quebec grain yields have been greatly reduced by drought in August; but in the Maritime provinces and in British Columbia the condition of the grain crops has continued to be quite favourable.

It is estimated from the reports of correspondents that of the areas sown about 12.7 per cent. of spring wheat, eight per cent. of oats, five per cent. of barley and 1.8 per cent. of flax will fail to produce any crop of grain. These percentages represent deductions from the areas sown of 1,432,300 acres of spring wheat, 849,000 acres of oats and 69,100 acres of barley. It is consequently estimated that the total yield of wheat this year will be 163,811,000 bushels from a harvested area of 10,085,300 acres, as compared with 376,302,000 bushels from 12,986,300 acres last year, and 161,280,000 bushels from 10,926,000 acres in 1914. The average yield per acre is 16 3-4 bushels, as compared with twenty-nine bushels last year, and 15.37 bushels in 1914.

FEW WOMEN CAST VOTES

Not Fourteen Per Cent. Out in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Less than fourteen per cent. of the registered women voters in Chicago balloted in the primary on Wednesday, according to returns to-day. The small vote was attributed to the scarcity of offices for which they might vote. There were approximately 22,000 votes of Democratic women to 14,000 Republican women.

The best way to mend either silk or cotton gloves that have worn out on only fingertips, is to turn them outside in and stitch close on the sewing machine. This does not shorten the fingers any more than darning when hole is large.

A good face wash, softening and whitening, is cocoanut milk. Grate a fresh cocoanut through a thin cloth and add what you get to the milk of cocoanut. A few drops of oil of lavender may be added to make the lotion more pleasing.

Maxwell

F.O.B. WINDSOR, ONT.

Maxwell motor cars have demountable rims and the same size tires on both front and rear wheels.

REMEMBER these important features, because they are not to be found on some of the lighter cars.

Maxwell cars have 3½-in. tires all around. This is a generous size. The tires are not overtaxed. They last longer and make riding easier.

Tires of one size mean that you have to carry only one size casing and one size tube.

Demountable rims, of course, are recognized as the best. They are on all good cars. Don't buy any car without demountable rims. If you do, you'll regret it.

These two features—along with the other complete and up-to-date equipment; the economy and proved endurance of the Maxwell, make it the greatest automobile value in the world today.

Roadster, $830 Touring Car, $850 Cabriolet, $1235
Town Car, $1300 Sedan, $1400

Fully equipped, including electric starter and lights. All prices f. o. b. Windsor, Ont.

LES DARCY THE LATEST PUGILIST TO JOIN ARMY

Australian Champion Enlisted After His Battle With Clabby—Many Other Australian Boxers Are Wearing Khaki

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Les Darcy, the famous Australian middleweight champion-boxer, who defeated Jimmy Clabby of Hammond, Ind., on points in a twenty-round contest at Sydney, N.S.W., last Saturday, has, with his trainer, "Mick" Hawkins, joined the colors and will shortly go into active service.

This information has been obtained from the London office of the high commissioner for Australia. In spite of the many thousands of Australians now in England and at the front boxing is still flourishing in the Antipodes.

HAVE TO IMPORT OPPONENTS

Darcy can find new opponents among his fellow-countrymen because of the whole-hearted enthusiasm with which they have responded to the call to the colors, but "Snowy" Baker has filled the breach with importations from the United States.

It is understood that Darcey's enlistment will not interfere with his projected contest with the American middleweight, George Chip.

"Bill" Squires, the former Australian heavyweight champion, who was knocked out by Tommy Burns of Canada in the States, has given up farming and also joined the forces for active service. Hugh Mehegan, another famous Australian boxer, has arrived in England with the latest contingent of colonial troops.

FRANCE HONORS CARPENTIER

George Carpentier, the heavyweight champion of Europe, who has been on active service with the French army since the beginning of the fighting in the trenches as despatch rider and in the aviation corps, has received further recognition from the French war office for his daring and successful exploits by being twice mentioned in the orders of the day and recommended for the military medal.

Leonard Has Apparently Recovered Missing Punch

Has Not Been Dangerous Hitter Since He Met Dundee and Tried to Copy His Style—Would Do Better to Imitate Kilbane

Benny Leonard seems to have found his missing punch. When he stopped welterweight Eddie McAndrews over in Philadelphia he performed a feat equal to any of his best performances when he was bowling them all over last winter. It was just about this time last year that Leonard suddenly developed the wallop which added to his skill as a boxer, made him the best lightweight in the country.

Leonard was making great strides until he tackled Johnny Dundee. He outpointed the Italian in both bouts, but his good hitting was no longer in evidence. Leonard still is but a youngster whose style is not set, and he unconsciously imitates the men he meets.

Watching the bobbing Dundee squat and leap and double himself into knots got Leonard doing the same thing. He began to do so much ducking and head bobbing that he could no longer keep his eye on the target or his feet firmly braced to hit solidly. Every time he led his left he ducked, instead of watching for a chance to shoot over his right when his left had created the desired opening.

Leonard now has reached the critical stage of his ring career. With good coaching he should become a great fighter, as supreme in his class as Kilbane is among the feather-weights. The coming winter will tell the tale. By the end of another season his faults will have become ingrained, and improvement will cease. Unless he selects the right style now he may never get on the right track.

Leonard could learn a great deal by meeting Johnny Kilbane, who professes to be most anxious to take him on. Even if Leonard were sure to run second it would pay him in the end to get an opportunity to study the methods of the feather-weight king. He has none of that foolish dancing and frantic ducking that mark Dundee's boxing.

Neither does he hold his head so low for fear of being hit that he cannot see, as Freddie Welsh does. Kilbane fights with his head up and both hands ready to take instant advantage of an opening. When Leonard is at his best he follows the Kilbane style very closely. It comes more natural to him than the dancing antics of Dundee and the safety first tactics of Welsh. A bout with Kilbane probably would convince Leonard that it does not pay to depart from it.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

FANS DO NOT ALWAYS KNOW WHAT'S GOING ON

Manager Bill Donovan Explains Why Managers Turn Deaf Ear When Supporters Demand That Pitcher Be Derricked

"If a manager took a pitcher out of a game every time an opposing club got three or four hits there would be few if any great boxmen in a few years. The minor leagues would have a big supply of pitchers who were never given the opportunity to develop."

The speaker was Bill Donovan, manager of the Yankees, and in his day as an active player one of the greatest pitchers that baseball has produced. He had been listening to some of the grand stand managers who have become so numerous of late at the Polo grounds. They had been howling for Bill to take out a pitcher. Bill refused to answer the demand, as he felt that such a move could hardly save the game. Furthermore, he felt that the young pitcher would be affected by the change. The second guessers were having their inning when the Yankee manager unburdened himself of his ideas on the question.

Encourage Young Pitchers.

"I have a young pitching staff for the most part," explained Donovan as he warmed up to the subject of changing pitchers. "My aim is to build up a winning ball club and pitching is the big part of any club. Take the Red Sox, for instance, not extra strong with the stick and slow on the bases, but leading the league winning a second pennant perhaps, because of a fine array of pitchers.

As I said, my pitchers are young, and I am thinking of the future. If I took out Russell and Shocker or Cullop or Mogridge or Love, in fact any young pitcher, every time a few hits were made, how long would they have any confidence in themselves? And I'll say here that a pitcher who does not believe in himself doesn't belong.

"To me victory means more than it does to any fan in the stands, but there is another side to be considered. I cannot break a pitcher's spirit for the sake of one ball game. I don't mean by that that a young pitcher never should be taken out. I mean that there are occasions when it is better for the club to have him stay in, though he may be batted hard. Now and then an Alexander arises, and is a pitching success from the start. He is the exception. The rule is that the pitcher must take the hard knocks before he is established as a winner.

"We never know our real strength until tested and that goes for a pitcher as well as for other people. The bases filled and no one out is a trying situation, but once a pitcher has pulled through safely he gains confidence in himself. Even if he fails he probably learns by his mistake what he should have done. If he is taken out of the box every time such a case arises how long do you suppose he would stick in the majors? We should have one flock of young pitchers following another with the inevitable result—a quick return to the minors. Let 'em go through the fire. They will come out better pitchers and improve your ball club, even if some particular game is lost.

"There are many angles to a ball game that escape the fan in the stands, yet he would have his judgment guide a manager. I am not speaking of New Yorkers alone. The same is true in all cities and all other managers get the same advice as I. A player who hits about one spitball a year connects on a wild swing at the ball. Another one is outguessed by the pitcher and he gets a 'bat handle' hit on a curve ball when he swung for what he thought was a fast one. A signal goes wrong and before you can tell it the pitcher is in trouble. There are dozens of these little angles which a manager sees and he realizes that the pitcher is working at his best, yet the fans in the bleachers are yelling that he should be taken out. It is a funny game at times, yet a cruel one on other occasions.

Many a Tragedy.

"They say there is no sentiment in baseball. I say there is, and it is working often when the fan never realizes it. There is many a little tragedy going on before the very eyes of thousands of fans, and many of them unconsciously are adding to it. I have seen young pitchers, full of ambition and courage, whose one object in life is to make a success of baseball so they may put the 'old folks on easy street,' or perhaps care for a younger brother or sister.

"The shadow of the minors always hangs over the young player, and each failure hurries his return. He is putting every ounce of energy into his work to prolong his stay in the majors, the ambition of every ball player, when he hears the fans yell in chorus, 'Take him out!' He is human and it hurts. It makes his work harder and he fails. He finally drifts back to the minors broken in ambition, when a little encouragement would have made him a success. While all this is going on a manager is being panned for straining a point to help the kid win his battle.

"I believe that the pitcher should be encouraged in his younger days, for his own benefit and that of the club. Every pitcher is batted hard at times, and sometimes when he has everything that a pitcher ever had. Why take him out when you know that no other boxman can do any better? There are days when a ball club could pound out hits if the pitcher threw pills and the batters use toothpicks. No pitcher can stop a club from hitting on certain days, so why use up more than one on a useless errand?

"The same applies in a great measure to taking out a batsman when a chance arises where some runs may be driven in. Manager are told frequently to take out this batsman and put in another. How can a hitter ever get any confidence in himself if this system is used? The weakest hitting pitchers in baseball have won games with hits, so why not use a player in his turn rather than a substitute or pinch hitter?

"I do not want to be misunderstood on this question. I believe in the pinch hitter, and let no chance to win ball games get away, but I do not believe that the player who may be slumping should be taken out whenever there is a chance to score a run. He would soon lose all confidence in his batting ability when a hit or two might be just the tonic for him.

"We have had a case on our club this year. More gameness I have never seen in a ball player. This fellow slumped in his batting and struck out continually, but he never tried to alibi himself for his failures. 'I'll hit it yet, I know I can do it,' was the best we got from him after he would strike out. He had been a good hitter and he still starred as a fielder. I kept him in. He was too game a fellow to be discouraged.

"Finally this player's health went bad. He never told me, but he confided to another player that he would not think of telling me because the team was so badly broken up by injuries. It was by accident that I found it out. He was playing one game of double-headers, it made no difference, on the hottest days, and going back to the hotel to eat a small piece of watermelon or some other fruit for his dinner. He was playing simply on his nerve and it is a wonder that he wasn't carried off the field. There was only one answer to that kind of work. His loyalty and his gameness wouldn't let him ask off.

"Yet I have sat on the bench and heard the fans yell for me to take him out! He heard it too, but never complained, never had an alibi. If the fans only knew all the little things that figure in a player's work perhaps they would not shout, 'Take him out' so often.

Give All Their Chance.

"Every player is entitled to the chance to make good under trying conditions. To the spectator baseball is recreation, to the player it is life's serious work, with always the uncertainty that another may be in your place to-morrow. No man likes to be pushed aside for another, and while I believe it is often the proper move to change hitters or pitchers, I know that many a player needs the test, that he is better for it whether he succeeds or fails.

"Many a little story of broken hopes might be written around those few words we hear so often:

"'Take him out!'"

PROGRAMME FOR VISIT OF THE COMMISSIONER

Local Salvation Army Will Have a Busy Week End

The programme for Commissioner Richard's visit to Peterborough tomorrow promises to be an elaborate one. At 7 o'clock to-night the Temple Senior Band, Junior Band, and the Indian Band from Indian Village will meet at the Temple and march to three different open-air stands, one at Hunter and George, another at Simcoe and George, and still another at Charlotte and George.

At 8 o'clock a combined march to the C.P.R. Station, where a great welcome will be given Commissioner Richards and party. A monster march back to the Temple, where a great programme of music and song will be given, in which the Indian Band from Indian Village will do the major part. Brigadiers Morcher and Green will be taking a prominent part.

Sunday morning at 9 o'clock a prayer meeting, to be followed at 9.35 by a march to Byers' Corner in Dverisville.

At 11 o'clock Commissioner Richards will preach.

At 1.30 the Songster Brigade and Indian Band will proceed by 'bus and jitney to the Sunday School Hall at Brailey, where the Commissioner will lecture again.

The Sunday School and Bible Class and afternoon meeting at the Temple will not be affected at all by this arrangement. They will go on as usual, the Temple Band in attendance, after which the Temple Band will assist in the Y.M.C.A. meeting at the Opera House.

At 6 o'clock in the evening there will be three open-airs in the same places as to-night, and the final meeting at 7 o'clock, conducted by Commissioner Richards.

Everybody cordially invited.

MR. STILLWELL AT MURRAY ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

On Sunday morning, at Murray Street Church, Rev. H. C. Stillwell, B.A., of India, will speak. This is the last visit before returning to India of one who once before delighted and edified the people with his stories of life in that country.

Mrs. Stillwell, who was born in India, will accompany her husband, and the congregation will be given an opportunity of meeting her.

Rev. J. R. Webb will preach in the evening.

ALLIES SUCCESSFUL ON THREE FRONTS

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(Special Cable)—Allied soldiers have swung forward on three great battle fronts in the last twenty-four hours, but have suffered reverses in Southeastern Roumania.

The British advanced their centre to within less than four miles of Bapaume before slackening their great offensive north of the Somme to permit the moving up of heavy artillery.

In Macedonia the Bulgarians' right is now in full retreat toward the Serbian-Greek frontier, according to official despatches from Salonika to-day. The Russian and French, co-operating with the Serbians, are following up Thursday's successes. The Italians have resumed their great drive toward Trieste, and are reported to have broken through the Austrian line at several places. The extent of the Teutonic victory over the Russians and Roumanians is in doubt. Official despatches from Bucharest admitted a retirement, but did not confirm the claim made at Sofia of a general retreat on a seventy-mile front.

Italians Make Advance

Examiner Special:

ROME, Sept. 16.— Italian troops have captured the summit of Mounts Caurios, Sangrado Height and large Austrian entrenchments near Loquiz east of Oppachiarella in their new drive, it was officially announced today. New Austrian prisoners number 1,877.

Annual Epworth League Rally

Young People of George Street Methodist Church, Are Preparing For the Season's Activities

The annual Epworth League Rally of George Street Methodist Church, will be held on Sunday and Monday, September 17th and 18th. On Sunday the League will be addressed by Major Rev. R. A. Frost. The Junior League will assemble Sunday morning at ten o'clock. The young people of the church are reorganizing their work for the coming season. During the summer months they have carried through a programme of outdoor work which has met with a large measure of success. On Monday evening the League will be addressed by Mr. Ivor Brock.

NO UNUSUAL DEMONSTRATIONS

Death of Open Liquor Traffic Comes at Seven To-night

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Sept. 16. — Reports from all sections of this city and from various parts of the province indicated that there has been no appearance of unusual demonstration to mark the death of the open liquor traffic to-night at seven o'clock. While rumours are afloat that the hotel keepers in some cities will at seven p.m. do a rapid change from hard drinks to soft stuff, and keep open till midnight, no word recived here of no word has been received here of actual announcements to that effect.

Toronto police will be reinforced to-night, and the military are likely to send down heavy pickets, as many soldiers are here on leave from Borden and Niagara Camps. Every precaution is being taken for the effectual handling of whatever situation may develop.

FOUR DIAMONDS ON ALLEGED DESERTER

Charged with being a deserter from he 156th Battalion, Samuel Alex. Boyd was remanded in police court this morning. Four diamond rings in the prisoner's possession attracted the curiosity of Chief Thompson as to their origin and an inquiry of Boyd's movements will be made.

FINED $50 FOR DRIVING CAR WHILE DRUNK

(Michael Conway of Ennismore, was fined $50 by Magistrate Dumble in police court this morning on a charge of having driven an automobile while intoxicated on Sept. 9th.

Charles Knight was taxed $2 for being drunk, and Charles Rye on a similar charge was given ten days to pay his two dollars.

Bulgars Retreat Further

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—A further retreat by the Bulgarian right wing in northern Greece) was officially admitted by the German war office this afternoon.

FORGED LETTER FROM GERMANY

Teutons Put Corp. Arthur Hogarth in Jail and Kept Articles Sent Him.

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—Evidence that in one case at least parcels addressed to a prisoner of war in Germany have not reached the man for whom they were intended, has been secured by Mrs. Wm. Hogarth, of Ottawa, mother of Corporal Harry Hogarth, of the 8th C.E.F. In the past year Corporal Hogarth has been a prisoner of war and for a year his mother has been sending money through the Red Cross in London, that he might receive supplies of food and clothing. A few parcels reached the prisoner, but the supply ceased after he refused to make munitions for the enemy, and was put into a prison. Mrs. Hogarth has obtained from the Canadian Red Cross in London a sample of acknowledgments received there purporting to be from Corporal Hogarth. It was a forgery.

E. L. Ives, United States Vice-Consul at Breslau, was appealed to, and a letter has since come from Corporal Hogarth stating that he had been called to the prison office to make a statement, that he had received no parcels except a few at first, and that his mail had been very irregular. The discovery of the non-arrival of the parcels and of the forging of acknowledgements in the Hogarth case has caused uneasiness in Red Cross circles here.

"The Black Feather"

When Albert Brown appeared in "The White Feather" sixteen months ago the critical public at once realized that a new star had arisen who would not lack support, so far as this country was concerned, and a warm welcome awaits him at the Grand Opera House next Monday, when he will present "The Black Feather," a sister play, especially written for him by the veteran Canadian dramatist, W. A. Tremayne, whose success in writing plays for Robert Mantell and Robert Hillard is still remembered by Canadian playgoers. Though Mr. Brown still plays the role of a secret agent of the British Intelligence Staff the plot and incidents of "The Black Feather" are quite dissimilar from that of its predecessor. The leading role is that of Dick Kent, son of a noted British diplomatist, and an attractive youth who is regarded as an idler, a pose he cultivates for professional reasons. He is in love with a Canadian girl who has been brought up by an uncle, who is a well-meaning but not very competent official of the foreign office. The girl's brother, who is a weak youth, has also through family influence obtained a post in the same department. The period of the action is July, 1914, and two German and Austrian aristocrats, secretly working for their respective countries, are seen preying on the weaknesses of the boy, to obtain valuable secrets of the foreign office. In a series of incidents, both humorous and exciting, Dick, the unsuspected servant of the Intelligence Department, manages to circumvent the manoeuvres of the foreigners, and, while conferring a benefit on his country, to save the family of his sweetheart also. Mr. Tremayne has devoted all his well-known skill as a contriver of effective episodes to devising situations that will show to the very best advantage the sparkling and sincere qualities of Mr. Brown's art. An admirable supporting company has been engaged and a gala opening is assured.

The Allies Continue To Win on Five Fronts

ITALIANS HAVE BROKEN AUSTRIAN 3rd LINE

Allies Advance On The Western Front

British Have Opened Bombardment on the Two Highways Leading to Bapaume---Allies' Successes Have a Profound Effect in Berlin---German Newspapers Are Now Preparing the Public For the Early Evacuation of Peronne and Combles---Retirement on a Wide Front May Become Necessary For Strategic Reasons.

OVER 4000 PRISONERS TAKEN

LONDON, September 18.—Forty thousand Germans have been killed, wounded or captured, since the Anglo-French armies resumed their offensive on the Somme with battering blows that bent back the Teuton lines. Fighting continued last night both north and south of the river with greatest fury. The Germans this morning were still clinging desperately to the Village of Denicourt under a heavy French attack, and making counter attacks against Berny and Vermandovillers, which were lost to the French yesterday afternoon. North of the river the British artillery are checking one German counter attack after another with storms of shrapnel, and at the same time have opened a bombardment of Grandcourt and Lesars on the two highways leading to Bapaume. The Allies' successes have had a most profound effect in Berlin according to The Hague despatches to-day. The German papers are now preparing the public for the early evacuation of both Peronne and Combles, and pointing out that a retirement on a wide front may became necessary for strategic reasons.

BRITISH FORCES MAKE PROGRESS.

LONDON, September 18.—The British forces made additional progress along the Ancre. Seventeen hundred additional prisoners were taken on Saturday, making a total of more than four thousand in the last two days. Fifteen German aeroplanes were brought down on the Somme front. The British have made gains along a front of more than a mile and a half north of the Somme. One trench more than a mile long was captured.

SUGAR DECLINES, FLOUR ADVANCES

Flour Market Uncertain and is Dominated by Wheat Prices

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

Office of Publication, Toronto, September 14, 1916.

The features of more than unusual interest to record are the declines in sugar and the advance in flour. All sugars went down 40c per hundred, and at these levels are holding firm at present. A steadiness is now given to the market in view of the slightly higher prices of raw sugars. As the season for marketing the beet sugar is approaching, higher prices for cane sugar are not anticipated. The flour market is an uncertain one. The situation is dominated entirely by the wheat market. The advance in flour during the week was 20c per barrel.

In dried fruits there is every indication that there will be slightly higher prices in the primary market in prunes. Growers are holding out for 6c per pound, an advance of half a cent over present prices, and there seems very good likelihood of the packers coming across. Currants will be at exceptionally high prices this year. It is expected the retail price will need to be around 25c per pound. Consumption is expected to be about 10 per cent. in normal years on account of the high prices. All canned goods hold firm in price. Nuts of all kinds will be scarce and high in price.

Eggs have advanced two cents a dozen during the week with supplies short. Hogs, live and dressed, are slightly easier in tone, although the market has not delined during the week. The falling off in exports is the reason assigned. Cheese prices continue to advance. Honey is beginning to reach the commission men in larger quantities, with the indication that producers are ready to come to dealers' prices. Business has been good during the week.

Seized at Bank In $160,000 Theft

MICHAEL SHORTELL, ARRESTED IN TORONTO, SAID TO BE SEEKING MONEY STOLEN FIVE YEARS AGO.

Toronto, September 15.—Michael B. Shortell of No. 6,639 Perry avenue, Chicago was arrested in the Bank of Toronto, while it is alleged, he was taking stolen Bank of Montreal bills out of a safety deposit box owned by Martin H. Flannigan, No. 164 West Fifty-first street, Chicago. The box was said to be crammed with money stolen in the sensational robbery of the New Westminster Bank of Montreal, five years ago to-day.

Flannigan was arrested two years ago on a charge of bringing stolen Bank of Montreal bills into the country, but he later was released. The original amount of the bills stolen was $160,000, of which more than half was recovered.

The bank was held up by four masked bandits, who late at night surrounded the office, and after gagging and binding the night watchman blew open the vault. After taking the money they escaped.

Ontario and Quebec Grain Yields Greatly Reduced By The Drought

First Preliminary Estimate of the Yield of the Principal Grain Crops of Canada Issued by the Census and Statistics Department of the Government—Effects of the Rust During August—Condition of Field Crops.

PRINCIPAL CEREALS

OTTAWA, September 18.—In a bulletin issued, the Census and Statistics Office publishes the first or preliminary estimate of the yield of the principal grain crops of Canada in 1916 (wheat, rye, barley, oats and flaxseed), as well as a report on the condition of all field crops at the end of August

EFFECTS OF RUST DURING AUGUST.

Correspondents report that grain crops in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, which were highly promising at the end of July, have been so seriously affected by rust and hot winds during August, that large areas sown will either fail to produce any crop at all, or have been cut green, whilst the yield of grain from producing areas will be very low both in quantity and grade. Whilst the whole of Manitoba and Saskatchewan is badly affected by rust, the conditions are distinctly worse in the southern than they are the northern parts of these provinces. In Alberta, rust, though present to a certain extent, has not proved destructive, and the grain crops continue promising. Frosts however of August 11 and, against late in the month did considerable damage. In Ontario and Quebec grain yields have been greatly reduced by drought in August; but in the Maritime Provinces and in British Columbia the condition of the grain crops has continued to be quite favourable.

YIELD OF PRINCIPAL CEREALS, 1916.

It is estimated from the reports of correspondents that of the areas sown about 13.7 per cent. of spring wheat, 8 per cent. of oats, 5 per cent of barley and 1.8 per cent. of flax will fail to produce any crop of grain.. Of the areas sown, however, 3 per cent. of wheat, 5 per cent. of oats and a small area of barley have been cut for green feed or turned into hay. These percentages represent deductions from the areas sown of 1,482,300 acres of spring wheat, 849,000 acres of oats and 69,100 acres of barley. It is consequently estimated that the total yield of wheat this year will be 168,811,000 bushels from a harvested area of 10,085,300 acres, as compared with 376,303,600 bushels from 13,966,300 acres last year and 161,280,000 bushels from 10,393,900 acres in 1914. The average yield per acre is 16¾ bushels as compared with 29 bushels last year and 15.67 bushels in 1914. The estimate for oats is a total yield of 341,602,000 bushels from 9,795,000 acres, as against 520,103,000 bushels from 11,365,000 acres in 1915 and 313,078,000 bushels from 10,061,500 acres in 1914, the average per acre being 34.88 bushels in 1916, 45.76 bushels in 1916 and 31.12 bushels in 1914. For rye, the estimate is 1,990,800 bushels from 101,420 acres, as compared with 2,394,100 bushels from 112,300 acres in 1915, and 2,016,800 bushels from 111,280 acres in 1914, the yields per acre being 19.63 bushels in 1916, 21.32 bushels in 1916 and 18.12 bushels in 1914. Barley yields 34,308,000 bushels from 1,326,800 acres, as against 33,331,300 bushels from 1,509,350 acres in 1915 and 36,201,000 bushels from 1,495,600 acres in 1914, the yield per acre being 25.89, 5.33 and 24.21 bushels respectively. The flaxseed estimate is for 8,625,300 bushels from 710,000 acres, an average of 12.15 bushels per acre. For the three Northwest provinces the total estimated yields are for wheat 145,466,000 bushels, for oats 243,114,000 bushels, for barley 24,502,000 bushels, for rye 601,000 bushels, and for flax 8,572,000 bushels. The average yields per acre of wheat are in Manitoba 10½, Saskatchewan 16, and Alberta 24¼ bushels per acre.

CONDITION OF FIELD CROPS.

At the end of August, the condition of field crops, expressed in percentage of a standard representing a full crop, was as follows: Spring wheat 69, oats 74, barley 73, rye 80, peas 68, corn for husking 67, potatoes 72, alfalfa 94, corn for fodder 77, pasture 86, hay and clover 103. All other crops ranged between 75 and 78. In Manitoba the condition of spring wheat was marked down to 37 per cent. as against 85 per cent., and in Saskatchewan to 61 per cent. as against 95 per cent. at the end of July. The percentage of 37 for Manitoba on August 31 is the lowest on record since the present crop reporting system began in 1908.

5,000 HOGS EAT DENVER'S GARBAGE

Easy Solution of Garbage-Disposal Problem.

Why the garbage problem in Denver has been solved with apparently so little friction has been a mystery to many an Eastern city official. Successful disposal by feeding to hogs has generally been considered a process restricted to comparatively small cities; nevertheless, the garbage of Denver, with its 225,000 people, has gone to a hog ranch for the last ten years, and the process is more of a success to-day than ever before. A successful hog ranch of enormous proportions, on which garbage is not the only diet, was the answer.

PRISON IS READY FOR KAISER BILL

According to French papers the allies are as firmly determined as ever to capture the German emperor and to incarcerate him for life on the island of St. Helena where Napoleon ended his career as a prisoner. The "Petit Provencal" says: "The plan to capture the Kaiser has never been given up by England and France, although this aim of the war has not been mentioned by the press during the last twelve or fifteen months. The fate of the unspeakable chief of the Huns, this beastly modern Attila, will probably be decided before the end of the present year. If he cannot be caught in the field when the remnants of his shattered armies are exterminated by the great offensive of the allies, his surrender by his people will be the first peace condition. The prison in which he will have to spend the rest of his miserable life has long been prepared by the British government of St. Helena. His quarters there will be far less comfortable than those of Napoleon were. His oldest son and heir, the Crown Prince, will be executed with Admiral Von Tirpitz and a number of other beasts who are commanding the Boches."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Loaves And Ladies

A Victory For the Wives

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Alonzo Dibble's store on the main street of Roseville and in the same room with the postoffice was the forum in which the male citizens of the village got together to discuss every new departure from the beaten track of the world's ongoing.

Alonzo Dibble, being peculiarly interested in the sale of twenty-five cent packages of smoking tobacco and cigars at prices all the way up from one cent stogies to five cent perfectos, took care that the meetings should not want for a topic and that the debate should not end when it struck a rut.

While the men of Roseville had been discussing these problems the women had started the suffrage society. The men had not yet entered upon this topic and might not have done so had not Amos Gwynne squelched the war in Mexico by his unpatriotic remark. There had been no sales of stogies for some time, and no one had called for birch beer. The shopkeeper, fearing that the meeting would break up without any more purchases, placed the palm of his hand on the counter and flourished his other arm dramatically.

"I say," he shouted, "there's more honor for a woman to bake a perfect loaf of bread than it is to vote nine times for a president of the United States!"

There was an instant's silence among the men gathered around the glowing stove; then Hen Lardiay broke the stillness.

"There ain't much honor for any one, man, woman or child, to vote nine times for president not on the same day, no, sir!"

After the laughter had died away the storekeeper resumed his explanation.

"It's all right to make fun of it, Hen, but you ain't got no wife, and you're one of the God feariu', old fashioned kind who don't want no vote but the vote of her family that she's the best mother and the best cook in the world. But what I do mean is this. Ever since the women of Roseville started this here Ladies' Suffrage society they've stopped being such good housekeepers. Look at the business in homemade baking that Mrs. Dell Smith has built up. Why, I'll bet I've sold more flour to Mrs. Smith than to any one else in town. See 'em come in here day after day and buy Mrs. Smith's bread and take it home to their families. I'll bet there's more men in this here store this minute who said to his wife at supper tonight, 'What good bread Mrs. Dell Smith makes!' When a man says that, well, his wife ain't got anything to be proud of."

"You're right, Alonzo," agreed James Gray. "But what we going to do about it?"

Alonzo was distinctly cross eyed. Now, one of his orbs was fixed on James Gray and the other wandered over to the door where a woman's form stood motionless by a barrel of brooms.

"Yes, what we going to do about it?" haw-hawed Hen Lardiay.

"Can't do anything," said Alonzo slowly. "But I don't blame any man for getting tired of a woman who blats all day about running the gov'ment when she can't even bake a decent loaf of bread. Some day the women will wake up and find they've got the vote and nothing else by gosh!"

The door closed gently.

The woman by the barrel of brooms had slipped out.

"Who was that?" asked Hen Lardiay.

"Susie Pinkham."

"Great heck! Do you suppose she heard what you said, Alonzo?"

"I hope so," said the storekeeper grimly.

"If she did," went on Hen impressively, "the news is running like wildfire through the hull village. Susie Pinkham's the worst gossip in Roseville."

"And the best is Hen Lardiay!" jibed Alonzo.

James Gray walked slowly up the street toward home. He was turning in his mind all that Alonzo had said about bread and women, and he had reason to agree with the storekeeper on more than one point of his argument.

Mrs. James Gray was the president of the Ladies' Suffrage society, and she it was who was urging the fair members to affiliate themselves with the state organization. It was Mrs. Gray who had suggested to Dell Smith's wife that home baking would be a profitable enterprise, and from that moment the idea had taken possession of Roseville women.

Husbands found delicious homemade bread on the table, but Mrs. Smith had baked it; likewise crisp cookies and loaf cake and pies. The members of the society to a woman turned their weekly baking over to the industrious little woman who was not even a member of their club.

"Oh, I haven't got any time," Mrs. Smith had good naturedly said in excuse. "I'm helping Dell pay off the mortgage. When that's done I'll think about it."

Meantime she baked and baked, and the women of the society met and debated and tried to better conditions in the village.

James Gray was thinking about these things. He did not marvel at Alonzo's outburst of wrath. Alonzo's wife was secretary of the society, and instead of keeping his books as she had heretofore she had pleaded too much other work in hand, so Alonzo had hired a bookkeeper.

The supper table was set when James Gray entered the house. His wife was perusing a pamphlet and smiled a greeting over the top of it, but she went back to her reading without making any remark.

The table looked very inviting. There were an immaculate cloth, the white and gold china, a platter of pink boiled ham from the store, a dish of store pickles, another dish of tinned baked beans, a glass dish of canned peaches from the store, some of Mrs. Smith's delicious graham bread and a plate of cake that was undeniably Mrs. Smith's production.

James washed his face and hands and brushed his hair; then he sat clumsily down to supper. Mrs. Gray had put away the pamphlet and was sitting behind the teapot when he entered.

There were only two of them, for their daughter, Annibel, was married and lived across the way with her husband, Oscar Wren.

"Isn't it?" asked his wife eagerly. "Lizzie Smith can make the best bread in town."

"She can hold the championship so long as none of the other women compete with her," hinted James morosely.

Mrs. Gray recapped her husband with calm surprise.

"I suppose you were in the store when Alonzo expressed his opinion of the Ladies' Suffrage society?" she asked seriously.

"Susie Pinkham been here?" he countered.

"Why?"

"Oh, I recognize the signs. Please pass me some of Mrs. Smith's cake," he said pleasantly.

Mrs. Gray frowned and was silent during the remainder of the meal.

After supper James put on his coat and went to the lodge meeting. Mrs. James put on her hat and went to a special meeting of her society.

"Where's Ida Jones?" asked Alonzo.

"I sent her home—paid her off and discharged her," responded his wife, making an entry in the daybook and carefully blotting it. "I've got plenty of time to do this work."

"What? You give up that fool society?" demanded Alonzo.

"No. I can do both if you don't bother me by talking too much," she smiled at him.

"Oh, I ain't got any time to talk," he said hastily. "You know I've got my hands full looking after this store. You can't do more'n one thing at a time," he added as he moved away.

Mrs. Dibble looked at the three clerks nimbly waiting on customers. She glanced at the stableman standing by the barn door. She thought of herself in the bookkeeper's cage, and a little smile curled her lip.

For a number of weeks Alonzo Dibble was silent on the question of women's votes. He noticed that Mrs. Smith omitted her usual order for flour, and he told his clerks that she was probably buying from his competitor.

On the tables of the members of the suffrage society continued to appear delicious home baked bread, toothsome pies and cakes, and the town rang with the praises accorded Mrs. Dell Smith as a model wife and mother and gave credit to the fact that she was not a member of the society.

"A woman can't be a good wife and mother and 'tend to her baking and brewing and do men's voting too!" declared Alonzo Dibble to his usual audience.

From the back door leading to his house came the calm voice of Alonzo Dibble's wife. Behind her, twenty strong, were the members of the society.

"Fiddlesticks!" said Mrs. Dibble. "Just because a man can't attend to more than one thing at a time it's no indication that a woman may not be able to do two or three things well!"

"Prove it!" barked Alonzo. "Just look at all Mrs. Smith's bread and cake and pies we've been eating, all because our wives ain't got time to do it and run their blamed old society. Pooh!"

"Well," began Mrs. Dell Smith in her brisk manner, "I'll confess I haven't done any baking for any one outside my family for over three weeks. If you men folks have enjoyed your bread and cake and pies I guess it's all to the credit of your wives. I think they patronized my home cooking more to help me pay off the mortgage than anything else." Her voice broke, and she hid herself among her friends.

Mrs. Dibble finished the argument.

"So you see," she said, "the women of Roseville can attend to their housekeeping, do their sewing and bake their own bread and organize a suffrage society and vote when the time comes."

"Let us drink to the success of the Ladies' Suffrage society," he said solemnly.

And so ended the discussion of loaves and ladies, it having been proven that the ladies were quite capable of looking after the latter.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

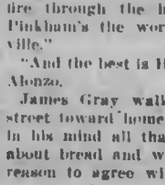
Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentation, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of Limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

AT ALL STAGES OF LIFE

The Woman's Medicine. Good for All Ages. Mrs. Harold Smith's Experience.



Clarksburg, W. Va.—"I am writing to tell you the good your medicine has always done me and I hope my letter may be the means of helping some other suffering woman. When I was 16 years old I caught cold and had suppression for two months. I got so weak I could scarcely drag myself up the stairs. I went to two doctors, then my mother got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it. I never had any more trouble and got strong fast. Then I took it again before my little girl was born and it helped me a good deal and I give the Compound the credit for it. Then this spring I felt very badly again, but I took the Compound and have been well all summer. I cannot be grateful enough for your medicine." — Mrs. HAROLD M. WHY PEOPLE FEEL DEPRESSED IN THE COLD WEATHER

Why is tiredness and langour so prevalent just now? A physician explained that the cold of winter drives blood from the surface of the body to the liver. Normally one-fourth of the whole blood supply is in the liver, and when more blood is accumulated in that organ everything goes wrong.

No better remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are composed of such vegetable extracts as Mandrake and Butternut, and possess wonderful liver stimulating powers. It's a marvel the way Hamilton's Pills clear the blood of the poisonous humours. They put new life into worn out bodies, build up the appetite, bring back a reserve of nerve energy, tide folks over the cold days of winter and the depressing days of spring. For your health and body comfort get a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills to-day.

LINEN AT TOP PRICE.

Has More than Doubled since the War Began.

A buyer from a Toronto wholesale establishment, lately arrived from Ireland, records that the price of linen has so advanced that under the circumstances he could only buy about twenty per cent. of his usual purchase. The price of linen, 40 cents in 1914, is now $1.

The principal reasons for the rise are the scarcity of labor and raw materials. The linen makers are mostly either fighting in France or making shells in Belfast. A buyer from New York had just bought 500 pieces of the dollar linen.

AT 45 LEAVES WIFE TO ELOPE WITH HIS SON'S SWEETHEART

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—Charles H. Gretter, forty-five years old, treasurer of the Louis E. Merry Company, bakers, with a fine residence in Malden and a summer home in North Weymouth, eloped one week ago with the sweetheart of his nineteen-year-old son, Leslie, who is now with the Massachusetts militia at El Paso, Texas.

The broken hearted mother of Mr. Gretter's three children admitted that fact last Saturday at the Gretter summer home. She was corroborated by the father of Mildred Merrill, twenty-two years old, a stenographer, who sacrificed her soldier sweetheart and her home to elope with a man old enough to be her father.

Crushed by the weight of a double sorrow—his mother having committed suicide two weeks ago—Fred H. Merrill, of Eastman road, Somerville, quoted from a yellow slip of paper:—

"I fought him for six years.

"MILDRED."

It was a telegram he received last Sunday from Worcester, in which his daughter told of her step.

Employed in His Office.

Where she and her forty-five-year-old companion may be now is not known either to Mr. Merrill or Mrs. Gretter.

"I want my husband home again in spite of everything," said Mrs. Gretter.

"All I want is my little daughter back again," said Mr. Merrill.

Miss Merrill was employed as a stenographer for several years in Mr. Gretter's office, and the two were openly fond of each other's society, but no one thought that Mr. Gretter's liking for the girl was anything more than admiration of his supposedly prospective daughter-in-law.

The fact that Mr. Gretter frequently took Miss Merrill riding in his touring automobile was known to both families and was never given a thought. Nor was it considered strange that Miss Merrill should constantly be lauding the qualities of her employer.

Gretter Family Prostrated.

Mrs. Gretter and her two daughters, both in their teens, are prostrated. But Mrs. Gretter has not a single bitter word to say, either of her husband or of his companion.

"I hope the girl is restored to her father," she said, "and as for my husband, I want him to come back again. Not here, though; not here. What is there left for him here? He has lost every friend, or will lose them, when the affair becomes known. Oh, how could he? How could he?"

It is believed here that Mr. Merrill has located the couple and has gone to try to induce them to return to their homes.

"This is worse than death, but I cannot talk about it. We knew what had happened, but we did not think it would get into the newspapers. Mr. Merrill has gone from the city till Monday."

No Knowledge of Mr. Gretter.

That was all Mrs. Merrill, stepmother of Mildred, would say when seen at her home.

At the office of Mr. Gretter it was admitted he had gone away, and no one would say when he would return. In the Gretter cottage Mrs. Gretter said calmly—"I am here alone with my two daughters. I have nothing to say. We shall do the best we can. We have no plans for the future."

Mildred Merrill attended the Morse grammar school in Somerville and was graduated in 1909. She then attended high school. At that time the Gretter family lived in Somerville and Leslie attended the Brown school. He also attended high school.

Husband's Prayers Preyed On Wife

HENCE MRS. ADLER PRAYS FOR SEPARATION, ALLEGING HIS SUPPLICATIONS WERE FOR EVIL UPON HER.

New York, September 15. — The prayers which Dr. Marion S. Adler, physician and property holder of the east side, made concerning his wife, Mrs. Nettie Adler, caused her to begin an action for separation in the Supreme Court. Not only did he accuse her of improper conduct with a "friend of the family" at Lakewood, N.J., and refuse July 27 to support her, but, she says, he sent her copies of his prayers and prayed as follows:

"Ho, God! help me to reform my wife. If that is not possible, dear Almighty, help me to get rid of her, and let it be soon. Relieve me of my tortures, my pains, my agony, my sorrows, my enemies.

"Ho God! help me to avenge myself on my traitors and my enemies, my false cat of a wife. She deserves the most severe punishment. Try and send her some severe illness and a very lasting one.

"Ho God, punish most severely my bitterest enemies. Do some malicious wonders and send upon them, their wives and families, with their children, all of the sicknesses and incurable diseases and even death. Perform your wonders quick and soon. Amen.

"Ho, God! help me to get rid of my wife. Smite that lover with incurable disease. Ho, God! help me sell the house at Coney Island to some good people, at a good price, on good conditions. Help me to let all the apartments in the Coney Island house to good people and at a good price. Amen."

Mrs. Adler says in her complaint that the prayers "jarred her."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

TYPHOID FEVER is a severe disease coming on with headache, rise of temperature, diarrhoea, and abdominal distention. It always occurs as the result of taking into one's stomach food or drink contaminated with the body discharges. These discharges may enter one's mouth in water which has been polluted with sewage containing typhoid germs, with milk or food to which the germs have been carried by flies, by dirty hands, by dirty water, etc., or by direct contact with a person ill of typhoid fever. It is also distributed by "carriers," that is by persons who, though immune to the disease themselves, carry the germs of the disease in their intestines and transmit it to others through the discharges reaching food, etc. "Typhoid Mary," the New York cook who gave the disease to a large number of people before she was locked up, is a typhoid example of a typhoid carrier. People who have typhoid fever may carry the disease for a long time and be a source of danger to others, especially if they have anything to do with the preparation of food.

TYPHOID FEVER

Typhoid fever is rather common about the farms especially if a single case has occurred in a neighborhood where there is any chance of the general water supply, such as a spring, stream, or lake, receiving the intestinal discharges of the sick person. A typical example of this occurred in connection with an outbreak of the disease at Plymouth, Pa., in 1885. Plymouth is a mining town with a population at the time of the outbreak of about 8,000. Its water-supply was obtained from a mountain stream draining an almost uninhabited watershed, and the water for the town was impounded in a series of four impounding reservoirs. In January a man living up stream, who had spent his Christmas holidays in Philadelphia, became ill at his home. The excreta were not disinfected but were thrown either into the frozen creek or upon its snow-covered banks. In March there came a spring thaw and the accumulations of excreta were washed down the stream. Three weeks later there was an acute outbreak of typhoid fever in the little town. In some days as many as 100 cases occurred. One thousand and four cases were reported. There were, it is estimated, altogether 1,500 cases and the deaths numbered 114. The infection was most marked in those who used the town water supply, the epidemic being limited to the users of this water. Those who used well water escaped the disease. This epidemic of typhoid was studied and definitely traced to its source by competent observers, and is a marked example of the necessity of protection of public water supplies.

We are not exempt from such lessons in Ontario. The outbreak of typhoid in Ottawa in 1911 and again in 1913, and that of the town of Sarnia in 1911-12, all of which were proven to have occurred as the result of sewage-polluated water, have been sharp lessons in our own province, unhappily which have not yet convinced the respective civic authorities of the necessity of adequate protection of their water-supplies.

In the majority of cases the well is the chief and usually the only source of water supply. It is in many cases a safe supply, especially if it is a deep or driven well and more particularly if it is well protected against surface drainage. But many farm wells are shallow with the curb made of unjointed timber or stone which allow of easy drainage to the well. The covering is often of loose boards through which surface impurities may easily run. The danger is slight unless the impurities contain, which they may easily do, the excreta of persons carelessly thrown upon the ground. If the excreta comes from a person affected with typhoid the danger is imminent, and there is almost a certainty that users of the water will suffer from the disease. The moral is plain: PROTECT THE WELL!

SUMMER DIARRHOEA

Summer Diarrhoea kills a large number of babies every summer. It is preventable if care is taken with the babies' food. If at all severe call the doctor at once. In any case it is always safe to give a dose of the good old-fashioned castor oil. That is one of the mother remedies to be banked upon. If the diarrhoea is severe cut off all food, especially MILK, which is death to a baby with diarrhoea, but give boiled water in as large amounts as the baby would have of food. In older children give only water and gruel or dry toast. But get a doctor at once.

DIVINE PURPOSES ARE REASONABLE

God Appeals to Man's Reasoning Faculties.

Reason in the Past Largely Relegated to the Background—Too Much Swallowed Without Mastication—False Creeds Made Men Fear to Reason—As New Age Draws Near, God's People Gradually Progressing Into His Marvelous Light—God's Revelation Worthy of All Acceptation — We Must Have a "Thus Saith the Lord" for Every Item of Faith.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

PASTOR RUSSELL

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 17.—Pastor Russell gave a masterly sermon to-day before the I. B. S. A. Convention assembled here this week. His text was from Isaiah 1: 18: "Come now, and let us reason together, saith Jehovah: Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." He spoke as follows:

In the past, nearly everything that has ever been offered us in the way of religion has been something which must be taken without the exercise of reason. This has been especially true of most of the creedal teachings given us in the name of The Lord. They must be swallowed without reasoning or not at all; for they are too unreasonable to be received by any logical mind. In this connection I think of an incident which well illustrates my point. On one occasion a gentleman who had been giving the Bible some study related to me a conversation which he had recently had with his pastor, a Presbyterian minister. The gentleman had said to his pastor, "I cannot quite accept some of the statements of the Confession of Faith; for I cannot understand them." The minister replied, "You have taken the matter in a wrong light altogether. When you take the Confession of Faith, you must do so just as you would take a Brandreth pill. If you stop to chew it, you will never be able to swallow it!"

The Lord, on the contrary, says to us: "Come, let us REASON together." God appeals to man's reason; and every feature of the Divine Plan, when understood, is thoroughly logical and worthy of our great Creator. It is only reasonable to expect that God, who gave man reasoning faculties, would give us a revelation of His Plan which would appeal to our reason. Man was created in the image of God; and even though our race is now in a fallen condition, the Lord still appeals to man's reason, as our text shows.

The Word of God is in every way logical and beautiful; and our joy has been in proportion as we have heeded His Message and responded to it. When He invites His people to reason with Him, He means that we are to search His revealed Word, the Bible, to find the true explanation for man's present condition, to discover the Lord's Plan relating to mankind, to exercise our minds in regard to God's declarations. What would be the use of having brains if we merely absorb a teaching, without having any mental understanding of the subject? To study with a view to finding what reason God gives us along lines of vital importance—this constitutes true Bible study.

Man's Reason Handicapped by Error

While the lower animals are endowed to a very limited degree with the faculty of reason, yet of all the animal creation man alone is able to reason upon a high plane. He alone possesses moral faculties and ability to reason with his Creator through that Creator's revealed Word. In the present fallen condition of the race, some can reason better than others. Phrenologists can determine by the size and the shape of a man's head what are his natural mental endowments. They can give a very good description of a man's natural disposition—what he would be likely to do and what not to do.

But no phrenologist can determine the character of a Christian as such—as a New Creature in Christ; for a Christian of considerable development has so far overcome many of his natural weaknesses that he is much nobler in character than the shape of his head would seem to indicate. He now has a new will, a new mind—the mind of Christ. But the particular point that we wish to emphasize is that the faculty for reasoning belongs to man, and that even in his fallen condition he delights to exercise this faculty. When we inquire for a reason why things are so, we are merely in line with God's will concerning us.

Along doctrinal lines, however, our reasoning is sadly handicapped by error; for the whole world is in a large measure of darkness respecting the Divine character and purposes. For the past few hundred years, the Lord's people have been gradually emerging from the darkness of the Dark Ages. There were twelve hundred years during which the Bible was not studied at all. Then came the Reformation, after which the Bible came back into the hands of God's people, and they began to study it again. But their poor heads were more or less confused with the errors of the creeds formulated during those twelve centuries when the Bible was set aside; and it would not be expected that they would be able then to see every point of doctrine clearly and to reason satisfactorily.

So we see that our forefathers, honest and sincere as many of them were, had great difficulties with which to contend in connection with the errors which were firmly entrenched in their minds. When a foundation of error has been laid in the mind, it will give trouble until all the error has been removed. Many of their errors we have inherited. We were born with our reasoning faculties more or less twisted; and these twists have been accentuated by our teachings at home, in the Sunday School, and in the pulpit. We have imbibed them in our reading. When we wished to reason, we were told "You must not reason along doctrinal lines; for you will become an infidel if you do!"

Reason Divinely Guided a Blessing

Many of us did become infidels respecting the teachings held out to us however. This has proved to be a great blessing, in that it has led us to study the Word of God for ourselves, and to learn what is the real character of our Creator—that He is not a monstrous Devil, but a God of Love, a God of Reason; that He has a Plan of Salvation worthy of all acceptation. We can now meet together and reason as God's people in harmony with His inspired Revelation—the Bible. Our own poor, imperfect reasoning, perverted by the false teachings of centuries, would be a very unreliable guide and would surely lead us astray if we were unaided from Above, as our text suggests. But reasoning according to the instructions of Scripture clarifies our minds, and leads us out of the bewildering darkness of error into the light of God as it shines from the face of our Redeemer and Lord, Jesus Christ.

As Bible students we are learning that there is a beauty and a harmony in the Bible that is not to be found elsewhere, when the Word of God is rightly divided. (2 Timothy 3: 15-17; 2:15.) As long as we reason within the lines of Divine Revelation we are on safe ground. What do any of us know regarding the origin and the destiny of man save as we are instructed by the Lord? Nothing whatever! No matter how much any man may boast of his knowledge and his wisdom, he knows nothing about these important subjects pertaining to our everlasting future except as information is given from Heaven. As the inspired Apostle Paul declares, the Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished. We have no other source of knowledge respecting our Creator and His purposes. We must have a "Thus saith the Lord" for every item of our faith.

Provision for Man's Deliverance.

Nearly all the theology of the Bible stands related to sin—how sin came into the world, what are its effects, how God views it, how we should view it, how man is to get rid of it, what means God will adopt to lift mankind out of their present degradation to sin and to restore the race to perfection and everlasting life. This is the sum total of the theology of the Bible.

God's Word declares that our great Creator made man, not in the image of an ape, but in the Divine image, and crowned him with honor and glory, setting man over the beasts of the earth, the fishes of the sea, and the birds of the air. Man was to be an earthly king, only "a little lower than the angels." (Genesis 1:26-28, 31; Psalm 8: 4-8.) This great man, this perfect man, Adam, was our father, a human son of God. (Luke 3:38.) The Heavenly Father has not said this about any one since Adam's disobedience and fall into sin, except in the case of our Lord Jesus Christ, who came to earth a man, transferred from His glorious prehuman condition to man's estate, in order that He might give His human nature a Ransom-sacrifice for Adam and all who fell in him.

Adam was put on trial in Eden with the understanding that if he remained obedient to his Creator he could live forever; but that if he was disobedient, he would die. He disobeyed; and the death penalty was pronounce upon him: "Dying, thou shalt die." (Genesis 2:17, margin.) Immediately he began to die—not instant death, but a gradual dying process. It was nine hundred years before he was dead—not more alive than ever. "The wages of sin is death." "The soul that sinneth it shall die."—Romans 6: 23; Ezekiel 18: 4, 20.

To understand the Scriptures, we must drop the foolishness handed down to us from the Dark Ages, "Come, let us reason together." In line with this reasoning, we find that the whole world are sinners. Adam's unborn posterity shared in his fall and in his condemnation. Some have gone down into the tomb more rapidly than have others, and on a lower plane. Some have tried their best to fight against sin. But all are sinners; all are dying, because of the original sin in Eden, (Psalm 51:5; Genesis 3:20.) None can keep God's Law; for all are imperfect.—Romans 3:20.

As all the race were condemned to death while still in the loins of their father Adam, so the Lord Jesus, by becoming a man, perfect and undefiled by sin, with an unborn race in His loins, could give Himself, an exact corresponding price for Adam and all his posterity. This is the meaning of the word Ransom as applied to Jesus' sacrifice for the purchase of the race. The Greek word is antilutron—a price in offset, an equivalent price, a corresponding price.—1 Timothy 2:5, 6.

Meaning of Christ's Death.

Although our Lord was in the Heavenly Father's likeness on the Heavenly plane, He could not give a corresponding price for man while He was still a spirit being; for God's Law demanded a man's life for a mans' life. (Deuteronomy 19:21.) It was necessary, therefore, that He become a perfect man, as Adam was before he fell. As such our Lord died for "the sin of the world"—the original sin, the sin of Father Adam, on account of which Adam was sentenced to death. Thus we see that Jesus must bear Adam's penalty whatever that was. Did our Lord suffer eternal torture for man? No; He suffered death. He gave up forever in death His human nature, and was raised from death by the Father a glorious Divine being, as a reward for His faithfulness. His human nature He never took back; for it was the price of man's redemption.

It is very evident, then, that the penalty for sin pronounced by God upon Adam and his race was not eternal torment, but death. Had not our Lord Jesus Christ died for the world, mankind would not have a future life. But because our Lord has died, "the Just for the unjust," death is referred to in the Bible as a "sleep." Man will awaken from his death sleep. He will live again in the resurrection.—1 Corinthians 15: 21-23.

God's standard is perfection; and no one who comes short of it can attain life everlasting. The entire race of Adam is dying on account of their father Adam's sin. The great majority of them have died in infancy. Moreover, the Bible distinctly declares that no flesh can be justified in God's sight through keeping His Law; for fallen man cannot keep God's perfect Law inviolate. Only through Divine compassion and mercy can any human being become justified in the sight of God, through the death of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

The Two Salvations.

But although God has provided a great Saviour for the fallen race of Adam, and although the death of our Lord Jesus is sufficient for the sins of the whole world, the world has not yet received the benefits of that death. The reason for the delay is given in the Bible. There are two phases of salvation: one salvation for the Church, to spirit nature; and another for the world in general, to perfect human nature. The Bible says that Jesus Christ "brought life AND immortality to light through the Gospel." (2 Timothy 1:10.) The Apostle Paul mentions the "so great salvation, which first began to be spoken by the Lord." (Hebrews 2:3.) This salvation for the Church was a secret from before the foundation of the world.

The other phase, "the common salvation," is for whosoever will of mankind. During the Millennial Age this salvation will be made known to every person in the world. The knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the earth. (Habakkuk 2: 14; Psalm 72:19.) Everybody will know that Christ has died for the sin of the world, and that all may then have a share in the blessing of Restitution secured by the death of Christ. All will then have the opportunity to receive again that which was lost (Luke 19:10.) At the Second Coming of Christ, in "the Times of Restitution of all things," mankind will be given an opportunity to rise out of ignorance and sin back to the image of God.—Jude 3; Acts 3: 19-23.

The "strong meat" of the Word of God needs careful mastication. (Hebrews 5: 12-14.) The husks on which we were fed in Babylon could not be masticated. There was no real food there. The true Christian is to grow in grace and in knowledge. At first we were only "babes in Christ," babes in the knowledge of things spiritual. (1 Corinthians 3: 1-3.) But in order to grow strong in the Lord, we must have the strong meat and digest it.

Spirit Begetting and Spirit Birth.

After Adam fell, Jesus was the first human son of God. "He came unto His own [the Jews], and His own received Him not." They crucified Him. "But as many as received Him [first of the Jews and then of the Gentiles], to them gave He power to become the sons of God." (John 1: 11, 12.) As spirit-begotten New Creatures, these are sons of God; and they will have their birth in the First Resurrection, when they shall be made like their Lord and Head.—1 John 3:2.

As a spirit-begotten son of God, our Lord Jesus offered Himself in sacrifice to God at Jordan. For three and one-half years thereafter He was laying down His sacrifice in death. On the cross it was consummated; and the third day thereafter He was born of the Spirit, in His resurrection. Similarly, the sacrifice which we make when we consecrate ourselves fully to God through Christ is finished at our actual death. Meantime, we must keep our bodies in a presentable condition — "faithful unto death." As our Lord has promised, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." (Revelation 2:10.) For this the Church is waiting. We are not to receive merely the ordinary human life which is coming to the world in the Times of Restitution. The opportunity to get the crown of life will never again be offered; for it is limited to a special number—the Elect. When all of this elect number shall have been found and prepared for their future work, then the purpose of the Gospel Age will have been accomplished, and the uplift of the world of mankind will begin.

The glorification of the last members of the Church, the Body of Christ, is at hand. Then, exalted to the Divine spiritual plane, they will be ready to begin, with their Lord and Head, the work of uplifting and blessing mankind. After men shall have learned the needed lesson in the great Time of Trouble now coming upon the nations (Daniel 12:1; Matthew 24:21), the merit of Christ's sacrifice will then have been applied for the cancellation of the sin of the world—both the living and the dead—and the work of Restitution will at once be inaugurated.

The world lost life in the first Adam. They will regain perfect human life and all pertaining thereto through the second Adam—the Lord from Heaven. (1 Corinthians 15: 46, 47.) The race is to be regenerated and given a full, individual opportunity to gain everlasting life. The second Adam will restore the lost life. The second Eve, the glorified Bride of Christ, will nourish and instruct the race, and will bring whosoever will of mankind back to human perfection and an Eden home in a perfected earth.

Hawaii Angered By Hula Dance At Exposition

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 14.—Hawaii has protested the hula hula given at the exposition by Princess Lei Lokalani and her pretty sister, Kahinano. With the most cultured American citizens applauding, the protest offered across the Pacific comes from the Hawaiian promotion committee, which says the exposition dance "is not the hula at all, but more of a hoochi koochi; that the San Diego exhibition of the hula is a disgrace and a blot upon the fair name of territorial Hawaii."

James Shaw, father of the two pretty dancers, says he would not permit them to dance the real Hawaiian hula and that if the real hula as danced on the islands, was danced here the authorities would drive them off the grounds.

Charles Evans Hughes and Mrs. Hughes, who saw the hula as danced by the Hawaiians on the visit of the Hughes party to the exposition, were highly pleased and saw no vulgarity. Other distinguished visitors to the exposition, including some of the most prominent women in the United States, of whom Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs of America, was the last, have been given special exhibitions by the Hawaiian troupe and no unfavourable comment has been made.

Dancers to Tour America.

Aside from the question of decency, a representative of a great vaudeville organization left San Diego a few days ago with a contract for Princess Lei Lokalani and members of her troupe for a vaudeville engagement throughout the United States, and the theatrical man pronounced then the finest entertainers of their type either in the country or Hawaii.

For grace and beauty he pronounced Princess Lei Lokalani without a peer, and her brother, Eddie, he considered the finest player of the steel guitar he had ever heard. Auditor J. B. Pendleton, in charge of the Hawaiian village for the exposition, says no complaint has ever been made against a single dance since the village was opened.

In the face of this general approval by Americans, the Hawaiians are still greatly exercised at the insult they say is being offered them.

Not the Real Hula Dance.

A special article published throughout the United States said "the native hula hula that Americans see is an expurgated edition of that which the brown-skinned girls do on the famous Waikiki beach. In the original it is too revealing and to primitive in its display of passion, but to the Hawaiian it is, even in its most expressive form, not an immoral thing. They see nothing in it, but untamed love in the coordination of muscle and melody."

With all of these authorities against the original hula and in favour of the entertainment offered here, the letter from A. P. Taylor, secretary of the Hawaiian promotion committee, addressed to the secretary of the exposition, as published in the Honolulu Bulletin, Aug. 4, reads as follows:

"At the Rotary club meeting yesterday S. M. Lowry of the firm of Lowers and Cooke said that something should be done by island organizations toward stopping so-called hula dancing in the United States, which gave a bad impression of our island life. Mr. Lowrey stated that he visited this hula dancing place and was disgusted with the exhibition, stating that it was not a hula at all, but more of a hoochi-koochi of the Chicago fair midway fame.

Interprets Island Legends.

"He stated that perhaps his auditors would agree with him when he said the hula when properly danced interpreted legends and was something which had esthetic value.

"But," he said, "the exhibit was a disgrace and a blot upon the fair name of our territory," and he asked the Rotary club to take some action with other organizations which would

"A year ago my attention was called to the similar disgraceful exhibit of the so-called hula dance on the zone of the San Francisco exposition. I immediately took up the matter with the San Francisco fair officials and asked that they eliminate this feature from their zone entertainment and it was done. The manager wrote me saying his show was all right and that many persons had said they enjoyed it, but our island people thought otherwise."

DOMESTIC TRAGEDIES RESULT OF THE WAR

PARIS, Sept. 15.—There is a notable multiplication of domestic dramas of the type familiar through Tennyson's "Enoch Arden" and Balzac's "Colonel Chabert," who, lost on a Napoleonic battlefield, returned home to find his wife remarried to a nobleman of the Restoration.

Thus, a Madame D— of Arras was informed at the beginnig of the war that her husband had been killed. Removing to Paris she waited some months, and then married her brother-in-law. The first husband is now on his way back from Germany, where he was a prisoner.

Charles le Goffic cites other cases in La Liberte. He says: "In a small commune near the Channel two soldiers' wives remarried in this way. The death of their first husbands was registered, and all the papers were in order. But these husbands reappeared one fine morning, both of them with amputated limbs."

More curious is the tale of the Breton soldier, whose arm, cut off by a shell, was found on the battlefield, while the rest of him had disappeared. As the arm carried the identification plate its owner was reported dead. The wife received a certificate to this effect, and was permitted to remarry. The first husband, however, proves to be alive, and inclined to insist on his rights.

The most unfortunate of these tragic misadventures was found in Switzerland recently in one of the parties of seriously wounded soldiers returned from Germany. A French visitor stopped before a man whose face was so disfigured as to seem no longer human. He asked if he could do anything for the sufferer, if he could seek his family and tell them.

"Useless," was the reply. He is dead."

The soldier had risen to the heroic decacy of deciding that rather than horrify those he loved, he would leave them to believe him dead.

There is a ray of light in this case, for the surgeons hold out hope of a great improvement, and if this is accomplished their patient will give up his name and come to life again. But, perhaps, adds M. de Goffic, it may be too late."

It is said there are 70,000 French prisoners in Germany who have not been able to communicate with their families. The French law requires ten months of widowhood before re-marriage. The question is being asked whether this delay should not be extended, and Henri Robert, the eminent pleader, is one of those who think that soldiers' wives should not remarry before the end of the war.

PROPOSING WITH A SPLASH.

The land of the Tarascans lies due west of the city of Mexico and there the natives retain many of their practices which were well established when the spaniards first landed at Vera Cruz. Here is the accepted method of courtship, for example:

The lover goes to the spring where the object of his affections is accustomed to fill her water jar. He holds her shawl until she accepts him and then with a stick he breaks the jar which she holds on her head and gives her a betrothal baptism of water.

According to Prescott, the Tarascans had a Noah, called Trezpi, who escaped from a great flood in a boat laden with animals. Instead of a dove Trezpi sent out a vulture first and then a humming bird, according to the legend.

The Tarascans once possessed the secret of tempering copper, an art now lost to the world.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgement in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones. In the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case pain and suffering is almost inevitable. Uric acid poisoning can only be overcome when the kidneys are made healthy and active. CONFESSIONS OF A CENSOR

Delightful Bits From the Many Soldiers' Letters Which Pass Under His Eye

A Certain Postal Station in an Allied Country, Aug. 15, 1916.—One of the oddest things about censoring is the easy way in which one takes to reading other people's private correspondence. Shades of the past, when one averted an honourable eye from the letter lying half open on a friend's (or even the enemy's) desk. And here I sit, because it is war time, before a large table covered with serried rows of letters, with instructions to open them all and search diligently therein for, first, information likely to be useful to the enemy; second, anything likely to discourage recruiting, and third, false information likely to alarm, or depress a credulous public.

After one uneasy day I take to it as a duck to water, and the qualms of a lifetime vanish. My inquisitive nose goes impartially into business letters, family letters, love letters and letters written simply to pass away the time. There are more family letters and love letters than any other kind, though I suspect that they are also partly the result of idleness and the franking system.

The little room in which we sit is a cell in the large hive of a hospital in the war zone, and the writers of these letters are either sick or wounded, and their first thought is to write of their safety and welfare. This does not take the form of long descriptions of illness or wounds. The great majority of men linger long and lovingly over the hospital menu with its four meals a day, and make a grateful reference to the kindness of doctors and nurses, but the cause of their being in hospital is dismissed as a 'septic wound,' or 'that ferocious trouble,' the foe of the British soldier called dysentry.' Suffering is rarely mentioned, but most writers seem to prefer wounds to dysentry.

Among many Spartans one, however, stands out who wrote that, barring pneumonia, and a coming "operishon" on this "thumb," he feels well in himself. Very little comment is made on the country and surroundings, though the writers are probably out of England for the first time. For one reason the patients are carried from ship to bed in a closed ambulance, but even to those allowed in the grounds the only subjects worthy of mention are the perpetual sun, "the same as we call in England hot," says one cautious writer, and the 'antiques' of the night-gowned inhabitants, which in this sense does not mean antiquities. Only a budding Munchausen, with the willing assistance of idle friends in the world, occasionally undertakes to comment on the customs of the country to some credulous friend in an English hamlet. On the other hand, the sight of electric trams is is greeted with delight in scores of letters, and commented on with loving detail.

There are several things which make reading these letters easier than at first seems possible, when one is dismayed by the sight of hundreds of pencil-scrawled pages. To begin with, few letters are very long, with the exception of a precentage of rambling love letters, and the formula of beginning and end takes up a certain amount of space. 'I write these few lines, hoping to find you in the best of health. As I am glad to say I am in the Pink. (The fact of being in hospital is not allowed to interfere with purity of style.) Right back soon. From your loving soldier husband to my dearest loving wife and darling children," or 'Fondest love from your ever-loving," is the usual beginning and end, with a suitable arrangement of crosses for kisses. Crosses occur in all letters except business ones, and are bestowed on men friends and also on young ladies to whom the writer signs himself 'Yours truly.'

Between these formulas the censor's eye travels rapidly over a glancing reference to health, a description of the day's routine, with careful analysis of the food, a request for parcels, and a lament for those which have never arrived. Messages to friends and inquiries about the children and the letter is read. Welsh letters are flowery, and Irish letters illiterate, with references to the Holy Mother, and requests to tell innumerable Mies and Pats and Katies that he was after asking for them. There is another type of letter that is infinitely more trouble. It is well written, in a small hand, and very long. The writer does not feel in the Pink, nor are kisses included. He thinks and comments on what he sees, and speculates, generally wrong, and gives names, and altogether the censor curses his power of skating on the thin ice of what may not be said.

Her Dress "Shabby" On $7,200 Income, She Wants More

New York, September 15.—Mrs. Renee Boucicault Seelye, granddaughter of Dion Boucicault, famous playwright and actor, let it be known that she had separated from her husband, Clarel R. Seelye, when she filed an application for an increased allowance in the Surrogates' Court. She said that she disagreed with her guardian, Frederic Cyrus Leubuscher, of No. 258 Broadway. She is 18 years old. She wishes to go to London and pay her bills and wants to know how she can do it on the $4,500 a year allowed to her by Surrogate Cohalan two years ago.

Mrs. Seelye says that despite her present income of $7,200 a year, which soon will be increased to $11,500, she is made by order of the Court to go with "shabby clothes" and unpaid bills, amounting to $2,000. In London she wishes to see her paternal grandmother, who is 90 years old and paralyzed. She hopes to see other relatives. She wants to be able to forget her marital unhappiness, but cannot do it unless she is dressed as well as those with whom she will associate.

"Your petitioner's wardrobe is shabby," she says, "and worn and inadequate and unsuitable to your petitioner's station in life and financial condition." She says she has even had to borrow from friends. Her application is for $5,000 between now and January, 1917, as well as $2,000 at once with which to pay her debts.

Mrs. Seelye says that Mr. Leubusche refused to make the application for her so she engaged Lee Kaufman, a lawyer. She has the income from a trust fund of $144,000 left to her by her grandfather, Isaac E. Holbrook, who died in 1895. Another income will soon be paid in to her from a new trust of $100,000 heretofore in her family, and recently reverting to her.

She married Clarel R. Seelye, October 21, 1914, when 16 years old. She entered into an agreement with him, she says, approved by Mr. Leubusher, by which she was to support her husband and herself, while Seelye put everything that he earned into the Sterling Advertising Company, which he hoped would later pay them handsome profits. Now that they have disagreed, she says, she will accept no support from her husband. He lives at Douglaston, L.I.

The young woman insists that Mr. Leubuscher in refusing to apply for more money for her said she was "an infant" and could repudiate all of her debts, "and advised your petitioner to do so." Mr. Kaufman, she says, told her to pay them.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS'S AND SMALL WOMAN'S DRESS

By Anabel Worthington

The increased yardage in garments cut according to the mode forced up the price of ready mades, so the woman who had just so much for a dress readily turned to the task of making her own dress. We illustrate one entirely free from complications in its construction and a very winning style.

The blouse, fastening at front with loops and buttons, has dainty revers in contrasting color that roll back to give the becoming open neck in V shape. A neat collar is of material to match, and the same goods contribute the turn back roll cuff on a plain, full sleeve that may be made wrist length or shorter, according to preference.

The skirt is cut in four gores and has a gathered top or heading for wear outside the waist; a patent leather belt is used and a smart touch given with a novel pocket in each front gore.

Faille, Shantung, silk poplin, gabardine, serge and similar fabrics are good for this model, as well as linen and a number of other wash fabrics.

The pattern of No. 7,875 is cut in sizes 14 to 18 years. To make in size 16 will require 4¾ yards 36 inch material and ⅛ yard contrasting goods.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 15 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

SPIES CAPTURED ON THE OLYMPIC

Fredericton Soldier Writes of an Exciting Trip—An Officer Tried to Blow up the Big Liner

That three German spies were captured on the S.S. Olympic on that steamer's last trip to England with Canadian troops, is the information contained in a letter received here from Co. Sergt. Major Lesnie G. Hatheway, of the 109th Battalion, now at Sandgate Camp, England.

Writing to his father, Fred. W. Hatheway, of this city, Sergt. Major Hatheway says that one of the spies was an officer, another a member of the 112th Nova Scotia Battalion and the third a member of the crew. All three were captured, but only after one had almost succeeded in dynamiting the steamer.

His letter regarding the capture of the spies follows:

"We got no less than three spies on board coming over and one of them nearly got us. The fellow that nearly did the trick was an officer in the 108rd British Columbia Battalion. He was quite close to the engine room with only fourteen sticks of dynamite, but was nabbed in time.

"The second one was a man in the 112th Battalion from Nova Scotia. He was caught sketching the Olympic guns fore and aft and had drawings of where torpedoes would hit us from a submarine. The third man was in the crew, and all I know about him is that he was up in our quarters and he was carried down the passageway all tied up with ropes and had been caught signalling out of a porthole.

"Besides this we were only within half an hour's run of being torpedoed. A submarine had just sunk two ships and we 'bout turned' and went clean around the coast of Ireland."

DRUG'S TALONS IN BABY

Morphine was found with its talons in the brain of a baby yesterday, and but for the action of Federal officers its life would have ended with that of its drug afflicted parents, says the Chicago Tribune.

The baby is the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris, 1332 South Wabash avenue. Harris is a morphine addict. Upon her marriage to Harris two years ago Mrs. Harris who is 19 years old, also became addicted. The baby was born and through tainted nourishment has become a victim of the drug.

Harris was on trial for evading the Harrison anti-drug law. Assistant United States Attorney M. L. Igoe noticed that the baby was afflicted. He suggested that it be handed over to the juvenile court. Harris was heard to whisper to his wife:

"If they take the baby you cut your throat and I'll follow."

Harris and his wife were seized and both were sent to the Bridewell. The child is being given treatment there for the morphine habit. Mrs. Harris also is being treated.

Uncle Dudley's Sound Advice To Newly-Weds

Now, young folks, you're just fresh married, you're as happy as June bugs, life seems one infinite, rimless, custard pie, and Messrs. Joy and Gladness, so to speak, seem to have moved in to stay, occupying the front room and being present at all the meals.

Hence open up your ears and hearken to your Uncle Dudley while he exudes a few words of three-star wisdom.

So just hold hands a spell, withdraw your beaming eyes from each other's countenance, move your ears forward, pointing towards your uncle, and listen.

You're going to have trouble. Because you're human. And man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward, as the Scriptures say.

You won't always be happy. You will have your share of weeping. Your hearts will quake when their turn comes—break, maybe. You, too, will walk the floor of nights, or lie abed, looking red eyed up at the dark, just as your mother, father, grandparents and ancestors on back to Adam have done.

When that time comes I want you to remember this one thing your Uncle Dudley told you.

One thing.

Don't let any trouble get in between you!

All the trouble in the world is not going to trouble you so long as it is on the outside. You'll have enemies, but none of them can hurt you if they do not get in between you.

You'll have disappointments, bereavements, disillusions, failures, regrets, mistakes, angers, and resentments, and you can resist seven tons of such stuff provided you stand closely together and don't let any of it step in between your two hearts.

Be partners. Be allies, and swear never, either one of you, to make a separate treaty with the enemy.

Don't have secrets from the other. Organise your oathbound secret society now. Lock yourselves in and the rest of the world out.

Beware of the Intimate Friend to whom you tell things about your wedded companion. Said I. F. has broken up more couples than any other known snake. Be your own Intimate Friends.

Gossip, tattle and tell all you know to each other all you please, but not about each other to any third party.

Remember—one thing only I've told you—write it down and hang it up on your wall:

"There's bitterness in this world, but it can't make us bitter if it does not come between us."

You're sworn "till death do us part, and for better or worse." Stick to it!

ALLIES EXTEND THEIR GAINS ON THE SOMME

SERBS CONTINUE BALKAN SUCCESSES

The British Troops Closing In On The Thiepval Positions Now

Capture of Strongly Fortified Mouquet Farm Has Made Precarious German Hold on Thiepval Which Has Held Up All Progress of the British Left Wing Since Offensive Began--French Troops Have Surrounded the Village of Demecourt Taking 1200 Prisoners.

SERBS CAPTURE BULGARIAN TRENCHES

LONDON, September 18.—The British troops began closing in upon Thiepval last night after capturing Mouquet Farm, and took several German trenches south of the village, General Haig reported this afternoon. West of Mouquet Farm the Germans resisting desperately the advance of the British pincers, entered a British trench by a heavy counter attack, but were later driven out.

The Thiepval village position which has held up the progress of the British left wing since the Somme offensive began July first, was made most precarious for the Germans by the loss of the well fortified Mouquet Farm yesterday. North of Martinpuich Haig's men improved their positions last night, and east of Courcelette a minor attack on enemy trenches was successful. The Germans bombarded various parts of the British lines with great violence last night, as if in preparation for a counter attack.

NEW PREMIER HAS ANNOUNCED POLICY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ATHENS, (delayed), September 18.—Nikolas Kalageropoulos, the new Premier, made the following declaration to-day: "The new Ministry will follow a benevolent, very benevolent, neutrality towards the Entente. It will decide its attitude in other respects after examinating the situation and studying diplomatic documents." Premier Kalageropoulos indignantly repudiated any suggestion that he is pro-German in his sympathies. The demand for war is growing rapidly among the people. Even the anti-Venizelos press plans an active pro-war campaign which will be opened to-morrow.

SERBIANS CAPTURE BULGARIAN TRENCHES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

SALONIKA, September 18.—Serbian troops captured Bulgarian first and second lines at the Village of Kamakchalan, northwest of Ostrovo Lake, and near the Serbo-Greek frontier, it was officially announced to-day. Ten machine guns were captured.

Deniecourt Surrounded By French Troops

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), September 18.—French troops completely surrounded the Village of Deniecourt, south of the Somme, in heavy fighting last night, it was officially announced to-day. The Germans counter attacked savagely on the whole front south of the Somme, where the French scored an important gain yesterday. Three particularly violent attacks were made east of the Village of Berny and south of Deniecourt, where the French repulsed the onslaughts and then made further progress, completing the encircling movement. Twelve hundred prisoners and ten mitrailleuses were taken. According to prisoners of the Tenth Ersatz Division, the German losses in the fighting south of the Somme yesterday were enormous. Two divisions of the 38th Battalion were almost annihilated by the French artillery fire that preceded the capture of Berny and Vermandovillers. North of the Somme the French carried a German trench east of Clery and repulsed counter attacks.

Good News From the Roumanian Front

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 18.—Aside from the Allies successes on the Somme the word that Russian and Roumanian forces have halted their retreat in Southeastern Roumania and are now making a stand against the Tentons, was the most encouraging news from the Allied standpoint reaching London this afternoon.

NEW BRITISH "TANKS" TERRIFY GERMAN TROOPS

Monster Motors Climb Over All Obstacles and Throw Terror Into the Huns as They Pour Streams of Machine Gun Fire

A NEW ENGINE OF WAR

On the British Front, Sept. 17.—Another day of great remembrance has been given to the British history. The British troops broke through the German third-line defence, went out into the open country and gave staggering blows to the German war machine which for two years seemed unthinkably strong.

The "heavily-armoured motor machine guns of a new style" is mentioned in the official bulletin. That description is dull compared with all the rich and rare qualities of these extraordinary vehicles.

The Germans had prepared to attack and had massed troops in the front reserve lines. They came over in a rush. Many fell, while others managed to jump into portions of a British trench and bombed heir way up. Machine guns were turned on them. Before the fight had ended the "jumping-off" time of the British had come. The assaulting troops rose as one man. Taking no notice of what had happened they swept across their own trenches and the German in them own trenches and the Germans in them Courcellette. They came immediately against a difficult ground and fierce machine gun fire in the ruins of a sugar factory which the Germans had made into a redubt with machine gun emplacements.

New Engines of War.

The British had a new engine of war to destroy the place. Over their own trenches the motor monsters lurched up and came crawling forward to the rescue, cheered by the assaulting troops. The latter laughed. Some were laughing even when bullets had caught them in the throat.

The 'creme de menthe' which is the name of the particular creature, waddled forward very steadily toward the factory. There was a whip of silence from the Germans. Suddenly machine gun fire burst out in nervous spasms and splashed the sides of the 'creme de menthe' but the tank did not mind that. The bullets fell from its sides harmlessly and it advanced upon a broken wall, leaned against it heavily, until it fell with a crash, then rose on the bricks, passed over and walked straight into the midst of the factory ruins. From its sides came flashes of fire and a hose of bullets Then the tank trampled around over the machine gun emplacements.

The infantry advanced round the flanks of the monster. The attack on Martinpuich was checked on the outskirts of the village by a blast of machine gun fire. Then came the turn of the tanks. Before dawn two lumbered towards the Germans as though hungry for their breakfast. Afterwards they came across "No Man's Land' like enormous toads and nosed at Martinpuich.

The men cheered wildly, waving their helmets and dancing around. As Martinpuich the men were held up for some time by machine gun fire. The monster went on alone and had some astounding adventures. It went right through broken barns and houses, straddled the German dugouts and fired enfilading shots at the German trenches.

From one dugout a German colonel with a white, frightened face, held up his hands very high in front of the tank shouting "Kamerad, kamerad." "Well, come inside then,' said a voice from the body. An arm was thrust out through an opening in the car and grabbed the officer. For the rest of the day the tank led an unfortunate man about on the strangest journey the world has ever seen.

Another tank was confronted by 100 Germans, who shouted "Mercy" —at the head of the procession it led them as prisoners to the British lines. Late in the evening Martinpuich was taken in fierce fighting, a crowning triumph for a successful day. When day came the attack swung to iFers, across a wide stretch of difficult and perilous ground, strongly defended. The rest pressed forward in steady, broken waves. The first news of the success from an airman's wireless said. "A tank is walking up the high street in Flers, the British army is cheering behind."

NOW WITH THE 93rd BATTALION IN ENGLAND

PTE. FRANK EDWARDS, 93rd Battalion, Lakefield.

NINE MEMBERS OF 93rd BAND CHOSEN FOR CANADIAN BAND

250 Musicians to Go on Tour in England Starting With a Concert in Albert Hall, London---93rd Battalion Has Been Working Hard---Capt. Max Hamilton of the 146th Battalion is Transferred to the 247th---To-day's General Military News.

That nine members of the 93rd Battalion band have been selected for the big Canadian massed band of 250 musicians which is to go on tour this month is the interesting information received by the Examiner on Saturday in a letter from a member of the 93rd. The massed band is being chosen from all the Canadian Overseas bands in England and has been rehearsing for some time in the drill hall at Folkestone. The band's first concert will be given at the Albert Hall, London on September 24th, before their Majesties, the King and Queen and afterwards it is expected will visit Liverpool, Manchester, and Edinburg, Scotland. The nine Peterborough bandsmen selected are Sergt. R. Naples, bass; Sergt. F. Barnes and Bandsman V. Dallin, clarionets; Bandsman H. Payton, cornet; Bandsman H. Loader, horn; and Bandsmen E. Keale, F. Wells, J. James and T. Smith saxaphones. The Peterborough boys are about nine miles from Folkestone and are taken over to that town for rehearsal in a motor transport.

The 93rd were inspected by Major General Sir Sam Hughes, Lord Dundonald and other staff officers on Wednesday, August 30th. As usual Sir Sam Hughes paid particular attention to the band and also as usual requested them to play his favourite march "The Lass o' Gowrie," the regimental march of the 57th regiment, Peterborough Rangers which the Minister of Militia always asks for when he meets a band from Peterborough. A large number of men were away from the Battalion on the day is was inspected, three hundred being absent at Lydd Camp taking a week's musketry course.

Incidentally the 93rd has had few ideal moments since reaching England. Up to Sunday, September 3rd they had been duty battalion for five weeks, furnishing all duties for the 6th Brigade. Being understrength and with many men away on musketry training, the remainder of the battalion has been kept busy and the band, machine gun section and every one else has had to take a turn. The members of the band have been on street picquet duty about three times a week. Besides this they have been reveille band, playing at 5 a.m. daily, Sundays included. This is a permanent job until the arrival of another band from Canada.

The 109th Battalion who were brigaded with the 93rd at Barriefield are in camp at Bramshot.

The 93rd boys witnessed one of the recent Zeppelin raids. They could see the big airships with the search lights from Dover and Folkestone playing on it.

Speaking of the death of Major McLaughlin of the 8th C.M.R. the Kingston Standard says:

Maj. McLaughlin was second in command of the 8th C.M.R. in Barrie field camp last summer, and when the 8th entrained for the front he was the last member or the fine cavalry regiment to shake hands with the representative of The Standard. Maj. McLaughlin was a fine type of man and soldier. His life in camp was an inspiration to all who come in contact with him.

He was a profound student, and loved to walk with others in pleasant academic paths, and ways of learning. Maj. McLaughlin could tell a good story, and was a conversationalist, a capable cavalry officer and in all things a fine type of gentleman. All in Barriefield camp who knew him will regret to learn of his death at the front.

Good—Lieut. L. J. Stuart, Peterborough; Lieut. W. G. Worth, Peterborough; Lieut. H. S. Laughlin, Milltown; Lieut. T. A. Murray, of Clarenholm; Lieut. R. K. Starr, 98th; Lieut. E. R. Hughes, 93rd Battalion; Lieut. C. F. Stevenson, of St. Thomas; Lieut. A. A. Horton, 35th; Lieut. G. R. Harrison, of Hantsport; Lieut. F. J. Gray, 98th; Lieut. J. J. Vandersluys, 98th.

Capt. Max Hamilton a Peterborough officer, who has been with the 146th Kingston Battalion at Valcartier Camp, has been transferred to the 247th Battalion. Capt. Hamilton is a well known resident of Peterborough and military men and true citizens generally will be glad to hear that he is to be with the 247th. He is on duty at the Armouries to-day.

In a letter to his brother, Pte. Cecil Connors, formerly of the 93rd Bugle Band, and now of the Machine Gun Section of the 93rd, gives some particulars of his illness which was officially reported some weeks ago. Pte. Connors says: "I guess you will know by this time about me being sick. I was operated on for appendicitis nearly three weeks ago, and am still in hospital and in bed, and can move but very little. My appendix burst before I could be operated on which made it very bad for me. It was a close call. I quit bugling and threw up my stripe and Will (Sergt.

LAST YEAR'S ATTENDANCE WAS BEATEN BY 600

MANY BARS CLOSED EARLY WHEN LAST STOCKS WERE GONE

Inspector Stewart Says Only Dregs Were Left When the Law Went Into Force and These Must Go To-day

BARS PASSED AWAY QUIETLY

"Fifty dollars would probably cover the value of the goods that were left over in the bars on Saturday night" said License Inspector Stewart this morning. The hotelkeepers have a day of grace to-day to dispose of their slender surplus and from all accounts they were making good use of it. Some of the bars were entirely sold out early on Saturday and the locks turned in the bar doors before the prescribed hour. One man had two cases of wet goods left, but he locked up about six o'clock as a safety first precaution against any eleventh hour demonstrations.

The Windsor hotel was reported ah through at five o'clock and this morning blossomed as a regulation "standard". The Munroe House bar is closed temporarily while it undergoes a transformation. It is understood that it will be further prepared for the farm trade with special attention to the ladies. The reconstruction period will evidently find this house well prepared for whatever the future will bring.

The Snowden House bar hadn't opened this morning, but it is yet too early for the various houses to get in line with the new idea.

Many of the crowd that lingered around the old haunts on Saturday evening were more than surprised to find some of the bars apparently eager to close for they didn't wait until the seventh hour, and in other places the supply had reached the lees.

One of the stories going the rounds tells of bars that were selling local option beer for draft and of men filling up with it at the same time wondering at their sobriety. This was not only a Saturday occurrence but in some cases had continued for several days without the "gang" realising the weakness of their customary tincture.

Peace and Quietness.

The final closing of the bars attracted a good deal of attention. Crowds of spectators lined the curbs outside the hotels that were still in the ring when the "knockout bell" sounded at seven o'clock. They expected to see some fun in the form of a few fistic encounters, but were sadly disappointed. Beyond a few ribald bowls nothing occurred to mark the inception of prohibition. The bars that were able to continue in business until the closing hour found little difficulty in turning the crowd out on the streets. There was more than the usual number of drunks, although nothing but "ambulance cases" found their way into the "clink." These were dealt with this morning in the usual way. The situation as a whole was one of peace and quietness.

Sir Thomas Tait Is Appointed

Is Director-General of National Service For Canada

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—Announcement was made by the Government to-day that Sir Thomas Tait, formerly of the C.P.R., has accepted the position of Director General of National Service. Sir Thomas has undertaken to mobilize the Dominion for war and industrial purposes, a position which will demand much executive ability. It is altogether likely that provisions of recent registration will be somewhat extended and amplified with the object of putting into fighting line the maximum number of men, consistent with preserving the agricultural, industrial and commercial stability of Canada.

In Spite of Weather That Was Far From Ideal More People Saw Peterboro' Industrial This Year Than in 1915.

GOOD DAY SATURDAY

Although Saturday's weather conditions were far from ideal the coolness in the atmosphere did not seem to interfere with the attendance at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition for four hundred more people passed through the gates than on the same day last year. Altogether the total attendance for the two days beat last year's figures by six hundred under much more disadvantageous weather conditions, so that the directors have every reason to feel proud of the record scored. As for the general public the predominant note seemed to be one of satisfaction with the exhibition and the programme generally, the 1916 exhibition being regarded as the best yet from all view points.

Saturday's programme included the different vaudeville acts by the La Tow Sisters, the wonderful Arab acrobats, Prof. Hardie on the high wire, and the snappy exhibition of stretcher drill, first aid work and physical drill by the smart squad from Queen's Field Ambulance. It was after six o'clock before the later act was given, so lengthy was the programme.

There was only one race on the cards on Saturday, the 2.14 class, but it provided plenty of excitement for the third day crowd. There were four starters, Gilford Boy, owned by Geo. Barrie, Gilford Montalvo, owned by S. Hodgins, Orillia, Dan D, owned by J. C. Killet, Haliburton, and Jimmy Direct, F. Montgomery, Peterborough, and the exciting nature of the race is shown by the fact that three of the four horses each had a winning heat to his credit during the afternoon. The Haliburton horse, Dan D, grabbed the first heat in good style, but in the second heat met with an accident to his bike a wheel dropping off. Montalvo came through and won this heat. In the third heat Dan D had a similar accident and Jimmy Direct looked an easy winner Montalvo, however, with the well known Jimmy Powell handling the reins, came from behind and won by an eye lash in an exciting finish. It looked like Montalvo for the race, but in the fourth heat, Gilford Boy came through in a driving finish and won out. The Gilford stallion also won the fifth heat and as the conditions were the heat showing in five heats, took first money. The summary:

2 Montalvo, Hodgins, Orillia	4	1	1	4	4
3 Dan D., J. C. Killett, Haliburton	1	4	4	2	2
4 Jimmy Direct, Montgomery, Peterborough	2	3	2	3	3

The Baby Show.

The baby show on Saturday aroused as much interest as it did on Friday. It was boys' day and there was a big squad of competitors to give the judges a busy hour. Mayor Duffus, Chief Howard and Mr. H. C. Winch were the judges, and they had a difficult task in selecting the winners. The results were announced as follows:

Under One Year.

1 Baby Ferguson, 75 Smith street, 8 months old

2 Baby Simons, 288 1-2 McDonnel street, 6 1-2 months.

3 Baby Dunsford, 99 Rubidge street, 7 months.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, SEPT. 18, 1916

CAN BE IMAGINED.

The new tank, armoured, car just brought into use by the British on Saturday—a war machine that walks over shell pits and mine craters, and carries death and destruction in showers of lead, and mows down Germans lie hay, while its own crew and guns are safe behind its impenetrable armour, is hard to believe in. But the genius and workmanship that devised and built a Whitehead torpedo, with fineness of detail and finish not surpassed by any article in my lady's jewel box, can easily concede almost any possibility. We, in Peterborough, who have seen the lumberman's "alligator" climbing over hills and ridges to take to the water again, like an animated prehistoric amphibian monster, can easily credit the idea of an armoured car, capable of "walking" over fields and trenches, safe and scathless against every form of military missle, except the shot and shell of big guns.

A NATIONAL DISGRACE.

What is the matter with Canada as an agricultural country? We boast of our uncountable acres of fertile soil. We have millions under cultivation or so-called cultivation, and we have the area of a continent that has not felt the touch of the plough? Yet we have scarcity, and if not famine, we have famine prices of staple products of the farm. In Montreal they have butter at 42 cents to 44 cents per pound, and in Peterborough we are steadily climbing towards that figure. Canada by no means produces enough butter for home needs. While we export butter, we also import it, the next thing in illogical absurdity to importing farm land. In 1915 we exported 2,724,943 pounds of butter, of a value of $668,625. Against this, however, we imported 6,759,409 pounds, of the value of $1,673,717. We not only imported three million pounds more than we sold, but had to pay on our importation a duty of 4 cents per pound, or $182,000 in added cost, put on by the tariff fence. We imported in fact more than a million dolalrs worth of butter beyond the total product of the country. In Europe, the people are compelled to use artificial substitutes for butter such as margarine and cocoa butter. It looks as if we should have to come to this in Canada unless butter production is increased. In the matter of eggs, they are soaring in price—winter prices in summer—the season of fullest production. The cause of these present a nice problem in production economics. The matter deserves intelligent attention. It seems monstrous, that with a population of only two persons to the square mile, we cannot grow enough of two staple articles of food supply to feed ourselves. Our failure to do this is a national disgrace.

PROHIBITION.

In Peterborough under the license system we had with fair enforcement of the law, dry Sundays. Now under equally good enforcement of the law we shall every day a Sunday as far as drinking and its consequences are concerned. With one day's experience it would be absolutely impossible to estimate the effect of prohibition, how it will affect the habits of the people, how we can form some estimate from the manner of its popular acceptance. Many persons anticipated and predicted that on the last day of free access to liquor there would be an orgy of drunkenness. The contrary was the case, the police cells held no more than their normal number of Saturday drunks. It is perhaps true that there was a good deal of drinking done but no more, than normal considering the big exhibition crowd in town on Saturday, but comparatively few reached the advanced stage of intoxication. And this was perhaps largely due to a little spirit of bravado amongst persons not given to excess with an idea of "enjoying" the last hours of "personal liberty"—many taking a few glasses, who under usual conditions, would not have done so, and which to many was their last social glass.

There seems to be a general disposition among the public as well as amongst "the trade" to a philosophical acceptance of prohibition as a fixed condition; and its permanence as the law of the land will depend upon the public to a large extent. It is probably a fact that a large majority of hotel-keepers would prefer to do business without the bar if they could achieve a living profit without its aid. It seems, to be a fact that it is a little difficult to make ends meet without the hotel business being subsidized by the profits of the bar. But there is no reason why it should not be made to pay like any other business. There does not seem to be any reason why the public, in the matter of hotel service, should not submit to the increase of the high cost of living, which has touched every department of life, and has heretofore not applied to hotels as much as to other things. The large popular majority who favour prohibition must be prepared to have the courage of their convictions, and if the abolition of the bar makes necessary an increase in the cost of hotel service they should be willing to meet it without grumbling—be willing to pay the increased cost which hotels, to live and give decent service, must cause by advance in prices. The decent prohibition advocate will not complain at the increase of his hotel bill over that of license days, when he reflects that the low rate was virtually made possible at the expense of the bread and butter and comfort of wives and children. Farmers, who are reasonable, cannot expect a continuance of the free advantages they have so long and largely enjoyed in connection with hotels, and should not complain if they have to pay a little for accommodation, they have had free. The farmers have had the benefit of an almost doubling of price for many things they sell. While the advance in hotel rates has not been at all proportionate.

It is not to be expected that prohibition will have all smooth sailing, and that it will at a stroke destroy the evils that intoxicants and their intemperate use have produced. The evil of strong drinking is like the fabled hydra of a hundred heads—cut off one and another grows. Repress drinking at the bar, and it may by the force of habit appear elsewhere. It is feared by some that the roaring trade done by the liquor shops on Saturday and of late would increase home drinking. Not as much perhaps as expected. Of the thousands of homes where a supply of liquor has been laid in—and there are very few in the city to-day without a supply—ten out of the dozen will not use a drop except in case of emergency, like illness. Twenty years hence there will be a lot of "fine aged" whiskey in Peterborough and elsewhere in Ontario. There is a deal of unwarranted rant about the evil of strong drink in itself. Its sole evil consists in its improper and intemperate use. The chief cause of these, social drinking and treating, will be eliminated by the elimination of the bar. Prohibition will depend largely for its success upon the enforcement of its provisions as well as upon the attitude of the public towards a revolntionary—the new economic—condition, created by the removal from legal and social recognition of a traffic rooted in centuries of custom.

What Workmen Fight For In This Democratic War

Mr. Asquith and his colleagues—at least those who were his colleagues before the coalition—are fiercely attacked by the Mail and Empire. Their administration of affairs for ten years was "nothing less than a national blight." This is the decade in which pensions were given to the aged poor, a labour exchange was established to prevent unemployment, insurance was provided against sickness and unemployment, and great estates were made to pay their due share of taxation.

The leader in most of these reforms was Lloyd George, the man who has organized Great Britain for war. The war, we are told, has awed the Radicalsout of his "flippancy and knavery." We take the opposite view. We regard Lloyd George as an intensely serious man, who takes all his responsibility seriously. For ten years Lloyd George did his utmost to make Great Britain a country worth fighting for. When free institutions were threatened, he did his utmost to make Great Britain a force for freedom and democracy.

Suppose that for ten years before the war Great Britain had been under a different kind of Government, a Government which neglected the poor and the workers. Can we imagine that when the war broke out, such a Government could have raised an army of five million men? The answer must be "no." Th workers of the nation would have declared that is the Government was not interested in them, they were not interested in the Government, and they ought not to be expected to fight the battles of selfish ruling classes. No doubt many would have volunteered in a spirit of unselfish sacrifice, and in the hope that some day they would receive justice. But it would certainly have been far more difficult to raise the great British army, either by voluntary means or by compulsion, if the Government had been careless about the rights of the people.

The Asquith and George reforms made the workmen of Great Britain feel that they had something worth fighting for. When Lloyd George made his appeals for recruits or for harder work on munitions, workmen listened to him as to a friend who had shown his sympathy in a practical way. They would have laughed at a selfish man, or a fossil wedded to the old ways. The ten years of humane, democratic legislation, were the salvation of the British Empire and of free institutions. Yet the authors of this legislation are denounced by the Mail and Empire as demagogues, wiseacres and owlish quacks.

While this radical, progressive legislation is branded as a crime, Mr. Asquith is also denounced as a Conservative, because he would not swallow an ill-considered scheme for tinkering with the constitution of the British Empire—a scheme which was rejected by every representative of the United Kingdom and of the Dominions at the Imperial Conference, except its author.

No doubt the author meant well. He was Sir Joseph Ward, Prime Minister of New Zealand. He represented what is perhaps the most democratic part of the British Empire, the place in which the rights and liberties of workers are most carefully guarded. Did he believe that Campbell-Bannerman and Asquith and Lloyd George and Churchill were "owlish quacks" because they were trying to bring England up to the standard of New Zealand? We believe that the contrary is true. We believe that Sir Joseph Ward was trying to democratize the British Empire. His plan was not well considered, and Mr. Asquith and Sir Wilfrid Laurier were quite right in saying that it was unworkable. But if it is necessary to reorganize the British Empire so as to strengthen the union, and make co-operation more efficient we must surely ask what is the purpose and the end? What would New Zealand say, and what would Australia say about some kind of Imperial reorganization that was intended to quench the ambitions of the worker, and "keep him in his place," obedient to the privileged classes? If the British Empire is to be reorganized the aim to reorganization must be the very opposite of this. It must be reorganized on a democratic basis. It must be reorganized along the lines of New Zealand and Lloyd George. If the fossils imagine that this war will enure to their benefit they had better wake up and think.—Toronto Star.

DYE SHORTAGE CHANGES STYLE

London. — The scarcity of dyes will have more effect in limiting the choice of colors for women's dresses this autumn and winter than in any season since the outbreak of the war. This is shown by the limited selection of colors produced by the French dyers. The last "shade-card" issued by a leading Parisian house contains only sixty-six shades, most of these being of a familiar character.

All manner of expedients are being resorted to by the manufacturers of textiles to compensate for the shortage. One ingenious plan to economize with dyestuffs is to print narrow stripes with narrower spacings than usual, and "hair-line" stripes grouped to form wide stripes, in color upon a white background, so as to produce the effect of a dyed ground ornamented with white stripes. "Dyed grounds are a luxury," states a trade report just issued by the City of Bradford Technical College.

Another effective method is to ornament white grounds with a combined stripe and flower pattern, or to mingle checks, flowers and stripes into one composite and artistic design. Large checks ranging from 3 inches to 6 inches, and even as much as 8 inches square, are a distinctive novelty for the approaching season.

A leading authority in the city textile trade gives the following forecast of the correct colors for autumn in connection with silks; after navy, bottle green; then all shades of pink, from flesh to salmon; next in the order given—champagne, putty, beige, fawn and antelope tints; wine, nigger ,pewter grey, a new shade of old rose and scarlet; for evening wear, all shades of lemon, amber and straw.

With a new motor truck body one man can dump a load of two tons in 30 seconds.

Well, Blime Me, 'E's Jolly Well Entitled To Be Just Anything 'E Wants To Be—Is Tommy

By J. W. Pegler.

London.—Tommy is the lovingest unblushingest lover in London. He may "go across" to-morrow, so having a "way with women," the heart of him speaks right up to-day in a trank "I love you" voice.

Moonlight sittings and sylvan nooks are an aid to courtship, but Tommy's time is too precious to wait for night, and he speaks the universal language almost as well in the busy Strand in broad day light.

As a result the London girls are the most loved in all the empire and romance lurks at every corner.

Tommy comes from all over, Australia, British Columbia, Rhodesia, and the lazy shires of England. He sheds restraint like a tourist at sea, the minute he steps from the train.

Billeted with a London householder, it doesn't take him long to meet "the little girl next door." It may be his last love affair so the going is smooth and the courtship fast.

The strand seems to be his favorite trysting place. It's a busy old street, teaming with traffic. Before the war there was little of sentiment there but Tommy has fractured so many customs that London doesn't even raise its eyebrows any more when he busts a new one.

Therefore, it's nothing for Mister Civilian to wink at if the soldier holds hands in the busiest street or strolls with the traffic, one arm around a little trim waist.

Officers can't get away with it: they are supposed to be dignified exceptions when they slip off to the Thames on Sundays. Tommy's dignity is vest pocket size.

Hundreds of unattached girls are abroad day and night, entirely willing to make love to in case there isn't any "little girl next door." Meeting them requires no formality.

"Hello," says Tommy, taking a winsome blonde. "Where you going? Can I go too?"

She isn't going anywhere particular—just walking aronnd.

He may stroll with her if he wants to. Off they go, and Tommy's arms by gradual stages slips around her waist. Inside of a block there's a love affair well under way.

DO NOT TRUST NEAREST AND DEAREST TOO FAR

Who has not felt the need at one time or another of a friend, a good, loyal friend, into whose ear one could pour out all one's griefs and be sure of sympathy, cheering words and heart interest?

Confiding natures cannot exist without it. They are weak vines stretching forth for some one to cling to. When the right choice of a friend is made the heart somehow is relieved of its heavy burden, but there is no sadness more pitiful than to put trust in the wrong people.

Women are more apt to make a mistake of this kind than men. No matter how close comrades men may be, they know how to keep their own important secrets. The woman in sorrow will rush to the arms of the nearest woman friend, unbosom her woes to her, pleading for advice and comfort. She does not stop to consider that the other woman is not vitaly interested in her troubles. The few pitying words she gives in exchange for finding out her friend's secrets cost her nothing, but in many cases she makes capital out of them.

If the grieving woman's husband is unkind or if she learns he has fallen in love with another woman; that he is running behind in his business; if he has asked her to borrow money on their home, the last person to whom she should divulge these sacred home secrets is her woman friend.

There are good, tried, true woman friends in the world who would suffer being burned at the stake rather than betray such confidences, but such friends are few and far between. Most women cannot refrain from whispering what they have found out about the other man into their husband's ears. Of course she tells her mother and her sisters, warning them they must never breathe a word of it. They in turn divulge it to their closest associates, and, like the endless chain, the troubles of the grieving woman have circled the town. Wives gossip about it over their tea. Men bring the matter up at business meetings if they are concerned in transactions in which the worried woman's husband is interested financialy. They do not dwell upon whether he is unkind or not in his home—that is no affair of theirs—but if he is in business straits it behooves them, they agree, to be the first creditors to push him to the wall. If they discuss his heart affairs, they also agree that a man who is loose in his morals is not a safe man to trust with their business.

The result is the husband of the woman who has looked to the wrong person for sympathy finds the backs of his supposed business "friends" turned against him and ere he is aware how it happened he finds himself down and out.

Gushing, impetuous wives should be carefully cautioned to choose their woman friends with great care. Acquaintances they may reckon by the score, but a friend should be chosen with the utmost care. No matter how close their intimacy may become, wives should hold their home secrets too sacredly to breathe them even to their relatives. Unless you want your ideas of friendship cruelly shattered, do not trust your nearest and dearest friends too far.

Americans In Contempt In England and France

NEW YORK—H. B. Tremaine, president of the Aeolian Company, who has just returned from the company's English branch in London, says that a trip to England at the present time is for an American business man an almost overwhelming experience.

"This is especially true,' he said, "if the traveller happens to have been acquainted with England before the war. Profound changes have taken place in English life. For one thing, many English business men and others of the more successful classes regard Americans with a feeling of the deepest contempt—I can define it as being no less than this. They are still courteous to Americans, but this is only a form that thinly disguises their real feelings.

"So deep seated is this feeling that I believe it will be several generations before it wears away. I was made to understand that France likewise shares in this attitude.

"All of this is a distinct shock to the American business man, who is under the impression that the neutrality of our country has at least been friendly to the Allies.

"Various things have brought about this feeling on the part of Englishmen. Primarily there is the conviction on their part that we are only converned in making money out of the war, that we are out to gain the utmost in profits, first, last and all the time, and that we have not hesitated to take the fullest advantage of England's necessities. Many, of course, believe that in keeping out of the war we have chosen the ignoble course, and however strange this view may appear to us it nevertheless is held by a considerable portion of the English people.

People Not "War Mad."

"What has most angered these people perhaps is the attitude of some of our public officials. When President Wilson, for instance, in one of his speeches referred to Europe as being 'war-mad' he aroused a storm of resentment in England. Every warring nation in Europe feels that it is involved in a task of the most solemn and sacred character, and so when they read of our public men referring to them as being simply 'war-mad' they are conscious of having been offered an affront of the most serious nature.

After visiting England it is hard to understand how any public man can so miss the viewpoint of Europe. The terrible seriousness of the people, their wholehearted consecration to the needs of their country, is very far from being a state of war madness. To be in this atmosphere for a few weeks and then to return to America, where every one seems absorbed in his own small personal affairs, where little or no serious thought is being given to the terrible issues involved in the war and the part we are to play in the world when peace comes is to make one tremble for the future of his country. One feels that all is not wel with our country; that at some date not far in the future we shall be confronted with mighty issues, and that we shall be poorly equipped to meet them.

"A week or two in Europe leaves one with the impression that every nation in the world to-day needs in its national service the strongest and wisest men, since very soon it will be necessary to cope with industrial and social problems of the most difficult description.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S MIRACLES

"Mr. Lloyd George has taken a dominating place in the English mind since the death of Lord Kitchener. Every big national task is intrusted to him. Several English business men whom I have known in the past and whose conservatism at that time led them to denounce Mr. Lloyd George said to me in substance on my recent visit:—'Mr. Lloyd George is performing a miracle with our people. He has risen wonderfully to his opportunity. He is a wholly changed man from the Lloyd George of other days. Of course one can readily guess where the change has taken place.

"While there are no outward displays of grief in England, there is also on gayety. The noisy patriotism that marked the beginning of the war has given way to grim determination. Rarely does one hear a band or orchestra play patriotic airs, and when played there are no encores. The recuperating wounded are to be seen everywhere; at the theatres where I went oone evening there were five men in my immediate vicinity who bore marks of terrible injuries recently received. Everywhere you looked in the audience were men wearing bandages or bearing crutches. The theatres in fact, are kept open mainly for the entertainment of the wounded or for men on furlough.

"The French fighting man, continues to hold the admiration of the Englishman. They call him, the super man of the war. I was told of one position on the French front from which a continual stream of terribly wounded men were brought out on the one safe road leading from the point where a bitter struggle was in progress. Closely paraleling the stream of wounded were lines of fresh troops who were being hurried forward to replace the killed and injured. The faces of the newcomers were composed of even smiling, although, confronted thus closely with the terrible spectacle of the wounded and knowing that within a few minutes or hours, at least, fifty per cent. of their own number would be in the same condition as the ghastly groups that were being carried rearward to the hospitals. This supreme indifference to the possibility of injury and death seems to be the dominating characteristic of the French Soldier".

WAR LOAN

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $100,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st October, 1931.

PAYABLE AT PAR AT

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st APRIL, 1st OCTOBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 97½

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st APRIL, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

10 per cent on application;
30 " " 16th October, 1916;
30 " " 15th November, 1916;
27½ " " 15th December, 1916.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred million dollars exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of October, 1916, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the October instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, or Victoria.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 23rd September, 1916.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA, September 12th, 1916.

BRIEUX URGES WAGE RISE TO HELP BIRTHS

French Academician — World's Most Famous Writer on Woman's Questions.

BY EUGENE BRIEUX,

Paris.—Of all the grave problems which France now faces, none is more pressing than that of our declining birthrate. We must repopulate the country after the war or France dies; it will be a slow death, but none the less a sure one.

cause there will be no more French people. Of what use is all the heroism of our men if France is to fall into decay in this way?

France will never die of old age. The race is ever young. You see that at Verdun, where our sons show the world that they know how to die; you see it in Canada, where our exiled compatriots show they know how to propagate life.

If she is to die, France will die because she will have voluntarily renounced the task of perpetuating herself. We march to our death to save our country; haven't we the courage to create life to prevent our country's disappearance?

SOME FALSE EXPLANATIONS

The evil has been explained away in many ways. It has been said that the cause is the weakening of our religious life. How is it then that in Paris there are, proportionately, many more children than in the artisan district of Menilmontant—where non-religious funerals are most numerous—than in the fashionable Faubourg Saint-Germain, where civil burials are the exception.

True, the Catholic province of Brittany is the most prolific in France, but so also is it the district where most alcoholic drink is consumed. So that if you assign the former effect to the Catholic cause you must also assign the latter.

The question is whether appeals to the patriotism of the poor will suffice to solve the problem. A tax on the bachelors has been suggested. If the tax be light it will be ineffective; if it be heavy it will cause a flood of emigration.

Bonuses for the birth of each child are also suggested. If you think such a measure will have the desired result you must expect the people to make paternity a business. But the truth is if people should calculate on such a matter and weigh profit against loss—the bonus again the cost of upbringing the child—the result would be to cause a further decline in the population.

IMPORTANCE OF FOOD.

A landowner once told me that having placed thousands of fry in his fishpond he was surprised the following year to find neither fish nor fry. A zoologist explained the mystery to him:

"Don't worry about the fry, but see that around the edges and on the bottom of your pond you have plenty of plants that feed the inhabitants of ponds. You wil find that your fish will increase and multiply. Population is regulated by food. Also fix up a spawning place in a good spot—where the young fish will be warm and sheltered from the pike."

The angler followed his advice with completely satisfactory results. Fish came in multitudes because they found abundant food and were exposed to few dangers as they grew bigger.

I know that it is not the same with men as with fish, because the former create their own food, but so do this their condition must be favorable.

GOOD POLITICS NEEDED.

If after the war the politics of our legislators are good we shall have plenty of children. Good politics means higher wages, and the workman with a good wage does not regard the advent of an extra mouth at the table as a misfortune. Married couples will no longer say: "We have had too much trouble to bring up the children we have now to want others."

Troubled by their inability to give to their beloved children a good chance in life and mortified at the sight of them growing up pale and weak from insufficient food, parents to-day say: "We've created enough unhappiness." They don't have children because they love t m so much.

The working classes will be only too ready to increase their families so long as there is a certainty of food and shelter. When women are certain that the children they bear will grow into healthy men, there will be no birth rate problem. But so long as the coming of a baby means terrible privations, parents will thankfully go without children.

The fact that large subscribers to the last loan are now doubling their subscriptions, and in some cases even doing better than that, is regarded as a most encouraging sign.

A calculation of interest to small investors has been worked out by the statistical department of Greenshields & Co., which describes its workings somewhat as follows:

Taking a $1,000 bond as the unit, the investor will pay $100 on or before September 23. On October 16 the investment house will advance the full amount necessary to take up the bond, that is $875, less the Government discount, which amounts to about $2.78. The investor will then be debited with $872.22 which amount he will liquidate by monthly payments of $50.

In seventeen months, allowing for the minor adjustments they will have to be carried out in the final payment, the full amount will be paid off. During that period the investor will pay interest—in the case of the Greenshields plan at the rate of 6 per cent. — on the decreasing balance with which he is debited from month to month. Over 17 months this interest will amount to $35.31. In the same period, however, the investor will be credited with two coupons of $25 each and will have an equity in a third coupon shortly to fall due. The value of the two coupons and the equity in the third work out at $70.68. Deducting the interest charge of $35.31 on the debit balance through the period the investment will give a net income of $35.37.

If the same amount of money had been put into a savings bank from month to month, and credited monthly, the income would work out at only $22.26.

Actually, then, the return is larger from the bond investment on the instalment plant than it would be from the same money placed in a savings bank, and at the end of the 17-month period the investor is in possession of a security earning at the rate of approximately 5.90 per cent per annum.

Buying a bond on an instalment plan such as is outlined in the foregoing, appeals particularly to the good citizen, of thrifty disposition, who is short of funds at the moment, but is none the less anxious to do his bit towards making the loan a success—while at the same time creating an excellent investment for himself. The plan does not persume that the investor must be held down to the $50 monthly payments. He is at liberty at any time to pay off the full amount with which he is charged and receive his bond. Or if he is unable to continue payments, he may order the bond sold on the market and receive back the credit balance from the transaction. The instalment idea has caught on with a very large number of persons who would otherwise have made no effort to participate in the loan.

FACTS FROM MANY LANDS

Glasgow has seven municipal lodging houses, six for men and one for women. They are stone buildings three to five stories in height, and of the most substantial character. Each lodger has a separate room, with bed and chair. The bed has a wire spring, a hair or fibre mattress, coarse sheets, a blanket, a coverlet, a pillow, and a pillowcase. These are aired, cleaned, and washed after the lodger has gone in the morning. The total number of bedrooms in the seven houses is 2,235.

The longest flagstaff produced in British Columbia is soon to be sent to Great Britain as a gift from the Provincial Government, and it is planned to place it in the Kew Botanical Gardens a few miles out from London. The tree from which it was made was a perfect specimen of fir pine, and the staff, which is 216 feet in length, is without flaw.

The first telephone directory, issued in 1878, consisted of a card containing the names of 252 subscribers. The present directory has 970 pages, and an edition of 610,000 copies has been distributed. The preparation of the directory consumed fifty carloads of paper, seven tons of ink, and 230 miles of binding wire.

It is reported to Washington from Peking by Commercial Attache Julian H. Arnold that an American bank is needed in China if American trade is to be extended. He declares that there are splendid chances in China to-day for American capital, and that never in the history of China have the Chinese been better disposed to America and things American. Mr. Arnold says that there are numerous chances for Americans to establish industrial plants, "China offering the best field in the world for cotton manufacturing." There are tens of thousands of miles of railroads to be built; there are tramways, telephone lines, electric plants, glassmaking establishments, oil mills, and flour mills to be erected, while there are rich mineral deposits to be mined and native products to be exported.

Battle of the Somme in Films

BY A CANADIAN OVERSEAS

Two years of the bloodiest war the world has ever known has passed, and hitherto only the participants have a picture of the reality.

Most of us have felt its grip one way and another, but the picture film is turning our mental pictures into realities and making us understand as we never did before. One does not seek to envisage human suffering, but there are times when, to understand it, one must see it. The person who has seen the once beautiful villages of North-Eastern France being smashed to dust cannot, if they would supress the immense flood of feeling and sympathy which rises in his heart. And those who have seen war as it is, reverence the men who have gone through it, and doubly honour the men who have given their lives.

The English public is now being given its opportunity. Films of the battle of the Somme, the greatest war films ever shown, are now on view, and not only will they give the public a peep beyond the boundaries of imagination, but they will make history for the future generations a reality.

These films are not sketches by artists, but they are real photos taken at the front through the actual fighting, by men who have risked their lives that humanity may see what its brothers are doing on its behalf.

It is a perfect drama from beginning to end, from the moment we see the soldiers moving up on the night of June 13th, down to the glimpse we get of the Worcesters as they pause in their advance to give England and the world, through the camera, a portion of their spirit of buoyant cheerfulness.

We look out upon utter desolation, a plain of emptiness, but in its underground windings, a mass of human beings. The trenches look like cracks in the surface of the earth, caused by some internal disturbance; all is bleak and lonely, with here and there a bare tree trunk and barbed-wire to tell the tale of desolation, while underneath a busy throng lives and dies. Shells go whizzing overhead on their fatal journey. In the distance you can see them bursting, and clouds of smoke and black debris shoot up into the air—and once again all its quiet. But what a scene of desolation! No crops, rank weeds in the spots where the shells have left the earth untouched, the ground gouged and torn, and here and there curious-looking mounds which were once villages, with a few stray battered tree trunks standing as ghastly sentinels. Truly it is a valley of desolation; the shadow and the substance of death were there too — freshly dug graves with little wooden crosses placed there by some loving comrade.

Nothing that has been said or written will give munition workers such satisfaction as will this picture of what "lumps" or shells, of huge machines of war, as big as an express engine, that disembowel the earth, huge heaps of "plum puddings" which are fired from trench mortars. We feel as we watch the assembly of men, the marching forward of regiment after regiment, the tremendous efforts to get the guns into position and the rows of shells, that we are on the edge of a volcano that will suddenly burst and turn all into hell, and we are right. There is an incessant bombardment of the German trenches, increasing and ever increasing, the earth is riddled and torn and the dug-outs are flung hight into the air, until we feel that no living thing can exist in this awful zone of explosion.

No longer do we need to imagine that scene at dawn on July 1st. We catch our breath and seem powerless to speak. Here we see the boys standing to, in the front trenches, with bayonets fixed, watching the company officer, who consults his wrist watch from time to time. One realizes how much depends upon the accuracy of the watch. There is a leap to the parapet. The officer seems to be waving a stick and saying, "Come on boys." The men climb to the top. All reach the parapet, but two do not cross; they have gone another way, and it is one first sight of the soldier's death. While we look, the soldiers in the charge have disappeared through the mist before we realize that two of their comrades have fallen in death before they gained the summit.

The appalling magnificence of a huge mine explosion, the beautiful but deadly clouds which burst suddenly over the heads of the advancing troops, prepare us for the results. These clouds deal wounds and death with shrapnel and bullets, and before our eyes the Red Cross go out to bring in the wounded.

The blood runs hot and cold. A shiver of excitement seizes us as we watch a man away over the field staggering to the rear, bearing upon his shoulders a helpless wounded man. We see him cross the broken trenches; we watch him stoop as he prepares to crawl with his burden on his back through the maze of broken barbed-wire. Will he get in safely? We held our breath until we see his task done. Then for a second we feel like showing our admiration in applause, but it does not come; instead a sense of sacredness seizes us and all is hushed.

To our boys this is nothing; it is just part of their day's work, and they will say when mention is made of it, as Lieut. Reginald Stratton said, when he was mentioned in despatches, "It wasn't worth so much fuss." But we have seen with our own eyes a deed, the like of which may gain the greatest honour of the battlefield — the V.C., and now we know what real human courage is.

Sad as the sight of the wounded coming in undoubtedly is, our hearts swell with pride and thankfulness at the tender care of the wounded by those heroes of the Red Cross. Friend and foe—for there are many German wounded brought it—are tended with loving care.

A hundred Philip Sidneys are seen around that dressing station at Minden Post, just two hundred yards from the first line trenches.

British and German mingle. There is no hatred in the heart of the British Tommy for a helpless enemy, and the Hun is grateful for all he gets. All this slaughter seems so futile, so tragically absurd, but, alas, these men who would be friends are victims of a higher power.

The battle continues to rage and the British artillery follow up the retreating enemy across the trench-scarred ground. A couple of horses fall. The artillery threads its way between the Scottish and Devonian dead, and later we see a most horrible sight, intensified by its reality —a pile of German dead. Yonder is Mameth, from which great bursts of black smoke tell of the deadly accuracy of our artillery fire. Beyond are trenches in which are British dead; further are more German dead, placed ready for burial, while the men of the Middlesex dig deep graves for their one-time enemies.

At last we emerge from the horrors of war to look upon the Lancashire Fusiliers resting after battle, preparatory to roll call, which is a greater picture than the famous one of Crimea which Lady Butler has immortalized on canvas. There is sunshine in the smiles of the men who have faced death and even hell itself. The smiles grow to laughter and high spirits such as men may read of but never see except at the close of a battle, in which the British are the victors.

And so the picture ends as the Worcesters, with jaunty step and laughing faces, turn to continue the advance so well begun.

DUTCH MOBILIZATION TEST.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 18.—There are rumours of mobilization in Holland. I hear that papers are issued for Sept. 15. The press says that plans exist for a test mobilization, which, if carried out, will occupy about four days before.

General Snyders, the Dutch commander, is said to be dissatisfied with the theoretical security of a very rapid mobilization of discharged men and desires to subject the arrangements to experimental proof.

ISN'T IT THE TRUTH? NO DOUBT OF IT

The Following is Taken From The September Number The DeLaval Monthly

There is something radically wrong where the merchant in a small town does not advertise in his local newspaper. He may, it is true, succeed without availing himself of every facility that is offered for building up his business, but the effort is made the more difficult because of the neglect.

A live newspaper is one of the best assets that a community can boast of, but no newspaper can properly represent the interests of a town unless the interests of the town are represented in its advertising columns, not as a subsidy, or charity, but in active, aggressive and intelligent effort at upbuilding.

The interests of the merchant and the publisher are identical, and there should be co-operation between them, that the town may have an effective medium of publicity on the one hand, and that the largest possible returns be given to the supporters of this enterprise on the other—Exchange.

WILL MEET IN GEORGE STREET

The Methodists of Peterborough district, of which Rev. Ben. Greatrix is chairman, will meet in the George street church next Tuesday, September 19th, when representatives from the Mission Board will be present as well as four lay delegates from every circuit and mission in the district.

Paris, September 15.—Visitors to the field on which the battle of the Marne was fought report that only observant eyes could discover that this region was the scene of a historic battle two years ago. Nature has sealed almost all the wounds inflicted by the fighting, except for the trees with scarred trunks and here and there shallow hastily dug trenches along the main roads, and the rusty, tangled, and twisted remains of barbed wire defences at the outskirts of isolated villages and farms.

Journeying along, however, the visitor meets with hundreds, even thousands, of graves marked with the cross of the tri-color. The great majority of the graves bear simply the names of the dead warriors, with the words "Killed, September 6, 1914."

One of the chief points of interest to the Marne pilgrims of the future will be the frame house at Champ Fleury, where General Von Kluck had his headquarters during the battle.

Another point of interest will be the famous Chateau Mondemont, which was one of the most important tactical positions in the battle. It still stands, though more than half in ruins.

DO GIRLS IN TEENS MAKE GOOD WIVES?

It seems strange to me—the great number of letters that come to me from youths, men who have supposedly arrived at the years of discretion and, indeed, men of older years—asking if I think their future happiness would be safe if they took for a wife a girl in her early teens.

The youth of one and twenty might come out none the worse for rushing headlong into matrimony at an early age and with so young a mate, but the man of 30 or over cannot afford to juggle with his future peace of mind. At 16 or thereabouts, a girl possesses the heart and experience of a child. No matter how you may try to figure it out to the contrary, the plain truth is that an old head cannot be put on young shoulders.

The world would stand aghast at the very mention of a boy of 16 taking upon himself the cares and responsibilities of being a husband to a mature spouse. The situation the other way is quite as incongruous. Every girl, under the right auspices, is intended to make a good wife, but not at so tender an age. The very young girl has not the right conception of what true love really is. No faith should be placed in her protestations to the contrary. She only imagines her heart as responding to love's call. Her inexperience should bar her from being expected to preside well and judiciously over a husband's home. While it is true that she may have been obliegd to take the helm under her father's roof — that was different.

There was but one head to that home and that head was — father. The youthful housekeeper was not allowed to have full, free rein. Father consented to this expenditure or refused that one as as his judgment dictated. The girl's powers to run the house as she would like were wisely curtailed. As a wife, the restraint would be removed. Who could expect the child would display womanly ability, which only years of experience could properly develop. old head cannot be put on young is the girl's heart to consider very reign, in their home. Twenty or over might spring from her union with the youth. Who shall say that the older man in the years to come might be able to convince her that she had not made a mistake in taking upon herself martial vows too early to realize their full import?

Philosophers have decided that the truest happiness has existed and ever will exist where the husband is older than the wife, but by no means should he be double —never three times—her age if true love should reign in their home. Twenty or over is quite young enough for a girl to wed. She should have opportunity to frolic with her dolls up to that time.

You Will Like The Carefully Emphasized Individuality Of These Fall Styles

IN SUITS, COATS AND WAISTS, in fact, all manner of Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Garments we can present, an almost unlimited range in styles that are conspicuous only for their distinctiveness and moderate prices. The scarcity of materials and dyes have made considerable alteration to prices, but we have assembled a most remarkable collection of garments that are well within the bounds of the old figures. Here are a few for your approval.

The Latest Skirts from $5.00 to $19.00

THE SKIRTS of this season have left behind them their plainess of former years and are now shown in plaids and stripes, accentuated with pleats and shirrings around the waist line, satins and valours are also at the height of popularity. They are greatly favored this season, we have them from $5.00 to $19.00.

Fancy Blouses from $4.75 to $10.00

WITH SEPARATE SKIRTS so firmly established in the style book of Fall 1916, it makes the Blouse an indispensable accessory, so hence our unusual array. Cascade fronts, wide collars and closely pleated frills are the glaring features. Colours are Rose, Maze, Green, Alice Blue, Aeroplane Blue and several striped designs. $4.75 to $10.00.

"Heavy" Fashionable Coats from $10.00 to $75.00

Great fulness is emphasized in the Separate Coats this season, some falling from the shoulder in graceful folds, others acquire their fulness at the waist line where they are slightly gathered, wide collars and belted effects are also featured, and then the odd shaped buttons that assume the shapes of saucers, barrels or domes. Tweeds, Chinchilla, Corduroy Velvets and Wool Jerseys are among the most popular materials. All of the above effects may be sound in our coat stock. Prices from $10.00 to 75.00.

Distinctive Suit Models from $25.00 to $40.00

The fashion has been very accommodating this season and has provided an abundance of fur that will undoubtedly add warmth to the suit garments. The coats are from ¾ to ⅞ in length and the flare has not been overlooked, for it is here with its graceful swirls, many of the collars all have a decided leaning to largeness. In colours our stock is most authentic and comprehensive, Navy, African Brown, Russian Green, Black, Grey and Prunelle, and many of the colours are shown in different shades. Materials are Gabardines, Cheviots & velours from $25 to $40.

LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR DEPARTMENT

¶ An impression appears to have gained credence in some quarters that this department only carries the Higher Grade Garments in SUITS, COATS, DRESSES, WAISTS and SKIRTS, and while this may be and as a matter of fact is actually true in a general sense, on the other hand the BARRIE policy is to cater for all tastes and pockets, exactly the same care being exercised in the selection of the more reasonably priced garments as in the case with the more expensive ones.

¶ Further, a lady desiring, say for example a suit at $15.00, $20.00 or $25.00 is absolutely certain of receiving just the same measure of courtesy and attention as a lady buying one at $60.00 or $70.00.

¶ Several ladies visiting the store for the first time have commented on this fact remarking also that Barrie's Limted is one of the prettiest and best equipped stores in Canada while the attention and service given is beyond question.

LEADER IN THE FARMERS' MOVEMENT

Mr. R. MacKenzie Will Address Meeting of Peterboro County Farmers

One of the best known leaders in the farmers' movement in Western Canada, Mr. R. MacKenzie, of Winnipeg, who for many years has been the secretary of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association, but recently resigned that position to accept the position of secretary of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, is to address meetings of farmers in Otonabee and Smith townships this week. The Canadian Council of Agriculture is the National Executive Head for the farmers' organizations in Canada. With it is associated the three great farmers' organizations of the prairie provinces, and the United Farmers of Ontario. The object of the Council of Agriculture is to enable the various provincial organizations to concentrate their efforts for the advancement of agriculture in such ways as they may find advisable. Mr. MacKenzie is visiting Ontario in order that he may get in closer touch with the farmers of the province and be able to work to better advantage with the United Farmers of Ontario.

In addition to being the secretary of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, Mr. MacKenzie is also a director of the Grain Growers' Grain Co., which this year with its subsidary companies is likely to show profits of half a million dollars, or more. It is now recognised as one of the greatest and most successful financial institutions of Canada. It has over 18,000 farmer shareholders.

The first meeting that Mr. MacKenzie will address will be that of the 6th Line Farmers' Club in Otonabee, and will be held in the 6th Line school house, at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening. On Thursday evening, Mr. MacKenzie will address the members of the Zion Farmers' Club in the Zion Church, in Smith township, at eight o'clock.

A cordial invitation is extended to all the farmers of both townships who can do so, to attend these meetings. There is a possibility also that Mr. J. J. Morrison, secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario, will also speak.

Park Street Church Honours The Memory of Sergt. Fred. Thomas

LARGE CONGREGATION PRESENT

Park Street Baptist Church paid a tender tribute on Sunday morning to the memory of one of its members, the late Sergt. Fred Thomas of the 21st Battalion, C.E.F., who was recently killed in action. Lansdowne Lodge of the Sons of England, honoured their fallen brother by attending in a body, and the large congregation was deeply moved by the impressive service, and by Rev. Dougald Brown's sermon. His text were the words of David in II. Samuel, 3:38: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?" He sketched the historical reference to the death of Abner, and enumerated examples of great men of the Bible who had been soldiers. When Joshua came to Jericho he beheld a man with a drawn sword in his hand, and approaching, asked "Art thou for us or for our adversaries?" And the man replied: "Nay, but as a Captain of the host of the Lord am I now come." This, Rev. Mr. Brown instanced as an evidence that God was behind the movement. He recalled the fact of Cromwell's men, praying for assistance and guidance. In the present conflict men were in communion with God as truly as were missionaries. The late Sergt. Thomas, Rev. Mr. Brown said, had shown the true qualities of greatness in his courage, endurance and love. By his self-sacrifice he had died for his country and had given his life for his fellowmen.

Special music included a solo "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" by Miss Flossie Nicholls, and the anthem, "Days and Moments Quickly Flying."

Sermon on "India".

At the evening service the Pastor was assisted by Rev. Mr. Galt of Gilmour Memorial Church, Rev. Edward Russell of Bedwley, and the sermon was preached by Rev. H. E. Stillwell of Toronto, a returned missionary of India, and, at present, treasurer of the Foreign, Home and Western Mission Boards. He is principal of the Baptist High School at Cocanada, India. Rev. Mr. Stillwell gave an unusually interesting address on conditions in parts of the Asiatic Empire, the problems of the Missionaries and the great work they had incidentally done in fostering loyalty among the Indian peoples. Rev. Mr. Stillwell stated that 60,000 natives had been received into the Church during the past year. He emphasized the importance of the medical work, and especially of the lady doctors, who have won the greatest confidence among princes and people alike. In a district populated by a million and a half inhabitants there was only one English doctor, assisted by a handful of native trained apothecaries. It could be understood how the doctor was overworked, and it was but small wonder that they were forced to return for rest after a few years of such labour.

EXHIBITION NOTICES

EXHIBIT OF ADAM HALL STEEL STOVES AND RANGES

No better exemplification of Peterborough's ability to supply first-class home necessities could have been given at our Industrial Fair than the splendid display of Tropic Steel Stoves and Ranges, "Made in Peterborough," by the firm of Adam Hall, Limited, Simcoe and Bethune streets. Recent events appear to indicate that the "Made in Peterborough" movement, and their merits have been quickened and the Adam Hall, Limited, demonstration on the Fair Grounds was an object lesson to the whole city, as well as the thousands of country visitors.

These steel stoves and ranges met with well-deserved encouragement, and their merits have been especially appreciated by farmers, lumbermen, railway contractors and hotelmen. The firm has given long, practical attention to these stoves, and their ripe experience covering the past 35 years has resulted in giving splendid results.

The display shown at the Fair consisted of samples of all various lines of stoves, ranges and heaters, for coal and wood. Ranges are shown in four and six-hole patterns, with and without reservoirs. The farmer with a large household who needs a cooking stove to do good work, quickly and efficiently, could have a silent partner in one of these fine ranges, that would save him both money and worry.

These stoves present an advance idea in modern construction. They are substantial and attractive in design and productive of the highest efficiency in cooking and heating capacity. Some of the valuable features of the Tropic Ranges are: Large box oven, large top cooking surface, fire-box of ample capacity to heat and bake economically, and economy on fuel.

The high standard of their Oak Tropic Heater is due also to the volume of heat radiation at the smallest cost for fuel, and, in design, are types of the handsomest on the market.

An important point to be remembered in connection with these 'Made in Peterborough' stoves and ranges, is that repairs can be furnished at first cost, without delay, and with a saving of express or freight.

There was a lot of business done in this exhibit during the Fair and the members of the firm—Messrs. Adam Hall, W. T. Hall and A. L. F. Hall—were personally in attendance each day, explaining the merits of the various models.

Mr. James Murty, the well-known and long-established stove dealer of 180 Hunter street, is the city retail agent for the Adam Hall Tropic Stoves and Ranges, and considers he has not only a line of lively sellers, but a line that is a credit to Peterborough. He is confident that no out side dealer in Canada can duplicate as good a stove at the price; and that experience has proved that money and worry will be saved by buying at home—stoves "made in Peterborough."

CEMETERY COMPANY'S FLORAL PRIZES

In the Examiner's Exhibition notices of Friday last, credit was given to the Peterborough Floral Co. for a number of exhibits and prizes which were entered by and awarded to Mr. Wise, superintendent of the Little Lake Cemetery Co. Among those that should have been credited to Mr. Wise, were the following: 2nd Prize for the best group of greenhouse plants. This group was the one in the East end of the flower tent, and was in several points equally as much admired as the group which took 1st Prize. It was composed of well-grown and well-massed banks of flowers, ferns and foliage plants; and reflected the care of the careful grower and the taste of the skillful gardener. Mr. Wise's contributions from the cemetery greenhouses were also awarded 1st prize for geraniums, 2nd prize for Coleus, 1st prize for Fuchsias and 3rd prize for ferns.

SAVE SOLDIERS FROM FIRE.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Two hundred wounded soldiers were safely removed on stretchers to-night when fire broke out in the Wrest Park Military Hospital, near Ampthill, Bedfordshire.

The building, which was the seat of Lord Lucas, and was occupied for several years by the late Whitelaw Reid, Ambassador to Great Britain. It was badly damaged.

Villagers for miles around aided the police, firemen and nurses in the rescue of the wounded soldiers.

Fine Point Of Traffic Rules In This County Case

Driving north in Smith on Monday, September 11th, County Constable Moore, executing a warrant, drew up his car for the material for another information which was heard in the County Police Court this morning by Magistrate Langley. Stanley Cann was charged with a breach of the Motor Vehicles Act. In his evidence Mr. Moore stated that Mr. Cann, in charge of a team of horses, had them drawn up on the left side of the road. They were also facing north and at the foot of a steep hill. The plaintiff sounded his horn one hundred yards away, but Cann made no effort to move to the right side of the road until the automobile drew up behind the waggon and had to stop while it was pulled over to the right side.

Mr. Cann explained that he and Mr. Clifford Hancock had been drawing gravel to that section of the road and had finished it. Mr. Hancock, pathmaster of the division, told witness to drive over to that side of the road while he got out to put up the bars in the gap that lead to the gravel pit. While Hancock was thus employed the automobile drew near. Witness decided to remain over on the left side because his left wheels were in the ditch, he didn't have time to pull over to the right, and there was plenty of room for two cars to pass on the rest of the roadway. To Magistrate Langley witness said he had driven over to the left side as a convenience to Mr. Hancock, thus saving a few steps.

The Magistrate decided that there had been a breach of the Act and imposed a fine of $5.00 and costs, amount to $9.01.

Mr. Kerr, representing Mr. Cann, said he would appeal the decision.

Editor of the Examiner:

Mr. Editor,—Would you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to voice the feelings of a number of citizens regarding the manner in which the Council are dealing with the dry closets. Several months ago Mr. Spence proved to everybody's satisfaction that 15 cents a month covered all exponses and left a good profitable margin. The Council set a contract accordingly for one year but it seems to have been only a scrap of paper. It seems as if it was broken anyway. Now we are ordered to pay the sum of 40 cents, which sum collected over 800 times reaches a nice little sum. Now we understand this is collected instead of as formerly paid into the city, but it is collected by the scavenger; has the city dropped the problem because it proved to be a little troublesome, and yet they demand that these places be done once a month? Now in talking to a number of citizens about the matter I find a great deal of misunderstanding. If someone don't explain the question a little more, then I consider it the duty of the sufferers from the high price to make it their business to attend the next council meeting and register a good strong kick. I consider it a high handed way of acting and I hope this article inspires a few more and perhaps we may at the very least find out how it costs so much more under City Administration than it did when we attended to the matter privately. Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

I remain,
A RATEPAYER.

A Personal Chat with Women about Choosing a Corset

The most important advice we could give you is to select your corset with care. Select one that fits you—the model that you ought to have for your particular figure. Too many women make the mistake of buying a corset of a certain style, whether or no that particular style is adapted to their needs.

The corset designer of to-day aims for two distinct things in modeling corset shapes. One is to secure for the wearer the correct fashion outline and the other to see that the wearer obtains the greatest amount of comfort without sacrificing the fashion lines.

Our corsetieres study each particular kind of corset so that they can advise you at once upon the type of corset best fitted for your requirements. You will find it a great advantage in making selection to allow us to help you choose the model that help mold the lines of your figure so that the harmony of outline is obtained without in any way sacrificing comfort which every woman should demand. There is no extra cost attached to this service which we are anxious to render to you. And remember our corset prices begin as low as 59c and run all the way to $8.50

THE WORK OF THE Y.M.C.A. AT HOME AND ABROAD

Interesting Addresses by Major (Rev.) Frost and Capt. H. A. Pearson at a Meeting Held Yesterday Afternoon in the Grand Opera House—Local Y. M. C. A. Will Inaugurate a Campaign to Raise $5,000.

ON THE FIRING LINE

The work of the Young Men's Christian Association at home and at the front was presented in a very lucid form by a number of speakers at a meeting that was held yesterday afternoon in the Grand Opera House. The chief speakers were Major (Rev.) Frost and Captain H. A. Pearson. Both men have seen service at the front and are prominently identified with the work of the Y.M.C.A. The needs of the local institution were presented by Mr. Joseph Wearing and Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr. It is proposed to inaugurate a campaign to raise five thousand dollars to meet the pressing needs of the local Y.M.C.A. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week have been set aside for this work. Mr. Turner very ably outlined the work of the local Y.M.C.A. Its activities are manifold. A financial statement relative to the local institution is appended below.

Mr. Wearing made a vigorous appeal for support on behalf of the local organization. He referred to the good work that has been accomplished here and elsewhere by the Y.M.C.A. They are doing a wonderful work towards the development of the manhood of the nation and are a credit to the community in which they seek to serve.

Major Frost.

Major Frost gave an interesting account of the work that the Y.M.C.A. is carrying on at the front. "The Canadians" said the speaker "have a spirit of humour that helps them to bear the hardships of the campaign. Some months ago Major Frost ministered to the Anzacs in the eastern theatre of war and subsequently served three months on the western front. One of the functions of the Y.M.C.A. at the front was to furnish good, wholesome entertainment to the troops and to emphasize the responsibility of life and the need of living good wholesome lives. Canadian troops in England come under the influence of the wet canteen. The speaker regretted that the British military authorities had not seen fit to follow in the footsteps of Sir Sam Hughes and abolish the wet canteen. The Y.M.C.A. erected tents and supplied dry canteens and provided writing facilities and such other necessities as the occasion demanded. The boys were far removed from the refining influences of home life. In the military camps everybody is in khaki. Being in khaki represents a sameness. It was in this connection that the Y.M.C.A. was able to fill a large place in the lives of the men and supply them with means of entertainment and such other advantages which otherwise would be lacking. In conclusion the speaker urged his hearers to write to the boys and keep them in touch with home.

One of Five.

Captain H. A. Pearson was one of the five Y.M.C.A. workers who accompanied the first Canadian contingent to England and thence to France. Since that two out of the five were killed in France and the other three invalided home. In his address yesterday, Capt. Pearson said he was fortunate enough to miss the first winter, which the first Canadian contingent spent at Salisbury Plain. He was sent to France shortly after the arrival in England of the first contingent. Arriving in France, Capt. Pearson spent three months co-operating with the British Y.M.C.A. authorities in preparation for the arrival of the Canadian troops.

Capt. Pearson paid a glowing tribute to the British line regiments which stemmed the initial attacks of the invaders. He recalled the time when the eighteen pounders on the Canadian front were limited to three rounds per day owing to the shortage of ammunition, and also when one gun served seven miles of front. That was in the dark days of a little over one year ago when the Germans could have broken through any number of times had they taken advantage of the situation. Things have changed and the superiority is now on the side of the Allies. There is also a great change in the spirits of the people, whose attitude is one of optimism and confidence. To-day there are five Y.M.C.A. establishments located on the Canadian front. The majority of them are right at the firing line. The Canadian army is now several times larger than the first British expeditionary force that went to France, and altogether the situation has taken on a very encouraging aspect. In conclusion the speaker gave a graphic description of the second battle of Ypres in which so many Canadians lost their lives, and urged the people to remember the boys at the front, also the Y.M.C.A., both at home and abroad.

Extension Work.

Mr. Wearing, in speaking to the subject, "Keeps the Home Fires Burning," showed the necessity of keeping up the home Associations for they are the foundation units on which the military and all extension work is built.

Mr. Wearing also reported that the local Association, in addition to the support that it has given the work overseas, has given free privileges to 1,200 enlisted men locally, and that 25,000 visits have been by soldiers to the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. building since last January.

Financial Statement.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., Treasurer of the local Y.M.C.A., announced a financial canvass to be conducted on the 19th—21st of this week, the amount asked for being $5,000—one-tenth being an appropriation for the overseas work and the balance being the amount needed to cover current expenses of the Peterborough branch this year.

The canvass will open with a supper to-night at 6.30, the team captains being G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A.; Jos. Wearing, Esq.; J. J. Howden, Thos. Barrie and J. J. Turner, Jr. All of these Captains are in need of workers and would appreciate any volunteers who can be present this evening, and get in the line-up. Telephone your name in to the Y. M. C. A. office and a place will be provided for you at the supper. The budget of the Association is as follows:

Administration (Salaries and office)	$4,400.00
Operating (Janitor, fuel, light, water, supplies and laundry	1,691.60
Building (Furniture, repairs, taxes, insurance and interest)	1,120.00

The Field Comforts Commission and How Its System Operates

The regular monthly meeting of the Progressive Club was held on Wednesday afternoon, September 13th with a good attendance of members.

It was decided to resume the surgical work on Wednesday, September 20th as the workers are anxious to begin again.

Mr. Barrie, whose kindness in giving the Progressive Club its fine quarters, has always been much appreciated, paid the meeting a short visit.

The raffle of the rag rug, donated by a friend, realised five dollars. Mr. Barrie drew the lucky number which was found to be held by Miss Caroline Peck.

Mrs. Pearson gave a very interesting account of her visit to several military hospitals in England, and emphasized the need of continued work for these hospitals.

Mrs. Pearson spent some time with Miss Plummer, who explained the system of the Field Comforts Commission. Both Captain and Mrs. Pearson strongly recommended that Patriotic Societies send all trench comforts direct to the Field Comforts Commission, as men and officers at the front know they have only to apply to the Commission to receive anything they need.

CANNOT AFFORD TO WASTE ONE MAN

FOR JUST ONE MAN.

A soldier arrived at a town in Ontario the other day, invalided home from the war, and the whole town turned out to meet him.

Just for one man!

He deserved it all; we are quite willing to take that for granted; but, if all this appreciation is due to one man, how much is due to the hundreds coming back every month?

Brass bands are not to be despised, still less are gold watches. Welcome the brave, with cheers and full musical accompaniment, if you will. Strong feelings often demand loud expression. In fact, when we hear of men coming back and finding no one at the station to welcome them, we feel that something has been left undone which we ought to have done. See to this, Canadians everywhere!

But that is only a beginning. There is something much more important and lasting that we must see to.

Every man coming back is of some value to the community. That value has been reduced by injury or sickness. We must increase it again by every available resources of medical and educational science.

"That is what the Military Hospitals Commission is doing," it may be said, and truly. But the Commission is only doing it on your behalf, as representative of the public.

The individual members of the public can help, and ought to help.

The friends of a returned soldier in a convalescent hospital can encourage him to take all possible advantage of the educational classes and physical training, and to seize opportunities of employment or continued training when he comes out.

The public at large, whether as friends of particular soldiers or not, can help the affiliated Provincial Commissions to find employment for all.

Every man doing steady work suited to his capacity is a gain to himself and his country.

Canada cannot afford to waste a man.

SWEDISH FORGER HAD DEEP SCHEME

Chicago. — Details of what is said to have been an elaborate plot to swindle seventeen banks in the United States out of an amount estimated at between $300,000 and $500,000 were made public here to-day. At the same time it was announced that a detective would leave Chicago for Gottenburg, Sweden, armed with extradition papers for Karl von Bardi, wanted in connection with the alleged plot.

Von Bardi, according to the Swedish consul here has been in a Gottenburg jail since last March, when he was captured through a wireless message on a charge of having forged checks for $3,000, in the name of a local varnish manufacturing company. Although the Swedish authorities have refused to extradite him, they have also refused to release him from jail.

According to the police, von Bardi assumed in Chicago the name of a French count. Here and in other American cities he worked for five years in one bank after another familiarising himself, it is said with the bank officials' signatures, and gathering a supply of stationery and blank forms.

YOUNG GIRL IS A BANK MANAGER IN SOUTH DAKOTA

Jefferson, S. D. — There is a bank here that has a young girl for its manager, and she is making a success of the undertaking. Miss Pearl Beavers, from all appearances, is just an ordinary, attracting girl, who enjoys a good time and a frolic outside of business hours. Yet if one would know Miss Beavers during the banking day he would realise that she is an unusual girl.

Miss Beavers was born and lived the early part of her life at Jefferson. As she grew up it was not the life of a society butterfly that appealed most strongly to her, nor did the usual "teaching school" hold her interest. She wanted to be a banker. Two years ago she went to Sioux City with this fixed purpose in mind and with a determination to win out if work and perseverance could bring success. She fought her way through the Business Training School.

After she had completed her course here opportunity knocked, and it did not have to knock twice to arouse this girl with an ambition.

There was an opening for an industrious young person in the Sioux City Trust and Savings Bank. Miss Beavers got the position and at the same time a chance to prove that her ambition was backed by a determination to "get by" with her plans. She made good. Gradually more and more trust was placed in her ability. Then a few weeks ago the big opportunity came. The State Bank at Jefferson needed a temporary manager, and its authorities had enough confidence in Miss Beavers to place her in this responsible position. She has the distinction of being the only woman in the middle west who is managing a bank, and she is only twenty-two years old.

Miss Pearl Beavers has only begun to do things. There remains yet before her the success that will come to any one who has the desire for something worth while and the courage to persevere until it has been attained.

Backed by the insular government a determined effort is being made to revive sisal production in the Philippines.

Woman Interfered, Policeman Wouldn't

Mrs. A. Spellman, of 2728 West Congress Street, did something that two Chicago policemen refused to do. Jumping from a Halsted Street car after midnight, at Maxwell Street, she rushed up to where a group of men were each trying to take a kick at a man lying on the sidewalk.

"Get away from there," she ordered. And the men obeyed.

The fight was witnessed by a police sergeant and by a policeman on the street car. The latter told Mrs. Spellman he was off duty and was going home. The sergeant standing on the corner sagely advised a visit to the Maxwell Street Police Station in the morning and a warrant for assault.

Made Political Speech.

The man who was rescued by Mrs. Spellman is David Heller, 1214 Blue Island Avenue. Heller had just finished a speech at the meeting at the headquarters of the reunited Republican club of the Twentieth Ward, located at 803 West Twelfth Street. While walking home from the meeting with his brother Sam a group of men met them and started to tell the speaker of the evening that he mustn't say such nasty things about Harry B. Miller, running for State's Attorney. Heller replied that this was a free country. He was knocked down.

Heller and his brother and Max Goldstein, 587 West Twelfth Place, who also accompanied them, all declare that the fight was started by Louis Krakow, Mayor Thompson's Maxwell Street marketmaster. Krakow, they said, was the leader of the gang that "jumped" Heller. They took out an assault warrant for his arrest in the Maxwell Street Court. Krakow retaliated by swearing out similar warrants for the Hellers. The case will be heard on Tuesday.

Duty as a Citizen.

After she had safely placed the men on a street car Mrs. Spellman proceeded home. A Tribune reporter called her up.

"I am a citizen and when that policeman told me he was too tired to get off the car I felt that it was my duty to do so," she laughed over the 'phone. "Those men obeyed every word I spoke to them. They were afraid of me. There was another tired policeman standing there on the corner. I do not know whether he saw the fight or not. He told the men that it would be safe for them to get on the car, but made no move to help them, so I had to do that.

"From my experience I think that women would make better police than men do. I am sure that women could preserve better order and peace than men. There should be more policewomen."

"Have you ambitions in that direction?" she was asked.

"Yes. I intend to enter the next examination they hold for policewomen. I am just the right build for that job and I think I could hold it down successfully."

RELIEF FOR AMERICANS.

Cruiser Des Moines to Transport 65 Women and Children from Palestine.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Instruction to arrange for transportation of sixty-five American women and children out of Palestine on the cruiser Des Moines were called by the State Department to-day in the American Embassy at Constantinople.

They will embark at Joffo, where the cruiser is to deliver a supply of medicine, and will be taken by the cruiser to the nearest Italian port, and transferred to ocean liners for the United States.

The Right Way to Heat a House

The Right Way to Heat a House is by HOT WATER. This is PROVED by years of EXPERIENCE, and except for steam in large buildings, hot water is cheapest, best, and practically the ONLY ABSOLUTELY SATISFACTORY method of house heating. Why? Because, water can be regulated to any temperature to suit any kind of weather, and water holds heat longest. The constant, unfluctuating radiation of heat from a King Hot Water Radiator prevents drafts and "cold zones." Blizzards don't affect Hot Water Heating. There is no cold, drafty, "North East" room in a house heated by a KING HOT WATER BOILER. Hot water reaches every room, and every room is heated alike. This is very important for sanitary reasons and assures freedom from colds and from most sicknesses that colds prepare the way for. A Hot Water System is certainly the Right Way to Heat a House, and the "right system" means the King Boiler and King Radiators.

The Greatest Known Heat Maker & Coal Saver

You Can Try This Experiment

If one Heating System Can Save Fuel, compared with all others, it is the cheapest system. If, as is the case with the King Hot Water Boilers and Radiators, the system also gives the most and the steadiest heat, it is not only the cheapest, but the best. King Boilers and Radiators are both economical and efficient. One of the principles that makes for efficiency is illustrated this way: Take two vessels—one holding an inch of water, the other two inches of water, and set them over a fire. It is quite plain that the less quantity will heat faster. That principle is followed in the King Boiler. The wall of water surrounding the fire pot and continuing all through the water sections is only about half the quantity that in the waterways of other makes require, and, therefore, water in the King Boiler is twice as quick to heat and twice as quick to circulate. The quicker the house is heated, the sooner the Boiler drafts may be turned off and fuel saved. These very important advantages are special features of the King Boiler and Radiators, and make the King Hot Water Boiler pay for itself in a short time by the money it saves in reducing coal bills.

King Hot Water Boiler

Insist upon your local dealer giving you prices

EASE OF OPERATION

The extraordinary ease with which the King Boiler can be operated is another very commanding feature. You can stand upright (note the position of removable shaker) when shaking the furnace, and the ash pit allows a full-size ash pan. You should investigate the "King" when looking for the "right" Boiler.

King Radiators

The moulding methods employed by making King Radiators make an imperfect section practically impossible. Instead of wooden patterns which expand and contract under variations of humidity and temperature, we use IRON PATTERNS.

We submit every section and radiator to a water pressure of 100 lbs., and as the usual water pressure is only 10 lbs. you may readily see how we [illegible] every King Radiator with our UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE [illegible] for every conceivable size and shape for any position. SAYS ALLIES EXPECT A YEAR MORE OF WAR

Paul D. Carveth Returns Confident That Germany's Doom is Only a Question of Time

SUDDEN PEACE A MYTH

Attorney Found England and France Determined to Continue Until Prussianism is Crushed.

Paul D Cravath, the lawyer, returned to New York on the American liner Kroonland from a two months' trip to France, where he visited the Somme and Verdun fronts. He said the official figures regarding the aerial fighting gave the Germans as losing 120 machines and the Allies sixty during the month of August. It was evident, he said, that the Allies were preparing for at least another year of war, if not longer.

The question of how long Germany can hold out will be decided when her Government realizes that it is going to lose, he said. When asked by a Times reporter for his opinion of the conditions in the war zone from his own observations, Mr. Cravath said:

"My observations, superficial as they necessarily were, have completely revolutionized my conceptions of the magnitude of the achievements of the French and English nations in this war and of the issues at stake, not only for them, but for us in America. I return home with all doubt removed as to the ultimate certainty in this regard, and I am told that the same opinion has become general in neutral countries in Europe, even in those having pro-Teutonic sympathies.

"It now seems to me as certain as human affairs can be that the German armies that lost the battle of the Marne two years ago to greatly inferior forces, when every advantage was in their favour, cannot now win when superior and highly organized forces are facing them on every front.

"The question which is on every lip is: How long will the war last? The men who are in best position to say do not hazard an opinion except to its minimum duration. I am convinced that one element is wholly eliminated, and that is the possibility of the war ending suddenly or soon in a peace based on a compromise or an acceptance by the Allies of the conditions existing prior to the war. In both England and France—and I am told that the same is true of Russia—confidence in ultimate victory is accompanied by a grim determination to continue the war, whatever may be the sacrifice of life and treasure, until the Allies can impose upon the Central Powers a conclusive peace. One finds this determination alike in official circles, in the armies, and among the rank and file of the people at home. The Governments of both England and France have already committed themselves to a definition of the term 'conclusive peace' which involves not only the liberation and indemnity of Belgium and Serbia and the restoration of Alsace and Lorraine to France, but also the assurance of an enduring peace by the destruction of Prussian militarism.

Another Year at Least.

"Manifestly, if the conclusions I have just stated are sound, the duration of the war will be measured by Germany's ability and willingness to resist the economic and military pressure to which she will be subjected with ever-increasing force. Few with whom I have talked expect Germany to come to the Allies' terms within a year, and the Governments of England and France make no concealment of the fact that they are making their preparations on the assumption that the war may last even longer.

"We in America have no adequate conception of the magnitude of England's achievements in the war. The appeal of France has been so simple and direct that one's sympathy and admiration could not go astray, but we have heard so much of England's mistakes and shortcomings that we have lost sight of the real greatness of her achievements. By common consent among the Allies the creation of England's volunteer army, with the mobilization of the industries of the nation for the support of that army, is the most marvelous achievement of the war—always excepting the victory of the Allies in the battle of the Marne, which still remains the miracle of the war. We are apt to forget that before conscription came almost 90 per cent. of the available men of England, Wales, Scotland and Ulster had already volunteered. England has assembled, trained, equipped, and officered a volunteer army or about 4,000,000 men. No one who has not seen for himself can form any conception of the gigantic proportions of this task. England has done in two years by the voluntary action of her people what it has taken Germany and France two generations to accomplish with the most drastic measures of conscription and organization. England has been turned into a veritable armed camp. Soldiers are everywhere. To equip and munition this army there are over 4,000 factories operated by the Government or under its control, many of them built since the beginning of the war. Ot least 2,000,000 people are engaged in the manufacture of munitions, and in other activities directly connected with the war. Since the outbreak of the war the production of munitions in England has been multiplied at least fifty-fold.

England's Gigantic Task.

"In two years England has spent over $9,000,000,000 on her own preparations, and loaned about $4,000,000,000 more to her allies and colonies. After allowing for all the blunders and delays, this gigantic mobilization of the energies of the nation has been accomplished with a promptness and a universality of sacrifice and service for which history affords no parallel. The women of England have been wonderful. Hundreds of thousands of them of all ranks are doing work which in normal times is done by men.

"What is the feeling regarding the United States and her attitude toward the belligerents? That is a hard question to answer in a few words, because the feeling differs widely in different circles. In France the feeling is much more cordial than in England. That is doubtless partly due to the traditional friendship between the two great Republics, but it is chiefly due, I should say, to the appreciation of the French people of the unofficial assistance which the people of America have been rendering to France.

Masses in England Despise Us.

"In England the feeling is less cordial. In official circles and among well-informed people, particularly in London, the difficulties of our position are fairly well understood, and it is realized that the anti-British German and Irish elements in America are isolated and do not materially influence surrounding public opinion, and that our sympathies, so far as they have been aroused, are strongly for England and France. But I am sorry to say that among the people at large we are distrusted, almost despised—for what is supposed to be our attitude in this world's war—the attitude taken by our President in so many of his deliverances. The English earnestly believe that, at great sacrifice, they are fighting the battle of civilization against its great menace—Prussian militarism—and that every civilized nation is deeply concerned in the outcome. They therefore feel that they are entitled at least to our sympathy and good will. They naturally resent and despise the official advice of our President to the American people to be neutral in spirit and feeling as well as in action, and his official declaration that we have no concern in the purposes and aims of the Allies in this war.

"I, for one, have never realized, as I do now, how deeply concerned we are in the victory of the Allies, and what terrible risks for the future our Government is running in imperilling our friendship with France and England, to say nothing of the deadening effect upon the spiritual life of the nation which aloofness from the struggle which is convulsing the rest of the civilized world would entail."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

IS THERE ANY SENTIMENT IN THE BASEBALL GAME?

"There is no sentiment in baseball" avers the fat bleacherite to his wife as they sit through the fifth inning on a warm Saturday afternoon. And as he says it he things it is so—he thinks there is no sentiment in the national game. He recalls the celebrated saying of Walter Johnson two seasons ago when it was rumored that he would "jump" to the Federal league. Johnson remarked that he was after the money, and that he would play for whoever paid him the most. At least tat is the way the papers reported it, and the public has never believed in sentiment since—as far as baseball went.

But suppose the sceptic has been following the events attending the farewell of Christy Mathewson to the New York Nationals, before the pitcher transferred his activities (and perhaps his popularity) to Cincinnati. The fans will get a very different view of the baseball world. As a celebrated character once said: "Feelin's is feelin's, no matter wha has 'em". And when the old master left his team, everybody "had 'em". A writer for the New York Evening World gives a sympathetic account of the occasion when the veteran came to clean out his locker at the Polo Grounds—the first time it had been emptied in sixteen years. He tells us with graphic detail:

A long, low-hung car pulled up at the clubhouse as the rain spattered down on a sign proclaiming, "No Game To-day". A big-shouldered blue eyed fellow climbed from under the wheel and slowly made his way up the steps to the intimate home of the Giants. Nobody stopped him, though he did not belong to the New York club. In the corner of the club house the new clubhouse—there was a locker that had performed its duty for more than a decade. Clubhouses had changed several times but not the locker. The little iron grating was fastened exactly as it was fastened on that day when the Gaints licked the Athletics and won the world's championship back in 1905.

The big fellow, mopping his blond brow, fitted a key to the lock and began dragging forth things that had not been touched for many years, idling around on the benches several pink-skinned athletes watched the rifling of the locker in oppressive silence. Over in a corner a plain pine table had been rigged up for vingt-et-un and a deck of cards was carelessly scattered over it. Three or four of the muscular fellows, clad in little more than a breech-clout, sat down to have a try at the game. The big fellow turned from his demolition of the locker to watch them.

"Say, Matty," one of them yelled, "don't forget that checker-board and mind you, there is a tab there, on the shelf, showing how much the gang has won or lost during the last two months."

The blue-eyed athlete located the sheet of paper and walked over to the table. He had been the club book keeper and mathematician since a lad.

"Come now fellows," he said, "and kick in. I'm leaving and this thing's got to be straightened out."

One at a time the debtors were cornered and settled.

"And say, Matty," another yelled "don't forget that Larry and Poll owe a dollar on that last checker game."

Another dollar or two was turned over to the big pitcher.

"I guess there isn't much more use for these towels," he said, spreading them on the table. "I'll stake you to this one, Fred, and I guess Fletch will grab the other one.

"All right," yelled Larry. "Get that locker straightened out and sit in with us for a few minutes. We'd like to have you lose one time before you go!"

In a few minutes the locker was stripped and the steel-grated door swung idly on its hinges with a key stuck in the lock.

The man who had used it for years stood there, scanning a slip of paper that evidently had been lost in the dust of time. On it he made out this memorandum: "Mertes, .25; Bowerman, .60; Tenney, .50; Wilson, .50; Wiltse, 1.25; Ames, .75.

"An old twenty-one score" he mumbled, and there came the trace of a tear in the big blue eyes.

Evidently he regarded it settled for he started to tear it up and then, on second thought, carefully brushed off the little slip and placed it in a card case.

"Are you in?" an impatient athlete shouted from the vingt-et-up table. "Come on and take a hand. There's no ball-game to-day. Never mind about that new club of yours.

Just then the blue-eyed fellow dug up from the bottom of the locker a kodak-print of a party of old timers. In the middle he stood, flanked by Arthur Devlin and Bill Dahlen. That he also tucked in the big card-case.

"Are you coming or not?" the athlete demanded from the table. "We're starting the deal.

More tear-drops trickled down the cheeks of the big athlete. He edged over to the vingt-et-un table.

"Larry," he said in a half-broken voice, "I don't know whether I want to become the manager of another club or not. This is the only locker I ever had in my life. Deal me in the game!"

The cards were slowly dealt.

"Larry," said the big fellow, without studying his hand, "the only 'runnin' we ever had was when you accused me of saying you had been drinking a bottle of beer. Remember, you crocked it at me in an exhibition game down at Norfolk? I'm sorry that you thought that.

"Forget it," counseled Larry, "old boy," and he slapped him on the back "we are with you, hook, line and sinker."

The game broke up without a hand having been played, and as the big fellow bundled up his things and trundled over to the clubhouse of the visitors there were tear-dimmed eyes.

Matty's locker was empty.

It was empty for the first time in sixteen years.

And then Ring Lardner wrote a neat obituary of the great pitcher; not that he didn't know it was a bit premature, but in the eyes of a baseball fan to go to manage the Cincinnati Club is the same as passing over the well-known underworld stream, the Styx. Consequently, to the clever writer of bush league stories, Matty was to be given up as beyond hope.

So he framed it all out this way:

Chicago, July 22.—The baseball world was shocked Friday by the news that Christy Mathewson, one of the game's greatest exponents, had signed to manage the Cincinnati Reds at the age of 37 years, the very prime of life. Mathewson is the seventh prominent baseballist to succumb to this disease in a space of twelve years.

It is the opinion of prominent physicians that 'Matty' as he was fondly known, hastened his own end by taking up golf, which undermines the intellect, and thereby the general health. Those who were closest to him say that he has never been the same since he first sliced off the tee.

There is no argument for prohibition in the case of the deceased. He took the best possible care of himself. Before bitten by golf bacillus, his favorite amusements were chess, checkers, poker and auction bridge, at all of which athletic sports he excelled. He smoked, but never to excess. He usually retired before midnight and was carefully as to his victuals.

Christopher Mathewson was born in New York state somewhere in or about 1879. He received a common school education and then entered Bucknell College, where he took a Q.P.D. degree—doctor of pitching and punting. He pitched more or less professional ball down in Virginia for a time and his work attracted the attention of major league scouts and a scout from Cincinnati. Cincinnati acquired him, and the directors of the club, taking a hand, traded him to New York for Amos Rusie, which was a regular Cincinnati trade, as Rusie was through.

One of Matty's first managers in New York was Horace Fogel, who saw at a glance that he could never be a successful pitcher and tried to make a first baseman out of him. Unfortunately for many a National League batsman, Horace's career as manager was brief, brevity being the soul of wit. The next manager of the Giants got a crazy notion in his head that Matty might be able, with careful handling to become an average pitcher. This manager's judgment was proved pretty fair, for Matty, with the aid of great support, pitched his team to victory in quite a few games for a matter of 16 years. Perhaps his greatest achievement was his three shut-out victories over the Athletics in the world's series in 1905. If he had been pitching against this year's Athletics he could have done it left-handed, but it was some trick in those days.

Mathewson had been spending recent winters in California and the climate must have gone to his head.

He leaves a wife and one son, Christopher, jr.

My eyes are very misty
As I pen these lines to Christy,
Oh, my heart is full of heaviness today
May the flowers ne'er wither, Matty,
On your grave in Cincinnati,
Which you've chosen for your final fadeway.

Only 21 Paid Admissions

Major league records of recent years went by the boards on Friday last when the Yankees and Athletics played a regularly scheduled contest at Shibe Park. There were more base hits in the game than paid admissions, the hit columns showing a total of twenty-four, while the turnstiles clicked, but twenty-one times. The total receipts were under $15, and at least two dozen baseballs, at $1.25 apiece, were used up in the mud. The Yankees got about $5 as their share of the receipts. The club's expenses for the day amounted to about $600 or more in salaries for players and about $100 as a hotel bill.

SOME EXPERT OPINIONS ON WELSH-WHITE DECISION

Ed. W. Smith—To my mind the decision was a fair one. Freddie's aggressiveness entitled him to the verdict if nothing else.

Walter Bratz, Salt Lake Herald—I gave Welsh nine rounds, White five and the rest were even. This in my opinion, substantiates the referee's action.

Sam Hall, Chicago Examiner—If you ask me was the verdict a popular one, I should say no. However, if you ask me was it a just decision, I am forced to reply in the affirmative.

Baron Long, Los Angeles—Roche could have given no other decision. Welsh displayed wonderful generalship, was the aggressor most of the way and landed the most blows. It would have been an injustice to the champion to have anything else.

"Spider" Kelly, San Francisco—White should be ashamed of himself. Possessing the hitting power he does and then to allow Welsh to take the play away from him in almost every round is past understanding. Welsh's work entitled him to the award.

Jack Kearns, manager Les Darcy—Why, there was nothing to it, if the contest was to be decided on points Welsh scored the greater number of points, while White's blows were the more effective. But as points were to count, according to the announcement Welsh won.

Ray Pearson, Chicago Tribune—White should have received no worse than a draw. His work in the final rounds evened up the apparent big lead which Welsh gathered in the earlier part of the battle.

William Foreman, Chicago Herald—Think White was given a raw deal. He was entitled to a draw, all things taken into consideration I won't say Welsh should have lost, but, in my opinion, he failed to win.

Francis, New York Mail—Welsh won so ridiculously for anyone with unbiased judgment at all must admit it. The best I could give White was two rounds against Welsh's nine the balance were even.

Mile-a-Minute Murphy Again Seriously Hurt

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Charles M. Murphy, the policeman who earned the nickname of "Mile-a-Minute Murphy," riding a bicycle paced by a locomotive, is in a hospital here with his left leg fractured and his left knee broken in two places.

Murphy, who has had many narrow escapes from death, having been buried in quicksand, hit by an aeroplane and run over by an automobile, collided with a motor truck while on a motor-cycle and was thrown to the street. It was said that his left leg probably will be too stiff for riding hereafter.

Seventeen years ago Murphy won his soubriquet of "Mile-a-Minute" by riding at that time on a board track between the rails of a Long Island railroad track behind a train. It is said that he won 1,800 prizes as a bicycle racer.

HOW TY COBB LOST $10

Oscar Vitt of the Detroit Tigers, has a new system for spending money to boost batting averages; thereby helping his team's runsmaking work, and at the same time to keep the money in his pocket. He tried out successfully at Cleveland, the day Ty Cobb secured four hits, including two homers.

The third sacker evidently had figured it out that Detroit's chances for the flag would be materially enhanced if more of Cobb's hits were long ones, such as Crawford and Veach have poled with some frequency, and also that Cobb would go better if he would hit into the right field once in a while. So as they picked up their bats in the opener, Vitt remarked:

"Ten dollars says that you can't hit the right field wall. You don't have to bet. It's a donation."

Whereupon as soon as he could get to the plate, Mr. Cobb whanged the sphere ten feet over the right field screen, which is 45 feet high, pulling the ball so that it was only about 25 feet inside the foul line. Tyrus was smiling broadly when he came up the third base line, but lost his smile when Vitt remarked:

"You lose the bet. I said you must hit the wall. You hit over it!"

Organize A Football Club

The King Edward School Boys have organized their football team for the season of 1916.

At an enthusiastic meeting held this week they elected the following officers:

Hon. Pres., Mr. Breyfogle.
Hon. Vice-Pres., Mr. Richardson.
President, Mr. M. N. Clark.
Vice-President, Miss L. Elliott.
Sec.-Treas., Mr. J. M. Rossel.
Mascot, D. Walker.
Management Committee, The President, Sec.-Treasurer and Captain, Eddie Jackson.

AMONG THE LAWN BOWLERS

The jumble tournament will be completed this week. The time limit for the games is posted in the club house, all rinks not playing on or before the posted dates will default to their opponents.

Mr. Wylie's rink not having turned up in full strength, he will, at the end of the tournament, as posted in the club house, select a rink from players who have not won a prize in this tournament and challenge a rink composed also of players who have not won a prize in the jumble tournament.

These two rinks will play three games of twelve ends each. The winning rink will be present with prizes at the annual banquet, which will be held at the Empress Hotel on Thursday, October 12, at 7 p.m.

Members are requested to be sure that they have paid their tournament fee of one dollar to the secretary. Prize winners who have neglected to pay their fee will default their prizes to the next rink lower in standing.

Tickets for the annual banquet may now be obtained from the executive.

WHAT WINS RACES?

Pop Geers, the veteran trotting horse driver, is one of the most taciturn of men. He always seems to be trying to save up fifty million words to retire on. One day last summer a young reported decided to interview Geers and get a big feature story from him on the art of driving horses.

"Mr. Geers," he said, "how is it you win races? To what do you attribute your wonderful success as a driver? What is necessary to win races?"

Geers chewed a straw reflectively a moment, slowly removed it from between his teeth and said:

"Fast horses."

SPORTING MAXIMS RETOLD

The fellow who takes a chance often looks foolish when he fails.

Success to be proud of never was gained by acts needing explanation.

Capital gained by another's fire is the "Come easy, go easy' stuff.

Acceptance of too much advice stunts a man's own development.

The contestant who fears an opponent is already half beaten.

Self-control to bridle one's tongue under stress is worth money.

What profiteth it a man to win a "split century" and be fined $20?

W. Connors) slung up his so that we would be together, but I hadn't my stripe off four days before I took sick. We are in the Machine Gun Section. I will be very glad when I get up and around, and gladder when I go to the trenches. I want to do my bit. Some say that they won't let me go to the front, but I will try hard. I won't come this far for nothing if I can help it, you bet.

In a letter received by the Examiner from Major A. G. Carruthers, Quartermaster of the 39th Battalion C.E.F. and formerly Captain of "C" Company 57th Regiment that well-known officer speaks of a visit to the 93rd Battalion. "I was over to Otterpool Camp again last night to see the 93rd boys" writes Major Carruthers. "Those in camp are very well. Some 350 of them are at Lydd Camp under Major Lech doing their musketry training. They have a very nice camp and are fairly comfortable. Major Davidson has been transferred to Orpington Hospital. He much regretted having to leave his regiment. Awfully sorry to hear of Capt. Higgins' death. He was a gallant gentleman".

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—There will be no billeting of troops in the small Canadian cities and towns this winter. The experience of the militia department last winter with regard to billeting in small detachments throughout the country was not such as to encourage a continuance of the practice so the concentration of large bodies at important points will be adopted this year.

KINGSTON, Sept. 16.—Lt.-Col. Glass who has been appointed to command the new battalion for Victoria and Haliburton, with headquarters at Lindsay, was in camp yesterday morning, nd feels full of hope regarding the possibilities for recruiting his unit. The battalion will be known as the 252nd battalion. Col. Glass will consult with Brig.-General Hemming at an early date and will commence the selection of his staff.

RECRUITING METHOD

The organization of the proposed new battalions of the Third Military District, is still waiting on the evolution of a safe and certain method of recruiting says the Kingston Standard, and it is hinted that at Ottawa the powers that be are busy with the task of producing an effective system. Under the voluntary system officers are not backward in saying that there are two things that must be provided for every officer who is charged with the responsibility of organizing a new battalion, and these are money, and an unrestricted recruiting area. The matter of getting money to finance a battalion, without a dollar from Ottawa, is getting more difficult, and to restrict an officer to a given area, is considered a serious handicap. The matter is receiving the serious attention of headquarters, and it is felt that a successful system will be produced in a matter of a few days.

In view of the visit of the Queen's Field Ambulance squad to the Peterborough Exhibition, the following reference to the squad made by an American girl in a letter to the Kingston Standard, will be of interest:

On my way back I ventured a visit to the Queen's Field Ambulance and Field Hospital and was just in time to witness a dispaly of ambulance work and jerks, as I think they are called, and of which I now have several pictures.

The display was indeed clever not to say wonderful considering these men had only a whistle to guide them that was all, not even a bagpipe.

I noticed a group of men sitting down as I crossed the parade ground, as I thought for a rest, but a blast of the whistle brought them to their feet. With rythmatic motions they stooped, grasped a stretcher handle and rose again as one man. They then ran out to where I observed some more men were apparently taking a sunbath and arriving stopped short whilst two men who were with each stretcher ran on and knelt by the men on the ground. I hope I may be understood for I cannot give the technical terms for all these things. Then the man kneeling said something to the men with the stretchers who turned and opened them. I then saw that the men who were sunning themselves were to be treated as patients. I became all interest. The two men who were kneeling now began to apply bandages and dressings to supposed wounds, one removing a shoe to bandage a wounded foot (hot weather at that.) After this was fixed up the patients were put on to the stretchers and carried away with great care. Ugh! When they started walking with the stretchers it was a slow, shuffling move and I felt the cold shivers run up my spine for it recalled a death scene to me so realistic. After disposing of their patients the men gave a display of the "jerks," so essential, I am told, to making a soldier fit and they sure were the equal of any gymnast squad I have seen. This finished the display and I had the pleasure of expressing my admiration of the men and their work to the Major-Sergt. I think they called him, who I am informed has had entire control and is responsible for the training of the men and their display certainly bears testimony to the amount of work on failed in training a group of men. I then learned that the whole company are efficient workers, but this was a squad picked to give a display at the Peterborough fair and I am sure all who see them will be impressed by the smartness, neatness and regularity of movement they present. I had a talk with several if the men and was not a little surprised to find them all well spoken, polite and courteous and then on top of that I was informed that the majority were 'grads' of teachers and I asked myself, "What is it that calls these good fellows away from splendid homes, freedom, good situations, and all the various pleasures of life to sleep with blankets on a board? And we are yet talking unpreparedness!"

S. A. Chief Visits City

The local branch of the Salvation Army had a busy week end. The corps was favoured with a visit by Commissioner Richards. The latter arrived in the city on Saturday evening and was escorted to the Temple by the Temple Band and the Indian Band from the Chemong Indian Village. Special meetings were held Saturday evening and on Sunday. The meetings, which were largely attended, were a success in every way.

WHITE FROST THIS MORNING

There was a heavy white frost this morning with the thermometer down to 33 degrees, or but one degree above freezing point. The first occasion below the freezing point, last year, was on September 28. Some varieties of the more tender vegetable were blackened this morning.—W. P.

To remove ink stain on white goods moisten the stain with a little fresh milk, then apply oxalic acid, using the acid very sparingly.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Dr. Eastwood has returned to the city, and resumed practice to-day.

The many friends of Dr. G. Stewart Cameron will be glad to learn that he is resting comfortably at Nicholls Hospital to-day after having been operated on for appendicitis yesterday. Dr. Cameron was taken ill yesterday morning.

Mrs. Harry Mann, Dublin Street, received word this morning of the death of a sister in Baltimore, Ind., on Sunday morning, Sept. 17th, at 6 p.m. Mrs. Mann has also received a letter from her husband, Pte. Harry Mann, of the 93rd Battalion, stating he was one of the boys drafted to go to France.

Rev. Thomas Joplin, Field Secretary of the Shantymen's Christian Association, concluded his visit to the city. Mr. Joplin will return in December for some special mission. The amount collected was $104.50. Mr. Joplin desires to thank all citizens and minister, also the Y. M. C. A. for assistance given at this time. He was pleasantly surprised at the orderly acceptance by the city of prohibition. He saw little, if any, of the disorder and disturbance, which, with his knowledge of other cities, he naturally expected to see in Peterborough on Saturday night.

Confiscated Beer Destined For Sewer

Two cases of pilsoner originally consigned to Chemong or Bridgenorth during the August hot spell, but captured in transit by Inspector Stewart, will likely trickle into the sewer instead of down eager throats, parched by summer heat. They have been conspicuous occupants of the Police Court room for weeks passed, but they have lost their innocence overnight, and their mere presence is an offence. Hence Inspector Stewart and Chief Thompson held a conference over them this morning, and the former suggested that the corks be drawn and bottle by bottle emptied into the gutter.

Have You Read Audrey? Is In Moving Pictures

The Empire is Showing Pauline Frederick in "Audrey" For the Next Three Days

Pauline Frederick, whose marvelous character impersonations in the famous Players Film Company's productions of "Zaza" and "Bella Donna" have indisputably placed her in the position of the screen's foremost emotional artiste, departs from her customary rules in this company's picturization of the celebrated novel and play, "Audrey," considered one of the most popular books which Mary Johnston ever wrote. Audrey is a simple, unsophisticated girl of the woods, who has been rescued by the Indians when a child, made the household drudge of a hypocritical minister and his wife, and is finally nearly drowned by an angry mob that believes her to be in the power of a witch, being rescued from the fanatics only by the devotion of young Lord Haward, who alone understands the spirited girl's impulses and emotions. The friendship of Lord Haward and Audrey develops into a tender but stirring romance, together with the varying action of this Paramount Picture, makes of it a thoroughly absorbing and thrilling photoplay.

Canada's War Loan Will Be Oversubscribed

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, September 18.—Officials of the Department of Finance state that if the subscriptions to the Canadian war loan this week equal those of last week, the amount of one hundred million dollars asked for will be more than subscribed. A gratifying feature has been the large number of small subscriptions received. It is felt that the time for the placing of the loan was well chosen, while the large amount of advance advertising contributed materially to its success.

Premier Asquith's Son Is Killed

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 18.—Raymond Asquith, son of the British Prime Minister, has been killed in action in the big British offensive on the Somme. He was the eldest son of the Prime Minister, and a lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards. The official announcement said he was killed Friday. Premier Asquith has five sons. Three of them have seen service since the beginning of the war, and Arthur was wounded at the Dardanelles.

German Seaports Occupied By British

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 18.—A British statement on the operations by General Smuts in East Africa says the British have occupied the seaports of Lindi and Mikindini, which were the sole remaining ports in German hands. All German artillery and stores have been captured by General Smuts, and a few guerillas in the mountain districts are all that oppose the British occupation now.

Canadian Battalions Distinguish Themselves

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, September 18.—(Special Cable)—That the Canadians have again distinguished themselves in the fierce fighting north of the Somme River, is evidenced by the stories of wounded officers arriving here from the fighting in France. While it is indicated that the entire Canadian line was under fire during the capture of important German works Friday, Saturday and Sunday, some battalions from Ontario and Maritime Provinces were specially thanked by War Secretary Lloyd George, and Commander-in-Chief Haig for their gallant work. Some battalions advanced in support of the British motor machine gun "land cruisers," and were in the thickest of bayonet fighting, capturing German machine guns and prisoners by dozens with great sacrifices by individual Canadian officers and men, but on the whole comparatively small losses considering the magnitude of the work done.

Monaghan Ratepayers Protest Against Sewage Disposal Site

North Monaghan ratepayers are still seeing red. Saturday night they held an indignation meeting, at which they rehashed their objections to the recent decision of the Provincial Board of Health, sanctioning the city's proposed site for a sewage disposal plant. The ratepayers have made up their minds to protest vigorously against the Provincial Board's action, and on Tuesday evening, Sept. 19th, another public meeting will be held in St. George's Church, Braidwood Avenue. All the interested property holders are requested to be present.

Music & Drama

"A PAIR OF SILK STOCKINGS."

Refreshing in its quaintness and originality and delightfully acted by a most adequate company, Cyril Harcourt's sparkling comedy "A Pair of Silk Stockings," at The Grand on Saturday, proved a most enjoyable event.

Mr. Harcourt's play lacks vulgarity, and so light is the touch and deft the wit that it is extremely funny without being in the least bit offensive.

The story of the play has to do with the troubles of a young married couple, separated through a disagreement over the trifling question of what motorcar they shall select. They meet by accident — or rather by design on the part of the wife—at a week-end party at the country house of a mutual friend. The husband, bent on reconcilliation, seeks an interview with his wife by secreting himself in her wardrobe. Enter a former admirer of hers. He discovers the husband in hiding, and mistaking him for a burglar, due to the fact of his wearing the make-up of a stage character he is to portray in amateur theatricals, he binds the irate spouse with a pair of the lady's silk stockings and locks him in the bathroom. What follows furnishes an evening of screamingly funny situations.

The play is presented by a splendid company of English actors. Langdon Bruce scored largely as Sam Thornhill, and Miss Ida Stratham was a charming Mollie Thornhill. A. E. Winnington-Barnes gave an admirable presentation of the part of Major Bagnall, a part for which he is peculiarly fitted, inasmuch as he was at the front in the present war as an officer in the Fusiliers and was invalided home last year after being wounded at Loos.

ONLY SEVEN DRUNKS

The exile of John Barleycorn, as officially enacted on Saturday evening, left only seven mourners, according to the police record this morning. Their sentimental celebration found no responsive leniency in the court, Magistrate Dumble taxed them each $2 to be paid forthwith, except an Indian named Joseph Saturday who was fined $5. There were probably other drunks rambling homeward, but they evaded the vigilance of the police. On the whole Saturday night's "wake" proved a decidedly quiet affair, and in fact Chief Thompson's men hadn't anticipated any unusual ructions.

BRILLIANT COMEDIAN IN TREMAYNE'S NEW PLAY

Albert Brown of "White Feather" Fame in New Drama of War Diplomacy

William Andrew Tremayne of Montreal, whose latest play, The Black Feather," will be presented by the brilliant comedian, Albert Brown, at the Grand Opera House, ranks as the most successful of all Canadian playwrights despite his inactivity of recent years. His father was a prominent citizen of Quebec and his mother a daughter of Prof. Andrew of the Universities of McGill and Aberdeen. Mr. Tremayne chances to have been born in Portland, Maine, while his parents were on a visit there in 1864. As a young man he entered the service of the G.T.R. stores department but from an early age wrote poems and short stories. His first produced play was "The Notary," written for the late Felix Morris in 1898. It was in one-act but achieved a success. In 1895 he wrote "Lost 24 Hours" for Robert Hilliard, in company with the late Logan Fuller, and farce though it was, it ran for three seasons. In 1897 he wrote "A Secret Warrant," for Robert Mantell. This was a romantic piece dealing with John Law and the Mississippi bubble at the time of the French Regency. This play ran an entire season, and was for years after part of Mr. Mantell's repertoire. In 1899 he made a successful dramatization of Joseph Hatton's novel, "The Dagger and the Cross," for Mr. Mantell, which ran for several seasons. "A Free Lance," a melodrama of mediaeval Germany, obtained considerable success in England in 1901, and since then Mr. Tremayne has written plays which enjoyed considerable vogue and are still played in various stock companies of the United States like "J. Brown, M. D." 'A Lesson in Diplomacy," "The Triumph of Betty," 'The Morning After,' and others. Mr. Tremayne has the distinction of being the first writer to translate the plays of Maeterlinck into English. Grand Opera House.

Statistics collected in Germany show that of all the trees that are struck by lightning in that country almost one third are oaks.

T. A. S. Regard The Temperance Act As a Strong Aid

With the enactuation of the Ontario Temperance Act the members of St. Peter's T.A.S. do not intend to disband with the idea that their particular work is accomplished. The new law is regarded as an assistance to the greater realization of their hopes of widespread total abstinence, and at a meeting yesterday afternoon steps were taken to organize for the winter work with the hope that the membership would be further increased.

At St. Peter's Cathedral Sunday morning His Lordship Bishop O'Brien remarked that history was made on Saturday evening, and that it was now the duty of the people to see that the new law was enforced.

Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien at the Church of the Sacred Heart, speaking on the same subject, stated that this was the duty of every citizen. The bars were closed and he hoped they were closed forever. They had been the school room of drunkenness too long. He stated that no one would be moved by any false sense of pity for those who may be apprehended for selling liquor under the new act. Such men had no regard, no sympathy for the wives and families of those who might buy illicit goods, no thought of their welfare or the future of boys. Father O'Brien remarked that he did not believe that virtue could be secured by legislation, but the Temperance Act removed a great obstacle to virtue when it abolished the bar and their treating system, and it was the duty of the individual citizen to support this law morally and otherwise.

How Advertising Does Odd Jobs For Farmers

The farmer needn't wait until he has an auction sale to make use of a country newspaper as a means of talking to people and inducing them to buy goods. If a hired man leaves for twenty-five cents the farmer can ask practically every other farmer in the county if he knows of some good fellow or can ask many men looking for employment if they don't want to work for him. He can ask all of his fellow farmers if they don't want to buy a tool he may have no use for, or he can say he wants to buy such a thing himself. He can find a market for his superfluous butter, eggs and other farm produce.

"It is safe to assume that if all the farmers in my county appreciated how useful the country newspaper could be to them, a whole page of want ads would be printed every day. The farmers read and answer the ads themselves and all that is necessary is that they convince themselves that others would read their ads. Then the uses of advertising for the farmer would sprout like wet oats."

Thrilling Story Of Canadians' Share In The Big Drive

All Parts of Canada From Halifax to Victoria Were Represented in Smash Through German Lines Near Thiepval—Canadians, New Zealanders, English, Irish, Scotch, Newfoundlanders and Americans All in One Dressing Station—A Mighty Conflict.

British Front in France, Sept. 13, via London, Sept. 19.—The most dramatic and picturesque battle of the British army in all its two years in France was fought on September 15. Here is the story of how all kinds of men from the ends of the earth took part in this mighty conflict.

In the same dressing station this week the correspondent has seen Canadians, New Zealanders, English Scotch, Irish, Newfoundlanders, and Americans. These were some of the men of many countries who took part in the now historic battle, and with them there went into action those armoured motor cars, called 'tanks,' which are to the credit of a quiet officer of Engineers. When the correspondent met this officer in London six months ago and asked him what job he was now on he replied: 'Sh, s'h. S'h, s'h. Don't tell." It was the 'tanks' that completed the wonderful business of this battle.

Rode in Huge Iron Snake.

To-day when the correspondent was calling on a Canadian brigadier it was a "tank" called "The Cordon Rouge," looking like a pre-historic monster in a skin of modern armor, and with engines inside, which took him across the field of shell craters, weaving its way with pythonic adaptability by all irregularities up to the door of the brigadier's dug-out. The skipper of 'The Cordon Rouge' alighted, and with phlegmatic drawl announced that he reported for further orders. The brigadier laughingly bade him not to start the brute down the stairs to the dug-out, but move it to one side and wait. So the 'tank' ambled with the bulky leisure of a hippopotamus over some more shell craters to a place where it would be out of the way until it was needed.

Over the Canadian Ground.

Then the correspondent went over the ground which the Canadians had taken up to the edge of the village of Courcelette. Later they stormed the village. He met Canadians who came from Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver. There were also men with the accents of Missouri and New England, and others who, on the soil of France, hailed one another in the French tongue of Quebec.

THE BYNG BOYS.

It was the Canadian's first offensive on any big scale. They had stood the stock of attack at the second battle of Ypres, at St. Eloi, Orrell Hill and Sanctuary Wood, and it had been their fortune up to the present to stand under blows rather than give them. They wanted their chance on the Somme to make good, as they said, and they had it.

This rainy day one saw battalions of them marching out from the trenches they had won and other battalions marching in. Those fresh from the fight were plastered with mud, but triumphant. They had a hundred stories to tell, while the rain dripped from their tarpaulins, of how the "Byng Boys" had made good. The wounded, also drenched by the rain, eagerly joined in these stories. The Canadians are known as the "Byng Boys," after the name of their corps commander, Gen. Sir Julian Byng, and also by virtue of a popular song in London, entitled: "The Byng Boys are here."

Importance of Initiative.

Gen. Byng grasped the idea that the Canadians have initiative. Just there, as far as the correspondent could learn, is the essential of the universally admitted brilliant stroke which the Canadians dealt when it came their turn to play their part in the colossal plan of the Somme offensive. In other words, Gen. Byng understood that, given a goal, the men of North America would go to it with all there was in them, ready to take a pinch-hit-chance.

The correspondent went over the ground to-day where they "went to it," and saw where they stuck under shell fire in trenches which they had gained after their second charge and which were not in the original plan. The night before the battle the staff officer in charge of that branch of the front showed the correspondent the Canadian objective. No home run was expected from them, but only a sacrifice fly, to use baseball language, but they made a home run and brought in all the men on the bases. They gained their first objective in an uninterrupted dash, absolutely on time.

TEAM PLAY IN WAR.

There was the trench which the "Byng Boys" held on the morning of the 15th, as the correspondent saw it to-day. Behind it and ahead of it shell craters were so thick that you could step from one to another. Hav-

Cattle Prices.

Receipts at the Toronto Stock Yards yesterday were 49 cars, made up of 645 cattle, 105 calves, 627 hogs, 854 sheep and lambs.

Trade among the cattle yesterday was inclined to drag, and though the run of fresh cars was light, there were a considerable number of leftovers at the close. Prices generally were about steady with yesterday, the heavy steers and common butcher tending easier. Choice, handy butcher steers and heifers good and steady.

There was a fair run of stockers and feeders at steady prices.

Choice lambs were firm and a little higher.

Hogs were again short of the demand, and prices were strong and a good 25 cents higher at $12.75 fed and watered or $13 off cars.

Who Won Battle of Marne?---British Army Did Its Part

Criticisms of Gallant Expeditionary Force Refuted—Credit to Joffre and to French, Foch and Maunoury—Did Foe Run Out of Shells?—The Collapse of the German Invasion of France Was Due to a Shortage of Ammunition

WHO RAN THE SHOW?

In view of criticisms of British commanders in France and of the controversy now being waged and promising to continue for many a year as to who won the battle of the Marne, the following article is intensely interesting, by Lovat Fraser:

The second anniversary of the battle has passed. The details of that mighty conflict, though not the essential result, will doubtless form a subject of controversy for the next five hundred years. We who were privileged to live in the great moment when civilization was saved can at least take care that mistakes made now concerning the battle do not pass uncorrected.

The riddle of the Marne will perhaps never be fully read. Why was Von Kluck ordered to swerve eastwards when he was approaching Paris? No completely satisfactory explanation of his mysterious change of front has yet been given. How did the allies win their great victory? Already two schools are arising among the experts. One school says that the deciding movement was made by Maunoury, when he fell with the French 6th Army upon Von Kluck's right flank and fought the action of the Ourcq. Another school insists that the master-stroke was made by Foch, when he thrust into a gap produced in the German lie by the deflection of the German right towards the Ourcq. My purpose is not to discuss these complex problems, but to direct attention to certain questions affecting the British Army which arise out of a recent elaborate study of the battle.

Mr. Hilaire Belloc has published a book which deals principally with the battle of the Marne. This book has been received with much uncritical enthusiasm by the press. One suspects that some of the reviewers paid Mr. Belloc the doubtful compliment of reading only the eloquent passages with which it begins and ends.

JOFFRE WAS IN IT.

The first thing that strikes a careful reader of Mr. Belloc's book is that it is a narrative of the battle of the Marne with General Joffre left out. The name of General Joffre only figures half a dozen times in the whole volume, and only thrice in the section devoted to the Marne. In that section we read of "the trategic retreat of Joffre" and of "Joffre's great retreat," and once we are told of "that dramatic moment when Joffre ordered the counter-offensive." That is all. After this discovery it is not surprising to find that Lord French and the subordinate British commanders are never once named in the Marne narrative. It is no answer to say that the book is concerned with strategy and not with persons. The name of General Foch is metioned more times than I am able to count. The names of many French and German commanders are given again and again. The British commaders share the fate of General Joffre.

Analysis reveals a yet more peculiar characteristic of this book. Four times Mr. Belloc makes the serious though carefully guarded suggestion that the British forces delayed their turning movement and struck too late. The suggestion is advanced as an alternative theory, but the implication is there, and it is grave. I believe it to be entirely unfounded and mythical.

The question turns upon what happened on the allied left. When Maunoury advanced from the direction of Paris and fell upon the German right at the Ourcq he was for a time in considerable danger, and he did not fully attain his objects. Mr. Belloc advances the alternative theories that Maunoury attacked too soon, or that the British advanced too late; and he reverts to the second theory so often that he would seem to imply that Maunoury was robbed of the full fruits of his attack because the British delayed their advance to the Marne.

WHO RAN THE SHOW.

In support of this theory he says that General Gallieni, the Governor of Paris, and General Maunoury left a conference in Paris, at a quarter-past noon on Friday, September 4, 1914—note the exactitude of the hour—and went to the British headquarters at Melun "in order to discover what the dispositions of the British army would be on the morrow." Unless, he says, the British engaged and held the advancing forces of Kluck, the plan implied by Maunoury's impending advance "might end disastrously," as, in his opinion, it very nearly did. He further states that it was "evidently the judgment of the British command" that the reorganization of their forces would take 48 hours, whereas "the French command of the army of Paris" wanted to begin in 4 hours (and did so begin). But who was directing the coming battle? Was it Paris or the obliterated figure of General Joffre?

I have reason for the statement that Mr. Belloc is mistaken, and that the interview at Melun which he describes never took place. This denial is not absolute, for there may have been some casual communication between subordinates not yet traceable, though even that is regarded as highly improbable. The suggestion that the British army muddled about for forty-eight hours is entirely baseless. Mr. Belloc seems to have strange ideas of the way great battles are planned and conducted. Neither the Governor of Paris nor General Maunoury ordered the British army to advance, or sought to arrange for it to advance, or directed the time of its advance, because it was not within their power to do so. That was the province of General Joffre, the Generalissimo of the allied armies, and of him alone. The head defect of Mr. Belloc's book is that in effect he asks us to conceive this tremendous battle as having been fought without any controlling brain. Generals from Paris are described as arranging advances on their own account. The generals in the field were apparently guided by Providence. Mr. Belloc never shows us any commander being guided by General Joffre.

BRITISH WERE NOT TOO LATE.

The suggestion that the British army advanced too late is completely and overwhelmingly disproved by Lord French's second despatch, in which he says:

On Saturday, September 5th, I met the French commander-in-chief at his request, and he informed me of his intention to take the offensive forthwith, as he considered conditions were very favourable to success.

* * * *

I was . . . to advance against the enemy in my front and join in the general offensive movement.

These combined movements practically commenced on Sunday, September 6th, at sunrise.

One who was present in the closing moments of that historic interview afterwards described them to me, and related the impressive final words of General Joffre, spoken in the hall of an old chateau.

The British army was not too late. It was on the move at dawn next day, well within twelve hours of the time when the actual order was given. Statements should not be made which tend unwarrantably to dim the glory of the few survivors of that gallant force. If it numbered only five divisions we may recall that Foch was commanding only six divisons when he made the brilliant stroke which Mr. Belloc regards as decisive.

The layman will probably conclude that the battle of the Marne was decided not by one factor, but by many, and that the British army played its full part and did promptly everything demanded of it. This very month, Colonel Feyler, the ablest of neutral writers on the war, has unconsciously challenged the whole purport of Mr. Belloc's book by declaring that it was "the British force, together with the French army under General Franchet d'Esperey," which "exercised sufficient pressure on the gap to threaten the continuity of the enemy line."

FOE WAS SHORT ALSO.

If this is true, what becomes of Mr. Belloc's theories? Meanwhile a German writer in a pamphlet which has made a great sensation in Germany, has alleged that the collapse of the original German invasion of France was really due to a sudden shortage of ammunition, which was not fully made good until the following January.

France Accepts Rodin's $600,000 Art Works

Paris, September 19. — The creation of a Rodin Museum in Paris, is assured by a vote in the Chamber of Deputies, which by 370 to 56 accepted the offer of the collection of the works of Auguste Rodin, the sculptor. It is valued at 3,000,000 francs.

Socialists objected on the ground that some of the sculptor's statutes had a bad influence on French art.

Rodin, one of the foremost of the French sculptors, is 76 years old. In 1912 he offered to the state all of his own works in his possession, the result of forty years' labor. He received no definite reply.

A Charge Of Murder Was Preferred Against Mrs. Davis

Trial of Kinmount Woman Who Fatally Shot Frederick Spenceley, Will Be Held in Lindsay—Peterboro' County Will Have to Pay the Crown Witnesses—Was Considerable Trouble Between the Two Families

LINDSAY, Sept. 19.—Mrs. May Davis, the Kinmount woman, who on September the sixth, fatally shot Frederick Spenceley of the same township, was yesterday committed for trial by County Magistrate F. D. Moore. The prisoner will have to answer to a charge of murder at the Fall assizes which will be held in Lindsay on November 14th. The evidence of Mrs. Spenceley wife of the deceased, Dr. White of Kinmount, Dr. Clarke and Mr. Wellstood was taken yesterday. Crown Attorney Stinson was present while Mr. J. E. Weldon was present on behalf of the accused.

MRS. SPENCELEY.

Mrs. Spenceley was first called. She carried a young baby in her arms, which required the mother's attention to keep it quiet. When questioned by Crown Attorney Stinson she said in part: "I live in the Township of Galway, adjoining the Village of Kinmount. The accused also lived in Galway, across the road (the Monk Road). Prior to the accident my husband worked in Austin's sawmill at Kinmount, where he worked for ten years. We have lived there for over seven years, while Mrs. Davis has been living there for four years. I heard the report of the gun about 6.30 in the evening. My husband had been working all day. He came home at half-past six, while I was watching at my kitchen door. He laid down a parcel of flour and walked across the road to Mrs. Davis'. I looked out when I heard the report and saw the smoke. I found Mrs. Davis standing on her door step with a gun in her hand, which was pointing at Mr. Spenceley. He was lying on the ground. I asked him what was the matter, and Mrs. Davis replied, 'I shot him. If you want to know, and I'll do the same to you if you don't watch out.' All the time she was putting another cartridge in the gun. I called to Mr. Davis and he took the gun away from her and then went for a doctor. I gave my husband a cup of water and bathed his head. He couldn't speak to me. My mother was there—she was living with me. I came to Lindsay but was not in the hospital when he died. He was shot on Wednesday and died on Saturday. I saw nothing of a letter."

CROSS QUESTIONED.

To Mr. Weldon Mrs. Spenceley said her maiden name was Lizzie Russell. "My husband was about 43 years old. There had been trouble between our families before. The trouble first started when Mrs. Davis came to live there. Our hens would go across to her place and we would miss them. Then our stable was burnt about three years ago, about 12 o'clock at night. Mrs. Davis had previously made threats that she would burn the stable."

"Didn't you accuse your husband of being unfaithful in respect to Mrs. Davis?"

"Yes."

"How many times?"

"I couldn't tell you."

"But you had constant scenes of domestic trouble with your husband because of Mrs. Davis?"

"Yes."

"Your husband did go over there quite a bit. Did Davis go over to your place?"

"Not since he got married. He lived there previous to that."

Witness—"We had a little trial last fall. She came to my house and stopped for three nights because of trouble she had with her husband. Mr. Davis broke out windows and was fined. Later on my husband was fined, also."

"Was he bound over to keep the peace?"

"I don't think so."

Mr. Weldon—"Well, he was, and records show that he was. Was your husband up for burning this woman's house?"

"No."

"How many times was he in court?"

"Just once."

Witness—"I have no idea how old I am. I have six children, all at home but one girl, who is married and living in Kingston. I sent for Dr. White, but he did not get there for about twenty minutes. Davis was only a short distance away when I first saw him."

Mr. Weldon—"Did your husband ever accuse you of being mixed up with Davis?"

"No."

"Were you ever?"

"No."

Witness—Davis said 'it was too bad.' My husband was never accused of burning the barn. When the windows were broken Mr. Davis was fined, but I don't know why my husband was fined then. The Children's Aid Society only took my children for surgical treatment; this was over six years ago."

DR. WHITE.

When sworn, Dr. White, of Kinmount, said: "I was called to the scene of the shooting by George Davis. Davis said 'My woman shot Spenceley and he is bleeding to death.' I found Spenceley lying on the ground beside the door of the Davis home. He was almost gone at that time; no pulse could I detect. I found the wound in the right leg, just above the knee, from which he was bleeding profusely. The main artery had been severed. It was a very large wound; the shot entered on the inside and emerged on the outer side. The bone was protruding. I would judge it was a very large bullet or charge of heavy shot. There was a little blackening around the edge of the wound, which would indicate that the gun had been fired at close range. His head was resting against the wall of the house. Spenceley was carried to his own home, and later to Kinmount. I didn't consider he was in a condition to stand an extensive operation then. He was brought to the hospital, and the leg was removed by Dr. Collison, Dr. Clark and Dr. Agnew being in attendance. Everything possible was done to save his life. While I was attending to Spenceley Mrs. Davis came to the door and in conversation she said she had warned Spenceley of what she would do. She blamed me for taking sides with Spenceley."

A HORIZONTAL WOUND.

To Mr. Weldon Dr. White stated: "The wound indicated that the weapon was discharged almost up against the leg, or close. The wound was horizontal, nearly straight through."

Mr. Weldon—"The gun couldn't have been at the woman's shoulder, could it?"

"I couldn't say."

"If she held the gun to the shoulder the shot would have gone downward?"

"Yes, but a very slight inclination of the man's body would have made a difference."

"You are a justice of the peace. Have you had these people up before you?"

"I have had complaints but don't recollect trying them."

DR. CLARKE.

To Crown Attorney Stinson, Dr. Clarke, of Lindsay, said he gave the anesthetic when the operation was performed. Spenceley was also under his care for a few days. He had hardly any pulse and suffered from hemmorhage. He was blanched from loss of blood. "On Saturday when I got to the hospital I found him dead."

CHARLES WELLSTOOD

On being sworn the witness said in part: "I reside at Kinmount and am bookkeeper for J. Austin & Sons. I knew the deceased for twenty years. I also saw the accused about 3.00 o'clock on the afternoon of the accident. She called and gave me a letter to hand to Spenceley, and later on I gave it to him at the mill. Fifteen or twenty minutes later he came into the office and asked me to read the letter, and I read it. He then took it and went away. I have not seen the letter since."

LETTER MISSING.

Mr. Stinson said he could not locate the letter, and Mr. Weldon said that the accused was supposed to have destroyed it.

Mr. Weldon—"The accused has no statement to make."

POST MORTEM STATEMENT

Mr. Weldon, to Mr. Stinson—"Are you going to put in the statement of the deceased?"

Mr. Stinson—"No."

MAGISTRATE'S JURISDICTION

Magistrate Moore—I think there is sufficient evidence to commit the accused for trial. The question is, will the case be tried in Peterborough or Lindsay? My jurisdiction extends to five hundred yards beyond the County and magistrates in other jurisdictions have the same right in Victoria County. The question of committal only affects the cost of the case. But if you do send it to Peterborough, I think the Attorney-General would send the case back here again, because witnesses all have to go through Lindsay to get to Peterborough.

TRIAL IN LINDSAY.

Mr. Weldon preferred the case to be tried in Lindsay. Peterborough County will have to pay the crown witnesses at any rate.

Tells Why Brusiloff Is Moving Slowly

RUMANIA'S ENTRY INTO THE WAR RAISES NEW PROBLEMS OF CO-ORDINATION.

Petrograd, September 19. —The chief movements to note at present on on the Russian front are the steady advance in the wooded Carpathians, and the fighting near Halica on the Dneister, which now consists chiefly in the repulse of German and Turkish counter-attacks.

The entry of Rumania introduced a new note into these chords which General Brusiloff has been so skilfully playing and has extended the range and variety of the calculations both on our side and the enemy's. The striking feature of Brusiloff's attacks has been their precisely determined order and the systematic way in which each of the four armies took up the advance when the army previously attacking had achieved its immediate object and compelled fresh enemy concentration. General Kaledin took over the burden from General Letchitsky, or vice versa, and at the right moments Generals Sakharoff and Tscherbatcheff took their turn.

Rumania's entry into the war not only imposed a further heavy tax on German resources but broadened the scope of Brusiloff's calculations, and introduced a new factor into the ordering of the attacks. The movements of Tscherbatcheff and Letchitsky in Galicia and Bukowina are affected by what happens on the new left flank in Transylvania and in Dobrudja. The Danube passes on the word to the Dneister, opportunities have grown bigger and at the same time more complex, and the fact that days pass without news of smashing victories is only a sign of the increased sweep of the operations which demand still more finely calculated co-ordination.

CAN PARALYSIS BE TRACED BACK TO BAD TEETH?

Interesting Views Show Connection Between Teeth and Health.

It is just possible that the origin of infantile paralysis may be traced to an organism found in the teeth of children. This was one of many somewhat startling avenues opened up by Dr. Weston A. Price, head of the research department of the National Dental Association of the United States, Cleveland, O., addressing the delegates to the Canadian Dental Association now in session here at the Pasae Temps Theatre this morning. The subject was 'The Relation of Mouth Infection to Systemic Diseases.'

The lecture was illustrated with stereopticon slides, showing the results of experiments conducted at the research institute in Cleveland. The institute is maintained by the dentists of the United States for the advancement of the science of dentistry. An interesting curtain raiser was a film of the Canadian Hospital at St. Luc, France, presented to the French Government by the Government of Canada. The film is one of the war series taken by the French Government for their archives. It was loaned to Dr. L'Argent, who has arrived to attend the convention here as the representative of France, to give Canadians an idea of what their hospital is doing.

Teeth Cause of Many Ills.

In his address, which was largely technical, Dr. Price said that it was now an established fact that mouth infection gives rise to many serious systemic diseases, including affections of the heart, liver, stomach, joints and eyes. The statement of one eminent American physician was quoted to the effect that in one great hospital from 12 to 15 per cent. of the patients were suffering from diseases due primarily to mouth infection. This, the lecturer explained, by the process of tropism, or elective selection, by which mouth organisms show a selectivity for other tissues of the body, including nerve tissues.

Dr. Price explained at length the system of inoculation, which he described as a process of building up in the blood a chemistry which would resist certain organisms. In cases where there existed in the mouth a condition causing pain, there was not the danger of systemic diseases, as the system would be inoculated by the struggle going on. It was in instances where no pain was felt that the danger lay. It was possible for an organism to remain for twenty years at the apex of a tooth without causing pain.

Some of the cases illustrated in the slides were of great interest. One was that of a woman who suffered from partial paralysis, dating back nine years, from the time, in fact, when she had had a great deal of dental work done. At the Cleveland Institute the infected teeth were removed, and the woman treated with vaccine prepared from the infection. She recovered. Others showed stomach, liver and eye troubles, due to teeth infection.

Those Drinking Cups.

While showing an interesting slide prepared by Dr. Mayo, Dr. Price told of the latter's theory that cancer of the stomach is the result of peptic ulcers, which again are in many cases due to mouth infection. Thus the connection between infection of the teeth and cancer was directly established. Vaccines prepared from mouth infections have been found very effective in cases where the illness has not become chronic. If the system is already stimulated to its limit with the organism it naturally does not respond to the vaccine.

One conclusion reached by Dr. Price appeared unusually surprising. That was that diseases not usually regarded as contagious or infectious may be transmitted by means of drinking cups through organisms in the mouth. Appendicitis was mentioned as an instance, some mouth organisms showing a tendency to select the tissues of the appendix.

The moving pictures of the Canadian Hospital at St. Luc showed a general view of the camp with its tents and neat "huts," the arrival of the wounded in motor ambulances, the operating room, the dental service, and the wards. The staff of the hospital are all French-Canadians and the patients are French soldiers.

Kiss In Roadway Hurled Motorists Into Chilly Water

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The irresistible impulse of a young man and young woman to kiss each other, in the middle of the road, near Clifton, N.J., nearly cost the lives of five persons who were riding along that highway in an automobile. As it was, they were hurled into a lake and received severe shocks after the automobile had gone down an embankment because the driver had turned out of the road to avoid the kissing couple.

When the young folk stopped suddenly to embrace and kiss, Mr. Potcony was driving his automobile up the road at thirty miles an hour. He turned sharply to the left to avoid striking them, and in so doing the automobile struck a soft spot in the road, throwing it upside down over a ten-foot embankment, and into the bordering lake.

The young man and young woman screamed for assistance, and the men were finally pulled out. The kissers went their way without giving their names.

FELL IN A FAINT.

I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Wooden Soldier

How He Drew the Enemy's Fire by Lighting His Pipe.

By CAPTAIN F. A. MITCHEL

In Virginia in 1862 a Federal captain was standing on a rise in the ground looking down a turnpike which extended through a depression and, rising again, entered a small town half a mile away. Hearing horses' hoofs behind him, he turned and saw his general, attended by his staff, riding toward him.

"Turn out the guard, the general commanding!" cried the picket.

"Never mind the guard," said the general and, riding to the point where the captain had been standing, looked at the town beyond with wistful eye, then said to his subordinate:

"Captain, how many men are there in your picket post?"

"There are thirty under my command distributed over a quarter of a mile. But right here I have eight men and a sergeant."

"Have you seen any indications of the enemy in the town?"

"None whatever."

The general turned away with evident reluctance.

"I wish you," he said, "to keep a sharp lookout for the Confederates there. The place is of great strategic importance to us in this campaign. By tomorrow morning General D.'s brigade will come up and, provided the enemy has not already done so, will occupy the town. I am hoping that he will be in time, for the fate of this campaign rests with that position. If the enemy comes in there tonight he will fortify it and we shall not be able to drive him out without a hard fight, which in our present condition would not be practicable. Keep a sharp lookout and keep me advised."

"May I not advance my post to the town, general?"

"No; that would involve an advance of the entire picket line."

The general rode away. Private Tom Bixby, who had been standing at attention beside the road and had heard what had been said, dropped the butt of his musket on the ground and resumed the position of a picket on the lookout. The rest of the afternoon his mind was on the town and the question which side would get there first. At sunset he was relieved and ate his supper. Then, lighting his pipe, he sat down on the ridge and smoked and looked for signs of soldiers in the town on the other side of the valley. When it was dark he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, went to his captain and, saluting respectfully, said:

"Captain, it seems to me that, considering we can't see what's going on in the dark, some one should reconnoiter."

"You may go if you choose."

"All right. I'll just walk down the road and up the other side of the valley, near enough to see if there is any stir, and if there is I'll come back and let you know."

Tom sauntered away into the darkness. On reaching the edge of the town he saw citizens moving about, but no soldiers. The people went to bed early, and when everything was quiet Tom made an entry. Passing a shop under a sign "Otto Schmitt, Tobacconist," Tom, thinking it a good opportunity to replenish his stock of tobacco, went inside. After buying what he wanted he fell into conversation with the proprietor, who, being a German, had no especial affiliation with the Confederate cause. Before the shop stood the figure of a man lighting his pipe. Schmitt, who was an ingenious mechanic, had made it himself for a sign. With one hand the figure held the pipe, while in the other was a match. In the pipe bowl was tobacco. A rubber tube led from the pipestem into the store. Schmitt by pulling on a wire could light the match and smoke from the shop. Tom noticed the mechanism near the shop window and asked what it was. Schmitt not only explained it to him, but put it in operation.

An idea popped into Tom's brain. If he had that figure and connections on the side of the town from which the Confederates would approach possibly he might make them believe that the Federals had got ahead of them and had occupied the town. He took Schmitt into his confidence and told him that if he would lend him his sign and help him carry it to a new location he thought the Federal general might pay him very handsomely—that is, if the ruse succeeded.

The German hesitated. Most of the citizens of the place were Confederate sympathizers, and he feared that if his act became known he would suffer for it. But Tom assured him that if the town was unoccupied by the Confederates at daylight the Federals would surely enter it in force, and the hope of profit won him over. He shut up his shop, put out the lights, and an hour later, when not a footstep was to be heard on the street, he and Tom carried the figure to the road by which the Confederates would be likely to advance. Reaching an eminence on which a picket could be seen from a distance, they set up the dummy in the middle of the road. Tom could not take off its Confederate uniform, but he could put his own over it, which he did, and rested his musket in the hollow of the arm holding the pipe.

Schmitt meanwhile was making the attachments, filling the pipe and leading the tube to a convenient place of concealment, behind which he had Tom took position and waited.

It was 11 o'clock when they set up the dummy. A wagon passed into the town a half hour later, but Tom and his assistant heard it coming in time to remove the figure and set it up again as soon as the team was gone. This was the only interruption that occurred. At 1 o'clock Tom heard a distant sound like the rumbling of artillery over a bridge. The wind being from the south, the sound very faint and Tom's hearing acute, he judged that whoever was crossing the bridge was miles away. He wished he could be in two places at once. He would have liked to go back and hurry up the Federals who were coming and remain where he was at the same time.

In another hour the sounds of an approaching force were unmistakable, and not much later the tramp of men was audible. Then down the road Tom heard an officer order skirmishers to deploy, covering the road and each side of it.

"Light up," said Tom to Schmitt.

There was a tiny flash, which rose and fell as Schmitt pulled on the tube, while clouds of tobacco smoke rose from the pipe. There was just light enough to reveal the figure to those advancing without their being able to see that it was a dummy.

There was a crack, and a bullet jarred the wooden soldier.

"Stop smoking," whispered Tom, and, screened by the darkness, he ran to the figure, which still stood bravely on its feet, and, seizing the musket, fired a shot that went singing down the road. Then, drawing his revolver, he fired three shots in quick succession.

"What's that for?" asked Schmitt.

"They'll think it a signal for our troops in the town to warn them that the enemy is coming. They won't dare come on against an unknown force. My opinion is that if our troops come up before the enemy can see that there's no one here except three men, one of them a dummy, we've won. You can't do anything more here. Suppose you go down the road on the other side of the town and hurry up whoever is coming. If this game succeeds you'll be well paid, I'm sure."

Schmitt set off through the town, having little over half a mile to go to reach the Union picket post.

It was now about an hour before dawn. Tom kept his position on the ridge, from which he sent an occasional shot, always changing his position between shots to make the enemy believe that they were fired by different men. The fire was not returned, for the enemy could see no one to fire at. They were very quiet. Tom's fear was that they were moving around to push forward on his flank, where they would not meet with any opposition whatever, and the fact that the town was unoccupied would be apparent.

For the greater part of an hour Tom stood between the Confederates and the town. He was within sound of the troops below and could hear the usual noises made by soldiers on the march, halted while the commanding officer deliberated as to what he should do. That was the longest hour Tom ever spent in his life. Every minute he expected to hear the command "Forward!" given and to see through the darkness a dim mass coming up the road. His imagination served him many a trick. At one time a stump appeared to be a Confederate standing with his musket to his shoulder; at another he was sure that he heard the tramp of men coming nearer and nearer.

But all these proved to be nothing but scares. The Confederate commander was not minded to walk into a death trap that he could not see.

In some twenty minutes after Schmitt left Tom he came near the picket post and made himself known. He was admitted to the lines and rushed to the general, not far distant, who, on hearing his story, ordered a regiment under arms instantly and pushed forward. In this he disobeyed an order of his superior, but took the risk. In less than fifteen minutes the men were marching toward the town and, under Schmitt's guidance, to the point held by Tom Bixby and his wooden support. Silently ranging themselves along the ridge on each side of the road, they waited the dawn and the coming of the brigade that was supposed to be advancing.

As soon as it was light enough to see the enemy he was discerned drawn up in line of battle at the foot of a declivity. An officer on horseback in the middle of the road was looking up through a pair of glasses. But he could see few of the Federals, for their colonel had posted the men where they would be concealed. However, he made himself known to the Confederates, who withdrew out of range.

Before sunrise the tramp of men was heard in the town, and it was evident to those at the front that the expected brigade had arrived. They had no sooner been distributed at the weaker points when the general commanding the Confederates ordered a part of his force to feel them to determine their strength. After some desultory firing, becoming convinced that the town was occupied by a force strong enough to hold it against him, he withdrew his army.

When all was over the Federal general rode out to inspect Tom Bixby's Quaker soldier. Never before was an officer more delighted. The desired result had been accomplished and he had been vindicated in disobeying orders. He asked Tom what he could do for him, and Tom told him whatever he did must be for Schmitt, whose tobacco sign had won.

Tom was given a commission, and Schmitt was appointed to a sutlership, which he found very profitable.

A Wonderful Clock.

The clock of Beauvais Cathedral is said to be composed of ninety-two thousand separate pieces. One sees on the fifty-two dial plates the hour, the day, the week, and the month; the rising and setting of the sun, phases of the moon, the tides, the time in the principal capitals of the world, together with a series of terrestrial and astronomical evolutions. The framework is carved oak, eight metres by five metres, or twenty-six feet by sixteen and a quarter feet. When the clock strikes all the edifice seems in movement. The designer wished to depict the Last Judgment. This wonderful work recalls the clock of Strassburg, and is of modern construction. It is the work of a Beauvaisian, M. Verité, who was in the engineering department of the Nord Railway, and who died in 1887. The cock crows, angels sound a trumpet at the four cardinal points, imitation of flames appears from the openings of little steeples right and left. A soul, that of the impenitent thief, appears before the Supreme Judge. It is condemned, and a demon armed with a pitchfork seizes it and casts it into the abyss. Next comes the soul of the just. The angels advance and conduct it to the realms of day, sacred strains being heard.

About Tides.

The tides are due to the attraction of the heavenly bodies, chiefly the moon. There are two floods and two ebbs every twenty-four hours forty-eight minutes. At the time of new and full moon the tides are greater than usual and are called spring tides; at the first and last quarters they are less than usual and are called neap tides. Spring tides vary in height, the variation depending for the most part on the position of the moon's perigee. The highest tides occur during the day in summer and during the night in winter. The "high tides" of the winter half of the year are the more dangerous, as the earth is then nearer to the sun; those happening about the times of the equinoxes have a bad reputation from their keeping company with the gales which are sweeping round the British coasts at those seasons.

His Salutation.

Hall Caine does not take any great pains to conceal his rather remarkable likeness to Shakespeare. His resemblance is frequently the subject of good natured jest, and one of the best stories concerning it is gleefully told by Mr. Caine himself.

Once he met Ignatius Donnelly, the well known Bacon-Shakespeare controversialist. Donnelly gazed reverently at the novelist's broad brow, pointed face, and beard, and then, removing his hat with a flourish of mock astonishment, said:

"Lord Bacon, I presume?"

Britain Ringing With Romance of Col. Elkington

Now Restored to His Old Command, Decorated by Two Nations.

LONDON, Sept 19. All England is ringing with the story of Lieut.-Colonel John Ford Elkington, one of the strangest romances of this strange world war. It is the ever appealing human story of another man who "came back." Dismissed by court martial from the army he had served for nearly thirty years, just as his regiment was going into action in France in the closing months of 1914 this English officer disgraced at a time of life when the chances of fate weight heavy against a man fighting for suddenly lost honour, found refuge in that queerest of all military organizations, the foreign legion of France. Lost in the mazes of the western battlefields, mere Legionnaire, in the ranks Colonel Elkington, late of the Royal Warwickshires, was all but forgotten. None of his old friends, his old fellow officers, none of the men had seen him win the Queen's Medal for valour in South Africa—none of these knew that Elkington was 'somewhere in France' recklessly winning his way back. But now Elkington is back in England. Pinned on his breast are two of the coveted honours of France— the Military Medal and the Military Cross, but most valued possession of all is a bit of paper which wipes out the errors of the past— a proclamation from the official London Gazette announcing that the King has graciously approved the reinstatement of John Ford Elkington in the rank of Lieut.-Colonel with his previous seniority in consequence of his conduct while serving in the ranks of the foreign legion of the French army."

Not only has Colonel Elkington been restored to the army, but he has been re-appointed in his old regiment, the Royal Warwickshire, in which his father served before him. In this same London Gazette at the end of October, 1914, had appearing the erasing announcement that Elkington had been cashiered by sentence of general court martial. What his error was did not appear at the time, and has not been alluded to in his returned hour of honour. There was a court martial at the front at a time when the first rush of war was engulfing and little time could be wasted on an incident of this sort. The charge, it is stated, did not reflect in any way upon the officer's personal courage. But with fallen fortunes he passed quietly out of the army and enlisted in the legion—that corps where thousands of brave but broken men have found a shelter and now and then an opportunity to make themselves whole again. Col. Elkington did not pass unscathed through fire. His fighting days are ended. His knees are shattered and he walks heavily upon his sticks.

"They are just 'fragments from France'," he said of those wounded knees and smiled in happy reminiscences of all they meant.

"It is wonderful to feel," said Col Elkington "that once again I have the confidence of my King and Country."

Col. Elkington made no attempt to cloak his name or his former army service when he entered the ranks of the legion.

"Why should I not be a Private," he said. "It is an honour for any man to serve in the ranks of that famous corps. Like many of the other boys I had a debt to wipe off. Now it is paid."

REEVE FINED FOR OBSTRUCTING POLICE

Curious Case in Connection With Violation of Canadian Temperance Act

Clinton, September 19. — Before Police Magistrate Andrews here, Thos. Berry, a horse dealer of Hensall, was fined $50 and costs for violating the Canada Temperance Act, and Reeve Smallacombe, of Hensall, was fined $10 and costs, for obstructing county constables in the performance of their duties.

The case against Mr. Berry, was adjourned from last week, when County Constables Pellow and Wallis swore that they had searched the stable and office of Mr. Berry and found considerable liquor, and among the lot was a keg that Mr. Berry stated was vinegar, but on investigation by the officers proved to be whiskey.

The charge against Reeve Fred Smallacombe was, in the language of Crown Attorney Seager,, "a most disgraceful affair," and it was only out of regard for the County Council that the second charge laid was not pressed which, if proved, would have meant his dismissal from office as a County Councillor.

The Crown Attorney proposed that in future any cases of this kind which came before the court, in which officers of the king were interfered with, the most severe penalty would be recommended.

The Magistrate said that he was very sorry to have to punish a brother J. P., but as it was a most serious offence he could not help doing so.

He told Smallacombe that his position demanded his assistance in enforcing the laws of the land, rather than obstructing the officers in carrying out their instructions, and that he should not have lent himself to such proceedings.

Dancey of Goderich, acting for both Berry and Smallacombe, stated that he agreed with the Crown Attorney that the officers of the law should at all times be protected when on the King's business, but pleaded for lenjency on the behalf of the defendant.

WANTS CHURCHES SPARED.

Pope to Protest Against Bombardment of Sanctuaries.

ROME, Sept. 18.—In view of the recent aerial bombardments of Venice, Pope Benedict has renewed to Austria-Hungary his recommendation that, during the war, churches, monuments and art treasures be spared. This wish of the Pope will be urged also by Mgr. Valfredi Ponzo, a prelate well acquainted with high Italian personages who will soon go to Vienna as papal muncio.

Mgr. Ponzo will fill the vacancy created by the elevation of Mgr. Scapinelli to the Cardinalate.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash Poison From System Each Morning and Feel Fresh as a Daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, woman and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phospate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Mrs. Harriman Gives $5,000,000 Estate To Son

DEED TO ARDEN HOUSE IS FILED AND ONLY CONSIDERATION IS "LOVE AND AFFECTION."

Goshen, N. Y., September 19. — The consideration being "love and affection," Mrs. E. H. Harriman, in a deed dated August 3, 1916, has transferred to her son William Averell Harriman, the Harriman mansion, Arden House, on the mountain summit, overlooking the Ramapo Valley. The gift includes the 2,500 acres of forest, lake and stream belonging to the estate.

The splendid home is known the country over as the realization of the dream of E. H. Harriman, but which was uncompleted at the time of his death. The work was carried on to completion according to his designs. The cost of the mansion and grounds is estimated at $5,000,000.

Since his marriage on September 21, 1915, young Mr. Harriman and his wife have lived in a wing of Arden House, which was added for their occupancy.

The deed making the transfer has been placed on record in the County Clerk's office here and is a real estate transaction representing the largest valuation ever recorded in Orange county.

SETH LOW DEAD.

New York, September 19. — Seth Low died to-day at his model farm at Bedford Hills, N.Y., where in recent years he has been giving close attention to scientific agriculture.

He was 66 years old. His death is ascribed to a complication of diseases, from which his health had been failing for many months.

Twice mayor of Brooklyn and once of Greater New York, formerly president of Columbia University, to which he gave $1,000,000, and which he directed brilliantly through the most expansive eleven years of its history, Mr. Low continued almost to the end his active interest in public affairs.

ing taken their objective their part was finished, but Gen. Byng decided, despite the complicated time table methods of a modern offensive, that he could go farther. The commanders of British corps of all kinds from cockneys to the clerks, stock brokers, and farm hands of the new army, made the same decision. So they worked in conjunction, as every thing in these big moves must be cooperation and team play.

Success, Their Great Desire.

"Confound cost and everything else," said the Canadians, their nerves strained to the breaking point in their determination to make good on their first offensive. When the word was given they started for Courcelette, which they were ordered to take. Now this village had been "less crumpled" than any yet captured. There were some battered rafters of roofs still in position. That is, Courcelette had been less hammered by preparatory shellfire, so as to clean out its strong point, nests of machine guns and so forth. Through these streets to their new objective, marked on their map, went these fighters of the new world, including men from Nova Scotia to Vancouver. They were determined to get there and make good and they got there.

When no word came back for some time the staff, sitting in the centre of the web of telephone and telegraph wires over which was flashing the news of the progress of the great battle, began to wonder if the Canadians were in trouble. But presently they got word that the charge had swept beyond the village and that the Canadians had been so busy digging in they had not had time to send news. It was explained that they thought that it would be taken for granted that they had got there.

FRENCH-CANADIANS.

Among those who "made good" say those who are supposed to know the facts, were the battalion of French-Canadians, the kind of men you see in times of peace working their farms in Quebec, or bending over the benches of a factory in New England. "We had luck with us, and we forced it," one of the Canadians said. "It was up to us to do so, that's all. At one place in the village the attackers were held up for a time by a strongly fortified post which bristled with machine guns. "Well," as one officer said, "we did not have to tell the men what to do. They stalked that strong point, man to man moving around it and got it."

"The German is some fighter," said one Canadian, to conclude the story, "and he has been learning the game for a long time, but on this occasion we had him going."

Fought on Time Schedule.

But the exploit of the Canadians is only one of the many chapters which may be told now of what the soldiers humourously called "The 'tank' offensive," having reference to the new armored motor cars. There was a London division, comprising representatives of all classes of the great city's life, who were told that they must reach their objective in a given time. In front of them in Highwood was a fastness of machine guns which neither the artillery nor the trench mortars had been able to reduce.

However, it was the business of the Londoners to be on time in reaching the given point on the map and to hold on there until further notice.

"These orders were all very simple and direct," said one of the Londoners afterwards with a grim smile, "but those Germans in their fort knew that it was a life and death fight, and all that was required of them was to put their fingers on the triggers of their machine guns when we charged. We left it to the blooming tank. We had to take chances of those machine guns shooting into our backs if the tanks could not do the job. But orders were orders, as we were taught when we left our happy homes to go soldiering in France, and we had to reach that point on the map. We reached it and the tanks wiped ont the machine guns."

Then there were the New Zealanders. They are known from the Australians by the coloured bands around their campaign hats.

SCREAM OF STEEL.

The New Zealanders also had their orders of the "Go there and stay there," kind. They went and later on the situation was such they were warned that they must try and hold against a heavy counter attack. The staff wondered if they could. Out of the clouds of shell smoke in which bullets and fragments of steel screamed and whistled it was as difficult to glean information as it would be to learn what a man in the next block was doing in an earthquake. Finally word cam back: "We have stopped counter attack and taken some more ground and are going to hold it."

This cheered the staff as much as the sight of the columns of German prisoners filing by. It particularly cheered them as at some points things were not going to well as at others.

Cunningly Devise Defenses.

The battalions whose luck failed them in this drive on the six mile British front were driven back by the cunningly arranged enfilading fire of machine guns in strong points which neither the artillery nor tanks could conquer. As the wounded from these battalions came hobbling down the shell-swept road they were cheered by the news of successes at other points.

There was a spectacular moment when, some time after the battle had opened, word ran down the line that the "Guards were going in." The Guards are the crack regiments of the British regular army and are steeped in traditions. When they came to the offensive they must show others the way through.

Broke Time Schedule.

When they "went over the lid," as the slang phrase is for mounting the parapet of the trench for a charge, it was the supreme moment for the Guards to live up to their traditions. They were to reach a certain objective in so many minutes and then wait. But they did not wait. It was no matter if the colonel of one of the regiments stood up on a hillock and blew the silver hunting horn he carried, in order to halt them. The Guards were off and they meant to stretch a two base hit into a three-bagger, or how else could they be the Guards.

WANTED HARD FINISH.

When they reached their final objective where they were to have it out with the Germans in as hard fighting as even this war has known, an Irishman in the Irish Guards exclaimed: "Is this as far as they told us to go? Sure, I haven't got my second wind yet."

More than once, facing counter-attacks, the British have gone out to meet the German charges in the open with the bayonet and the Germans have done the same. All past records in ferocity of fighting seemed to have been surpassed during the latest British advance. So freely was life given and so wonderful was the courage shown on both sides that the whole thing seems unreal to the spectator. In to-day's mist and rain the ceaseless pounding of the guns goes on as fresh troops march up to the front from the rear to take their place in the next battle of this tremendous offensive.

Bring Out Your Hidden Beauty

Beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon. Mercolised wax will gradually, gently absorb the devitalised surface skin, revealing the youthfully fresh, white and beautiful skin underneath. Used by refined women who prefer complexions of true naturalness. Mercolised wax in one ounce package, with directions for use, is sold by all druggists.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

LINDSAY DRIVER MADE CLEAN-UP

LINDSAY, Sept. 19.—Mr. Fred Willshare, employed by Dr. Clarke, has a driver that is greatly admired by local horsemen and which has been quite a success as a prize winner.

On Friday it was entered at Woodville fair in the 15 1-2 and under class taking first in five entries. Mrs. Charles Lindsay drove it in the lady drivers class, winning first money in a class of five. It was also entered in the gentlemen's turn out, winning second in a class of five.

On Saturday Mr. Willshare shipped the horse to Peterborough Central Fair, where it got first as a driver, winning out in a class of seven, second in a class of six in gentlemen's turn out. Mrs. Lindsay also carried off first in lady driving. Quite a clean-up in two days.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS

By Anabel Worthington

Such a dress as this will be the choice of the discerning woman who is looking for an exceptionally dainty and dignified model for dressy wear.

The fronts of the blouse separate just enough to display a surplice vest in separate material; below the bust two plaits are made in each front and in each half of the back one plait is introduced—a treatment that gives a very pretty and original effect, as the picture shows. The required fulness over the bust and hips is an important feature. A belt of plaided silk becomingly covers the joining of the waist and three gore skirt.

A full length sleeve shaped to the arm below the elbow finishes with a narrow frill of the plaided silk and has buttons ornamenting to the depth of a deep cuff, and the high at back collar is faced with the silk to match the girdle.

Silk, charmeuse, crepe, satin, voile, as well as the woollen materials, will be most suitable for developing this design. For so plain a dress it is exceptionally stylish.

The pattern, No. 7938, is cut in sizes 36, 38 and 40 inches bust. To make in size 36 will require 6¼ yards of 36 inch material, ⅝ yard 18 inch goods for vest and ½ yard silk to trim.

You may obtain the pattern by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 20 cents, or 3 for 25 cents.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

ROUMANIANS DEFEAT FOE ON DOBRUDJA

THE SERBS WITHIN SEVEN MILES OF MONASTIR

SERBIAN TROOPS ARE WITHIN SEVEN MILES OF MONASTIR

German and Bulgarian Staffs Reported to Have Left Monastir---Bulgarians Have Been Driven From One Trench Position After Another and Much of the Fighting Is Going On in the Open---German Assaults on the Western Front Were Repulsed--Roumanian Troops Have Won a Victory Over the Main Bulgarian-German and Turk Forces.

FIGHTING IS CONTINUING

LONDON, September 20. — Serbian troops have advanced to within seven miles of Monastir and are engaged in sharp fighting with the Bulgars, said an Athens despatch. The Bulgarians have been driven from one trench position after another, and much of the fighting is going on in the open. For the first time since the Balkan fighting began, large cavalry forces are in clash at several points along the SerboGreek frontier. A Central News despacth said it was learned from reliable sources that the German and Bulgarian staffs have left Monastir.

The Serbians have captured the well fortified Hill 2625, east of Berna, the highest peak in the Kamakchalan range, after most violent hand-to-hand fighting, it was officially announced to-day. The Bulgarians resisted with great stubbornness until they were practically out, only fifty prisoners falling into Serbian hands.

Near Garesnik the Bulgarians made vain counter attacks but were dispersed by the French seventy-fives. On the left wing the enemy is still resisting on the heights of Pisonderi.

German Counter Attacks Repulsed By The French

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), September 20.—The Germans hurled strong forces against the French lines north of the Somme last night in a most violent counter attack on the whole front. The War Office this afternoon announced that the Teutons were checked everywhere by French screen fire except at one point, where they reached the French trenches on the northern part of the slopes. On the southern end, German detachments reached a few advanced posts but were afterward repulsed.

RIOTS IN GERMANY.

LONDON, September 20.—Serious rioting in which a number of lives were lost occurred at Chemitz, Saxony, southwest of Dresden, Saturday afternoon, according to a Central News despatch from The Hague. The despatch says that the rioting started when the news arrived of the heavy losses of Chemnitz workmen in the Somme battle. Crowds assembled on the streets and sang "The Internationale." They refused to disperse and were charged by the Hussars. Five Hussars were killed and forty wounded, and about forty civilians were killed and three hundred armed with revolvers were arrested.

Germans Are Warned To Conserve Muniton Supplies

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 20.—General Falkenhayn, until recently chief of the German General Staff, dictated a letter to his officers declaring that the wastage of guns during the recent months had exceeded their production, and also that the ammunition supplies were dwindling rapidly, General Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon. A document captured by the British in the recent fighting bearing Falkenhayn's signature urged the Germans to conserve their supplies. The situation between the Ancre and the Somme underwent no change last night. Minor British enterprises near Arras were successful.

Look For Revival of The Submarine Controversy

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 20.—There is a decided revival of the submarine controversy in Germany, and when the Reichstag reconvenes on September 28th, a violent attack is likely to be made on Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg. Hollweg has persistently defended Germany's abandonment of the submarine campaign. It was abandoned not to comply with the wishes of the United States as was pretended, but because submarines were being captured by the Allies and were not achieving the object for which they were designed. A Berlin cable to-day says: Three hundred Socialists met here to-day in a most important session proceeding the Reichstag gathering. The Socialists will support the Chancellor during the submarine disputes. The attention of the whole country is centred upon the Socialists' meeting.

ULTIMATUM FROM GREECE.

ATHENS, September 20.—There is reason to believe that the Greek Government has sent an ultimatum to Germany and Bulgaria expiring Wednesday night, demanding the immediate return of soldiers and civilians taken prisoners at Kavala.

AMERICAN SEAMEN LOST.

WASHINGTON, September 20.—Two American seamen were aboard the British steamer "Strathroy," torpedoed in the English Channel by a German submarine on September 6th, the State Department reported.

SUCCESS FOR THE ROUMANIANS.

BUCHAREST, September 20.—Roumanian troops have won a victory over the main Bulgarian, German and Turkish forces in a battle near Eagea, Dobrudja, it was officially announced to-day. Fight is continuing.

NO IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS.

PETROGRAD, September 20.—"There were no important developments on the western or Caucasian fronts," says to-day's official announcement.

QUAKER OATS WILL BUILD A NEW ELEVATOR

Will Expend Fifteen Thousand Dollars in Facilities for Handling Grain Shipments---New Warehouse Proposed

CONTRACT AWARDED

The Quaker Oats Company is contemplating the immediate construction of a couple of loading platforms and elevator capable of handling, expeditionaly the large grain shipments of the company. The new addition will be of steel and concrete construction and will cost in the neighbourhood of fifteen thousand dollars. This will mean the employment of twenty-five or thirty men until about December.

It is only a few weeks since the Canadian Leonard Construction Company completed the construction of two additional storeys to the present warehouse of the Quaker Oats. The same company will get the contract for the loading platforms and elevator. It is understood that the Quaker Oats Company is contemplating the erection some time next spring of a brand new warehouse, also an office building. To that proposed enterprise is credited the present endeavour to settle the matter of closing Mill street and a part of Murray street. The matter is at present under consideration by the City Council.

Reconstruction Committee Will Meet Next Week

Business of an Important Character Will Be Considered—First Meeting Since the Resignation of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux

ENGINEERS WANTED

OTTAWA, Sept. 20. — The Parliamentary Reconstruction Committee reassemble on Wednesday next when several matters of an important character will be considered. This will be the first meeting of the committee since the resignation of the Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux. It is considered very improbable that any successor will be named by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and that the committee will remain as at present, with five Conservatives and two Liberals on its personnel. Interesting developments are anticipated from the coming meeting. The government has received a request from the Imperial authorities to send over a number of chemical engineers to assist in the British munition factories.

League Will Make Shipment of Socks

The Kitchener League desires to thank Messrs. D. McQuaig, J. Stuart, Mr. Smith and Mr. F. Might of the Turnbull Company for their assistance in connection with the booth at the Peterborough Industrial Fair, as well as all others who help to make the booth a success. It is the intention of the League to make a shipment of socks this week. All those who have completed work are asked to return them to Mrs. Knox, 481 Gilmour street. This shipment will be sent to number 6 Company, Engineers, with the second contingent. Anybody who has names of members of this particular unit is asked to send them in to Mrs. Knox.

ARE MAKING GOOD PROGRESS IN THEIR CANVASS OF CITY

Officers of 247th Battalion Are Endeavouring to Secure a Complete List of the Local Men of Military Age--Recruiting at the Lakefield Fair To-day--Sergt. Vair back From Front---To-day's General Military News

The officers of the 247th Battalion are making good progress in their canvass of the city with a view to compiling as complete a list as possible of the men of military age. As a rule they have been courteously received, although in a few cases people have taken the attitude that the officers are going outside their jurisdiction in seeking this information. Citizens should remember that the officers are merely doing their duty. It is not a pleasant task or one that they like, but they take it as part of their work and expect the citizens of Peterborough to co-operate with them.

Lieut. G. S. Shaw has been taken on the strength of the 247th Battalion.

The Peterborough members of Queen's Field Ambulance who were home on leave to attend the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, left for Barriefield last night.

Sergt. Steve Vair of the 14th Battalion, who has been overseas for the past year and a half, is home on a six-weeks' furlough, having come back in charge of twenty soldier patients which arrived last week at Quebec. Sergt. Vair is the well-known professional hockey player and coach of the O. H. A. junior team in his home town, Barrie. He was for seven months in the trenches in Flanders, where he earned his stripes and has been for three months in a hospital in Scotland with shrapnel wounds in his side and shoulder. He has pretty well recovered now, but is still suffering from shell shock.

Recruiting Report.

The recruiting report for the first two weeks in September shows a decrease in the number of recruits from that of the last two weeks in August, says the Kingston Standard. It is expected that recruiting at the various fairs will cause the number to rise for the last two weeks of the month, although many officers are of the opinion that the voluntary system has reached the limit of its possibilities. The following are the results for the last two weeks:

"C" Battery, R.C.H.A., Kingston—35 recruits, 4 appointed officers, 7 attached officers, other ranks, 276. Total strength, 287.

Artillery Brigade and Ammunition Column, Petawawa—40 recruits.

Cobourg Heavy Battery, Cobourg—4 recruits, 28 appointed officers, 4 other ranks. Total strength, 37.

154th Battalion, Barriefield Camp—8 recruits, 29 appointed officers, 1 attached officer, other ranks, 923. Total strength, 955.

158th Battalion, Barriefield Camp—8 recruits, 28 appointed officers, 4 attached officers, other ranks, 981. Total strength, 1,062.

156th Battalion, Barriefield Camp—6 recruits, 33 appointed officers, 4 attached officers, other ranks, 968. Total strength, 876.

247th Battalion, Peterborough—2 recruits, 7 appointed officers, other ranks, 7. Total strength, 14.

Special Service company, Barriefield Camp—3 appointed officers, 1 attached officer, other ranks, 169. Total strength, 173.

Queen's field ambulance, Barriefield Camp—19 recruits, 10 appointed officers, 2 attached officers, other ranks, 152. Total strength, 164.

Unattached recruits in the District, 5.

Total recruits for two weeks, 279; total officers appointed, 266; total officers attached, 48; total other ranks, 5,645. Total strength of troops in the Third Military District, 5,959.

KINGSTON, Sept. 18.—Although he was 57 years of age, Private C. F. Westfall gave his age as 45, and was enlisted in the 156th Battalion last winter. On August 6th, he left Barriefield Camp and was in a short time declared a deserter and was apprehended at Trenton. Col. Hunter sentenced the accused to five months in jail at a hearing yesterday afternoon.

The prosecution was conducted by Capt. Kylie, who produced the attestation papers and other evidence. Westfall claimed that he deserted because there was sickness at his home and he could not get a pass. This statement was contradicted by other evidence.

In giving him a light sentence, Col. Hunter stipulated that if the battalion should leave before the sentence terminated and if the governor of the jail reported favourably of the prisoner's conduct, he could be released.

"WONDERFUL TRIBUTE" TO CHURCH UNION

Moderator of the Peterboro' Presbytery Frankly Admits That He Is Forced to See the Practical Value of Church Union—"What's the Use of Singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" and Then Go Out and Work Against One Another," Asks Rev. W. D. Lee of Millbrook

DISTRICT MEETING

The closing session of the Financial District meeting of the Methodist Church, held yesterday afternoon in George Street Church, was featured by a frank expression of opinion respecting church union. This feature, which was characterised by the Rev. R. G. Peever as "A wonderful tribute," was supplied by the Rev. A. H. McConnachie, M.A., of South Monaghan, Moderator of the Peterborough Presbytery, and Rev. W. D. Lee of Millbrook. Both Rev. Mr. McConnachie and Rev. Mr. Lee were present as a delegation from the Peterborough Presbytery to reciprocate the greetings that were extended to the Presbytery. They were introduced to the meeting by the Rev. Benjamin Greatrix.

Things in Common.

Addressing the meeting, Rev. Mr. McConnachie said: "I come from a country where Methodism does not flourish. That is in Scotland where I served fifteen years of my ministerial career. My own town of Ayr was not able to support a Methodist church. That was no joy to me and I am sure it would not be to you. I like to see all types of churches represented in a community. That may be contrary to the principles of church union, yet at the same time I do not see why we could not have church union, and at the same time preserve the respective types. When we get down to things spiritual we realise how many things we have in common. I hope the people will get together and further the cause of the United Church of Canada."

Rev. Mr. McConnachie intimated that while at one time he had been opposed to church union he was forced to see the practical value of it in the West, and so far as he was concerned, was prepared to cast in his lot with the majority. Mr. McConnachie expressed the hope that the churches would be shaken by a revival and that church union would become an accomplished fact.

Canada's Problem.

"I rejoice in the stand that Rev. Mr. McConnachie has taken regarding church union," said the Rev. Mr. Lee. The fact that Mr. McConnachie has only been away from Scotland for a short time, where national sentiment is against church union, makes Mr. McConnachie's stand more to be admired. I have always been in favour of church union. There can only be one solution of Canada's problem, and that is the Protestant Churches must get together and save Canada for Jesus Christ. What is the singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds," and then go out and work against one another and dispute about this and that? If we do not see that Canada is evangelized, no social, political or any other measure will ever save Canada from the rut into which she is drifting. The Gospel is the lever by which Canada must be lifted out of the slough of sin and the Church is the fulcrum."

Co-operation.

That church union would help materially to solve the problem of evangelizing Canada was indicated during the course of an interesting address by the Rev. P. L. Brown, Superintendent of Home Missions. The speaker spoke of a circuit one hundred and fifty miles in extent, and embracing eleven appointments which was covered by one man. In this conference, as well as in other conferences there is the problem relating to the sparsely settled communities.

CHEESE SOARED TO NEW PRICE RECORD AT TO-DAY'S SALE

Make Was Lighter Than Usual But Price Never So High—20 5-16c. Paid By Belleville Buyer for Entire Offering

REVIEW OF SALES

Sept. 20—2,029 boxes, at 20 5-16c.
Sept. 6—2,246 boxes, at 20 1-16c.
August 16—2,222 boxes, at 18 1-8c.
August 2—2,388 boxes, at 17 5-8c.
July 19—2,699 boxes, at 18 1-2c.
July 5—2,999 boxes at 15 7-8c.
July 21—2,772 boxes, at 16c.
May 30—2,088 boxes, at 16 5-16c.

The Peterborough Cheese Board made another high record price this morning, when Mr. Kerr of Belleville, bought the entire offering of 2,029 boxes at 20 5-16c. This is within 5-8c. of the highest price paid on any Canadian Board.

To-day the factory salesmen watched with bated breath the record of two weeks ago slowly pounded up for a gain of 1-4c. Mr. Thompson opened the bidding at 19 1-4 cents and it cluttered along at a lively rate until 20 cents was reached. From that point caution guided the buying. Each offer came slowly. Mr. Cook called the even 20 cents, Mr. Gillespie raised to 1-16c.; Mr. Cook 1-8; Mr. Kerr 3-16c.; Mr. Gillespie 1-4; and Mr. Kerr 5-16c.

The Boarding.

Mr. Kerr secured the entire Board as follows:

Production Decreasing.

It will be observed that the factory production has been steadily declining since the make during the last half of June and the end of the season looms above the splendid price prospect.

Port Hope Fair

THE BRITISH "TANKS."

The artist who could draw, from the cabled descriptions, a passable representation of the new walking-automobile-machine-gun-forts which the British are now using on the western front must be a mighty clever man. Looking over about ten columns of description of the innovation, we find it is likened to a dinosaur, an ichthyosaurus, an armadillo, a measuring worm, a man-o'-war's turret, a toad, a tortoise, a caterpillar, a pterodactyl, a juggernaut, an armoured motor, a tank, a land dreadnought, and a walking fort. Germans who want to copy the invention can take their choice and go ahead.—Montreal Herald.

HIGH PRICES CAUSE.

Some Canadian cities are proposing municipal bakeries as a remedy against the payment of exorbitant prices are being attacked. Wholesale, of our largest milling companies pays a dividend of profit of 12 per cent. per annum indicates that the effects, rather than the causes of high bread prices is being attacked. Wholesale, rather than retail, greed of unrighteous gain, seems to present a more promising target for regulation. When a doctor doesn't know what is the matter with a patient, he treats symptoms. But in the matter of high food prices we know the cause, and the government knows the cause, and is responsible for failure to deal with it. Our Minister of Labour should begin labouring for the relief of his proper wards, the consumers. Combinations in restraint of trade are bad enough, but palpable combinations to enhance the price of food to the poor is worse—it's the wickedest sort of Germanism.

SYSTEM IN RECRUITING.

With considerable exhaustion of the supply of patriotic citizens, and with consequent and corresponding exhaustion of the spirit of patriotic sacrifice, recruiting came to something like a standstill. After two years and a month of war the Government of Canada has done, or made a beginning in doing, what could with advantage have been done at the first—take measures to put recruiting upon an organized and systematic basis. It is agreed that in the selection of Sir Thomas Tait for "Director-General of National service," a good choice has been made. He is to head and direct an organization "to mobilize Canadian resources of fighting material and industrial material." And the mobilization of our fighting material has first call, though the two are so intimately associated that we cannot promote more active recruiting without having in view possible disturbance of industrial efficiency, especially in the production of munitions, as necessary as the fighting men to use them. The fact of the government having taken action in the interest of recruiting, something more effective than its negative interest in the past, should in itself be a moral stimulant to recruiting, that will bring actual results.

CONDITIONS OF SUCCESS.

To use a military metaphor, prohibition has carried the first and second line trenches, and now has to confront the third. This means that prohibition is now definitely on trial and its success depends upon the friends of its principle. Prohibition has cut off the most profitable part of the hotel business. And if the public convenience represented by hotels is to be maintained, the hotels must be supported, so that they can give accommodation of a kind that cannot be quoted against prohibition. Heretofore hotels have been objectionable to many guests on account of the association of the bar selling intoxicants. That condition has now disappeared, and it is incumbent upon those who favour prohibition to help make the radical changes it effects, less disadvantageous to the public. One of the stock objections to the abolition of the bar is that hotels cannot be successfully and profitably conducted without the financial aid of the profits of the bar. It is in the power of the public to a great extent to disprove that claim. A necessary advance in rates and increase in patronage will solve the problem. No honest advocate of prohibition will object to paying a little more for good hotel service to justify his advocacy. The success of prohibition will not be menaced alone by those who seek to supply or obtain strong drink contrary to its provisions; failure of sympathetic support by its friends will not help its success.

PRACTICAL POSSIBILITIES.

In another column of this issue will be found a most interesting communication from Mr. J. C. Shook, dealing with practical matters associated with our industrial power interests, our lighting interests, our home heating problems, and all the interests connected with the economic utilization of electricity. The communication expressing in moderate language and reasonable terms the writer's convictions of the practical possibilities of the proposal he offers, is worthy of careful perusal; and from a cursory reading seems to offer a solution of a problem in the special interest of Peterborough's industrial and domestic welfare.

With all the discoveries and improvements of applicability of electricity to the uses of men, since its general adoption, some thirty years ago, its development in the way of application may yet be regarded as in its infancy. It certainly contains possibilities doubly greater than these that have been made actualities and a part of the conveniences of our daily life. When we note the tremendous developments in aerial navigation as well as in the various terrible agencies of destruction in this war, as well as the benign developments of life and limb saving surgery and sanitation, we can hope that, spurred by necessity—research and discovery in other fields can be made to produce similar advance in the arts of peace.

It seems that there is no doubt of the practicability of the use of electricity for heating purposes. It only requires reasonable abundance and cheapness to make it an economic possibility. If the proposal of Mr. Shook involves as it seems to do, a practicable means of Peterborough obtaining all the electric current it needs for present and considerably future needs, it is well worthy of responsible and popular attention. The situation as set forth seems to fully justify the demand for the erection of Peterborough into a separate Hydro power zone, such as those existing at Eugenia Falls, Parry Sound and North Bay. The power in the lower reaches of the canal system will be in demand to supply the proposed extensions eastward and there is liable to be a shortage unless Peterborough power possibilities are developed to our own advantage and to the relief of new demand elsewhere. Is it not probable that with proper initative by our City Council and Utilities Commission and leading citizens, the Hydro Commission and the Government may be induced to take similar action on behalf of Peterborough as it has done in respect of this district? As is pointed out we have at our doors much more power, than would if developed, serve our needs for many years to come at rates that would permit its larger present use and admit of possibility of applicatioon to heating purposes. Much of our potential power is now running idly past our doors, a form of waste that constitutes a direct challenge to our enterprise and civic spirit. From the layman's point of view and with only cursory examination of the proposal submitted it seems that it would be wise for the authorities and citizens to initiate investigation as a preliminary to action in the larger interests of the city and our citizens. Such investigation would disclose the merits or otherwise of the proposed course of action and with that settled the details would present little difficulty.

THE PRESENT AND FUTURE POWER POSSIBILITIES OF AND FOR PETERBOROUGH

Interesting Letter From a Citizen Well Qualified to Deal With the Subject

To the Editor of The Examiner:

The unique geographical position of this city, and the natural resources available if properly appropriated, should enhance its value as a manufacturing city and give its citizens every advantage in regard to economical home life and industrial capacity for manufacturers.

1. We own our waterworks and with the facilities we now have, we should have as cheap if not cheaper water than almost any city or town in Ontario.

2. We own our lighting system, and even now our light bills compare favourably with other places but in order to derive full benefit of the water power resources we have right at our hand, we should own our power.

It was represented to us when we first voted on the purchase of the light and power distribution plant, that the Hydro Electric Commission would purchase and develop such power sites as would be acceptable to the citizens, charging a price for service sufficient to pay the cost in thirty years when it would then become the property of the city.

Situated as we are 40 miles from the next water-power south of us and having about 20,000 h.p. between here and Burleigh Falls, a distance of 20 miles to serve this city and district, there would be great advantage to us, without any disadvantage to the districts south, if this was made a separate power zone, appropriating to us exclusively the power above mentioned and giving us the privilege of owning the power as at first proposed.

We require at present about 3,500 h.p to run our light and industries and the Street Railway, and we are importing about 80,000 tons of coal and exporting about $160,000.00 to the United States. Whereas, if we had our available water powers developed and placed at the disposal of our citizens for household heating and cooking at an average of, say $30.00 per h.p. for 2 h.p. and over, we would then be able to offer the very best inducements possible for manufacturers to locate in Peterborough by arranging cheap fuel, light, etc., for their employees and others, and Peterborough would be an economical place to live in.

3. It may seem a large proposition to undertake at the present stage of Hydro development, but before any move is made, would it not be in the best interests of the city and district to approach the Government and Hydro Commission with the proposition to create this district a separate power zone that and we purchase first from them the Auburn Power Plant, then develop such other sites as may be required to supply the demand, and as soon as possible supply current for heating and cooking on a h.p. basis instead of k.w. hour as at present, thus giving the citizens the benefit, and keeping our fuel expenditure at home?

Unless some move is made to utilize our natural advantages, soon Peterborough will be handicapped in the competition for trade and industry, which is sure to follow the close of the present war.

Trusting that some action will be taken by our Council with the co-operation of the Utilities Commission and citizens generally, which will result in our obtaining the best results for the city and surrounding district at the cheapest posible rates, I am

Peterborough, Sept. 19th, 1916.

Yours truly,

J. C. SHOOK.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The stock market opened at generally higher prices to-day. Maxwell Motors furnished the initial record, selling at 94, a new high. U. S. Steel sold at 108 5-8, only 3-8 under its record high. Coppers were strong and Reading gained 3-4, while other rails were fractionally higher.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.— The first "war bride" to break under the strain of the recent bull market dropped today when Driggs Seabury Ordnance Co. was lowered seventeen points to $95 per share. Many other leading stocks, notably United States Steel and Reading were down a point or two.

Atchison 106; Balt. and Ohio 89, 88 3-4; Ches. and Ohio, 64 1-4, 64 1-2; Erie, 30 1-8, 30 7-8; Nor. 109,122 Cars Of Grain Moved By The C.N.R.

Western Canada's crop year commences on September 1st and ends on August 31st the year following. So it happens that during September those chiefly interested in the market ing of the crop, collect and compile statistics to show how the details compare with those of the preceding twelve months.

Grain figures are of interest wider than most. To the multitude concerned in the movement of grain from the farmers' siding to the consumer, they surpass in interest the latest fiction. To the business section, they speak of obligations met and credits renewed; to manufacturers, as foreshadowing a revival of ordering and a busy season for the industries; to the farmer and his people, they take tangible form in new articles of comfort about the home, but to the men on the railways, they provoked reminiscences of days and nights on the road, and continuous striving to keep the ordinary traffic of the country in motion while the wheat was moving to the sea.

During the twelve months ended August 31st, the Canadian Northern Railway handled over its lines between Lake Superior and the Rocky Mountains, 109,122 cars of grain produced along its rails, and inspected by the Government at Winnipeg, Calgary and other points in the West. This is an increase of 69,928 cars over the total of the last previous year, and represents a gain of 178 per cent. A modern box car carries 1,200 bushels, so that the figures mean really, that the Canadian Northern transported over its steel more than 130,000,000 bushels of grain.

Coupled together, these 109,122 cars would form one continuous train from Toronto to Montreal and back, and up north as far as Parry Sound. Split this up into freight trains of fifty cars each, which is the average over the Canadian Northern between Winnipeg and Port Arthur, and there are 2182 trains, each with locomotive, caboose and train crew. The cars handled over and above the total of the year before, would constitute a train continuing without a break from Toronto to New York.

The terminal elevators at Port Arthur, have been making records also Of the crop of 1914, the movement of which closed on August 31st 1915, the Canadian Northern Railway elevator at Port Arthur, the largest consolidated elevator plant in the world, handled 55,884,560 bushels. Its receipts of wheat alone this year totalled 38,582,581, or more than twice the handling for the elevator of all grains during the preceding crop year.

SERBIANS TAKE SUMMIT.

Bulgarians Driven Out of Position They Were Ordered to Defend.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Serbian troops in Macedonia, after a night of desperate fighting, developed a success on the Kaimakcalan range, to the north of Lake Ostrovo, says a Reuter despatch from Salonika. At 10 o'clock at night they occupied the highest summit of the range, 2,500 metres in height, which the Bulgarians had been ordered to defend to the last man.

Bulgarian counter-attacks were completely repulsed, the despatch adds, and the Serbian offensive is continuing successfully.

A new French "brassiere corsage" is of night blue vevet, the rest of the evening gown being ivory lace.

The parasol and hat should be in some manner related. For instance, the material which drapes the hat should be the same that covers the parasol.

Holy Communion At Chemong Park

Holy communion was celebrated by Rev. Gobt. Pray, at Mr. Hopwood's cottage, Chemong, on Sunday morning, this being the last service this season In appreciation of Rev. Mr. Gray's kind interest in the promotion of the services, it was decided to donate the collections taken at these services ($10.05) to the poor funds of his pairsh, St. Monicas', Toronto. An effort will probably be made next season to revive the mission at Chemong, and probably commence the erection of a chapel in the park. A fund for this purpose has been in the bank for several years, and it is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Elliott have offered to donate a lot for a site.

Hague Hall Porter Is A German Baron

Brother of Late Ambassador Has Little Relish for His Present Humble Calling.

LONDON.—"The Man Who Dined With the Kaiser" recently visited Holland, where he was investigating the German spy system. He announces his discovery that Baron von Wangenheim, younger brother of the late German Ambassador to Turkey, is acting as hall porter at the Hotel des Indes at The Hague, the finest hotel in Holland, used by practically every foreigner of importance who visits The Hague, especially the diplomats here. The correspondent found him "spying and prying for the Kaiser and the Fatherland in gorgeous livery of a flunkey."

The correspondent visited the hotel with the idea of making the Baron's acquaintance. He describes his appearance thus:

"A well-groomed figure, clad in the regulation regimentals of a continental hotel de luxe, green livery, with massive bands of gold braid round the collar and sleeves. He appeared to be a man close on to 50 years of age, of medium height, wearing a heavy black mustache and with hair slightly tinged with gray. His complexion was sallow and his carriage was marked by the suggestion of a stoop. I had heard that for eight or nine years this Wangenheim had been an officer in the Prussian Guard. Obviously the man before me was no longer militarily fit. There was little of the guardsman type about him, and hardly anything to mark the German nobleman, except a conspicuously white pair of long-fingered hands. Beneath the green and gold tunic he sported an immaculately white waistcoat, across which was stretched a large gold chain."

On the occasion of his visit to the Balkans the correspondent travelled on the same train as Ambassador von Wangenheim's widow and made this pretext for enticing a conversation with the aristocratic hall porter.

"Addressing him in German I said:

" 'Herr Baron, may I speak with you for a minute?'

"Hearing his full title in colloquial German evidently startled the hall-porter. For a fleeting second or two the colour left his cheeks. His large, black eyes turned on me with a piercing glance. I worked hard to appear natural and self-possessed.

" 'Es ist schon gut,' (it's all right) I began in German. 'I knew your sister-in-law, Frau Botschae, Mrs. Ambassador's' widow von Wangenheim, very well. I travelled with her and her children some months ago from Nish to Budapest in the Balkan express. The Ambassador had died a few weeks before.'

" 'Quite right,' responded Hall-porter von Wangenheim. 'She did not remain long in Turkey after my brother's death.'

"Then, with a serious frown, he added:

" 'Eine traurige geschichte,' (a sad story). He was a clever man who worked himself to death.'

" 'I am hoping to go back to Constantinople before long.' I intervened, trying hard to make conversation. Von Wangenheim, I observed, was beginning to wonder what sort of German accent I had, for he looked me straight in the face and asked:

" 'You're an Austrian, nicht wahr?' (Is it not so?)

" 'Oh, no,' I said; 'my name's Ballin (a subterfuge, of course). I am Dutch, born of German parentage, and I am of course German at heart.'

"This, which of course was contrary to the truth, seemed satisfactory to him. He opened up a little and told me he had been an officer in the German Army for fourteen years. He did not like his present occupation; but, being no longer sturdy, he thought he would be of more service to der grossen sache (the great cause) in the disguise of a humble hall porter at a strategic point like The Hague. Besides, he was not particularly keen about the front. Things were far from satisfactory in or for the Fatherland, he went on to say, and he was anxious about the food problem. Everybody was, he explained, but victory for the Allies ganz ausgeschlossen (utterly out of the question). We parted company. Baron the Porter wished me gluckliche reise (a happy journey) to Constantinople, and bade me come in to chat with him again before I left The Hague."

WAR CUTS ITS TOLL OF WORLD'S SHIPS

Neutrals' Shipping Suffers Heavily—War Losses of France Heaviest for the Period Reported.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Lloyd's Shipping Register, issued this week, gives the return of losses of merchant shipping, dealing with the quarter ending March last, the intervening time being required for obtaining accurate information from all countries of the world. The total losses from all causes, from war misadventure and other natural conditions, for this quarter, were 316 vessels of 612,519 tons.

This is less than in preceding quarters, due in part to smaller war losses. The total of war losses for the quarter is not by any means as great as in some earlier periods of the war. The war losses of all nations for the quarter ending in March include 137 vessels of 389,994 tons, more than one-third of these being those of other countries than Great Britain. In the September quarter of last year, for instance, the total war losses were 220 vessels of 462,563 tons, while in the December quarter of last year the war losses were 167 vessels of 409,567 tons, so it will be seen there is a falling off.

Losses in the Baltic fleet from all causes are about double the normal volume, but notwithstanding this percentage of loss for the March quarter it is only 1.71 per cent. of the tonnage owned, representing considerably less than 7 per cent. per annum.

This is regarded as a fair proportion and equal only to the normal rate of loss in the merchant fleets of most of the other maritime nations of the world.

Neutral countries are suffering heavily from this shipping return. It is seen that the Dutch are losing now at an annual rate between 9 and 10 per cent. of the tonnage owned; Norway over 6 per cent.; Spain, 7.6 per cent., and Sweden between 4 and 5 per cent.

In the quarter under review, the war losses of Holland were 8 vessels, 34,355 tons; of Norway, 12 vessels, 21,150 tons; of Sweden, 4 vessels, 3,996 tons, and of Spain, 3 vessels, 5,981 tons. The fact that the German fleet has been swept from the high seas is shown by the circumstance that their war losses were only 9 vessels, 474 tons, and their total losses from all causes 5 vessels, 5,088 tons.

Among the Allies other than Great Britain, France lost most heavily during this quarter, its war loss being 16 vessels, 47,408 tons, but on the other hand, only 5 small craft were lost by misadventure, the total losses being 48,407 tons. Italy lost by war operations vessels totaling 8,102 tons, but 8 vessels were lost by misadventure of double the tonnage lost. Japan lost no vessels owing to war, and the losses by natural causes made up 9 vessels, 39,836 tons. Russia lost by war 3 vessels, 4,700 tons, and 8 others, making the total loss from all causes 681 tons.

Engineering considers these figures quite satisfactory, and says they show that the submarine menace of the enemy is not achieving by any means what they hoped for, and is certainly not such as should disturb either ourselves or our allies.'

People of Kavala Flee City in Terror

ATHENS, Sept. 19.—The ship Marguerite arrived at the Piraeus from Kavala bringing 2,000 refugees. On board was Mr. Skidmore of the Standard Oil Company who gave me a graphic story of the happenings at Kavala, which he left yesterday afternoon. At that time the Bulgars had not yet entered the town, but their advance guards were only a mile or so away from the outskirts. Of the 2,000 refugees on the ship, the most part were women and children, and 90 per cent were absolutely penniless and starving. For five days all the food that it was possible for them to obtain was fifty loaves of bread, which were secured yesterday at the island of Thasos from the French at the request of Colonel Christodoulis. While the ship, crammed with refugees, was awaiting an opportunity to depart in Kavala harbor Monday afternoon a German aeroplane appeared. It first bombed the town, one shell exploding in a warehouse and killing ten men. It then flew over the harbor and endeavored to hit the Marguerite. It did not succeed in this, though one bomb fell within three yards of the vessel.

The scene in the harbor was extraordinary. The people were crowded on all sorts of craft. Overloaded caiques were everywhere. British trawlers came along and towed them to Thasos. Other terrified refugees boarded numerous lighters which went astray with their heavy loads in all directions. When the lighters came near the ship the refugees swarmed aboard leaving the lighters in a heavy sea to be sunk or wrecked on the rocks. It was estimated that yesterday there were still 10,000 to 15,000 refugees in Kavala. They were in an awful condition, many children dying, and all utterly foodless.

Mr. Skidmore met the famous Colonel Christodoulos and offered him his felicitations. The Colonel explained that on Wednesday of last week he occupied a position outside of the town which he was going to defend. Two lines of trenches have been thrown up, defended by about 1,000 men, with six mounted guns and four heavy cannon. The latter, curiously enough, were captured from the Turks and Bulgars during the Balkan war. Asked why he withdrew eventually, Colonel Christadoulos said:

"After the forts had been given over we were helpless. What could we do? If we had fought we should only have sacrificed ourselves uselessly. We decided to retire so that we might be more useful another day.

Christodoulos, with about 1,000 men and some of his artillery, managed to reach Thasos in safety. Colonel Chatzopoulos, Chief of Staff at Kavala, with those troops who had not adhered to the forces of Christodoulos and who was called upon on Tuesday by the Bulgars to surrender 900 of these non-volunteers, had in the mean time gone aboard ship and had been taken to Thasos. There, Skidmore says, it is a question whether as they did not belong to the Christodoulos movement, they should be sent back to Kavala. Skidmore says the Sixteen the Greek Regiment was cut off between Kavala and Drama and disarmed by the Bulgars. The Bulgar force outside Kavala is said to be 25,000 strong. Their headquarters are at Doxalo, the scene of hideous massacres in July, 1913.

Between $14,000,000 and $16,000,000 worth of tobacco, mainly the property of English and American companies, had to be abandoned in Kavala.

A recently patented attachment for phonographs displays the notes and words of a song as its records is being played by the machine.

Russian engineers soon will begin experiments that will cover three years to ascertain if sugar beets can be raised profitably in Siberia.

Two Frenchmen have invented a process for treating photographic negatives by which the effect of stereoscopic relief is produced in the pictures.

ISSUE PRICE 97½

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st APRIL, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

10 per cent on application;
30 " " 16th October, 1916;
30 " " 15th November, 1916;
27½ " " 15th December, 1916.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred million dollars exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of October, 1916, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the October instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, or Victoria.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 23rd September, 1916.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA, September 12th, 1916.

RICH FINDS IN ANCIENT RUINS OF NEW MEXICO

DENVER, Colo.,—One of the most important archaeological quests ever started in this country is now under way close to Aztec, N.M., near the Colorado line, where scientists are delving the ancient ruins on the H.D. Abrams ranch.

These ruins are in the midst of a fruit ranch. They have long been a subject for speculation on the part of scientists, but until this season no systematic attempt has been made to uncover them. This season the American Museum of Natural History of New York began systematic work on the ruins. The work is in charge of Prof. Earl H. Morris of the University of Colorado, a young archeologist, who has made a brilliant record in the southwestern field.

Valuable discoveries were made almost at the outset of the work on the Abrams ranch ruins. Cotton cloth, matting, sandals, beans, corns, squash seeds; shells, turquoise, topas, skeletons, and pottery have all been found in the ruins, though the work has hardly more than started.

MADE COTTON INTO CLOTH

It has been proved that the ancients grew cotton in northern New Mexico, and that they knew how to convert it into cloth. Also they made rope and twine of cotton. The other prehistoric dwellers of the southwest used yucca fibre for that purpose. The cotton grown by these prehistoric people closely resembles the common upland cotton grown in the southern states.

There are several groups of buildings to be uncovered by the scientists. Probably it will take several seasons of costly work to determine the size of the buildings and to unearth all the household implements and possibly treasures contained in the rooms which are now covered with the sand drift of ages. The walls of some of the larger buildings project many feet above the sand drift.

The masonary is of high grade. The rocks are carefully faced, though the ancient builders had no iron implements. The rock was secured from a quarry over a nearby hill. It was brought to the townsite on sledges, and the ancient road from the quarry can still be plainly traced over the brow of the hill.

MAY BE 3,000 YEARS OLD

The largest and finest groups of buildings are only two or three miles from Aztec, on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad. Many scientists have visited the ruins and have estimated that the buildings were inhabited any where from 500 to 3,000 years ago. The larger buildings evidently were several stories high.

Entrance to some of the lower rooms has been made, and it has been found that the ceilings are composed of stout logs, bound with withes. The cedar logs have withstood encroachments of the ages and are as good today as when they were put in place.

At different times much pottery and turquoise and other material has been taken from the ruins. Mr. Abrams has one of the finest private collections of pottery in the world—all taken from the ruins on his ranch.

Bride of Baron Astor's Son Is Great Traveller

LONDON, Sept. 19.—In society circles curiosity's keen as to the nature of Baron Astor's wedding present to his second son, Capt. the Hon. John Astor, who was married to Lady Charles Mercer Nairne, a pretty war widow, who is a daughter-in-law of Lord Lansdowne and a sister of Lord Minto.

Only a little over a year ago Baron Astor gave his soldier son a small slice of real estate in New York worth about $7,000,000, so it is likely the ennobled owner of Hever Castle contented himself with a comparatively modest wedding gift, figuring that the youthful bridegroom has quite enough to worry along with, even as a married man!

All the "Class Present."

This society wedding, which took place at Christ Church, Lancaster Place, was avowedly a "quiet one," and there was no reception afterwards, but almost everybody who is any one in upper tendom and who happened to be in town was on hand to see the knot tied.

Capt. Astor, who has been at the front with his crack regiment, the First Life Guards, for many months, had only a short leave for his nuptials, and is now, one understands, on his way back. The bride, who wore a gown of cream georgette and a hat to match, was given away by her brother, the Earl of Minto, while the Earl of Kilmorey was best man.

The Hon. Mrs. John Astor, as she will be known henceforth, began life as Lady Violet Elliot. She is extremely good looking, small, slight, and still in the twenties.

When only 19 she married Lord Charles Fitzmaurice, younger son of Lord and Lady Lansdowne, and he later on took the name of Mercer-Nairne when the Scotch estates were made over to him. He was killed in action in 1914.

Bride Has Shot Tigers.

She has two children, a little girl and a son born in 1912, who had the King as his godfather. She rides extremely well and when in India (while her father, the late Lord Minto, was viceroy) used to take part in the jumping competitions at Annandale. And she is a fine shot, and in those days several tigers fell to her rifle.

As a girl she travelled a great deal, in India, Burmah, and China, in Canada (where her father was Governor-General), and in America.

PIRAEUS AND ATHENS UNDER GUNS OF SIXTEEN BRITISH WORSHIPS—The Harbour of Piraeus, showing Greek war vessels at anchor. Allied warships are also anchored nearby.

FATALLY HURT BY SAW.

St. Mary's, September 19. — Mr. Angus Guick of Fullerton, near St. Mary's, met death by sawing wood with a circular saw. One side of the balance wheel was fastened by a wire when it is supposed that the wire broke —the saw striking him in the breast, and down the stomach, which were both laid open. Dr. Atkinson of Mitchell was called but the injured man died half an hour after the accidents. He was conscious to the last. He was 32 years of age.

NEW BRITISH SERGES AND GABARDINES

NOTWITHSTANDING the war, we have been able to import from England a beautiful range of these Serge and Gabardine Suitings.

In many past seasons many beautiful Serges and Gabardines have been brought to our notice, that for beauty, we felt, were perfection in themselves and could not be improved upon.

But the styles for the Fall season of 1916 shattered all our previous ideas about beauty. For they, as far as beauty is concerned, in textures and weaves, colour and appearance, are far superior to the styles of all past seasons, and have been pronounced by women who have seen them, as the most beautiful that have appeared in years.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WHEN BRITISH GET MORVAL COMBLES MUST SURRENDER

LONDON, September 20.—A despatch to the Times from Paris says:

"On the French front the great points of interest now becomes Combles, north of the river, and Barleux, in the south. Barleux has been under direct fire of the French since the capture of Berny.

"Combles is surrounded north, south and west, that there remains only an opening of less than two miles to the east through which it can be supplied. The town is thoroughly well fortified and the chateau possesses vast underground caverns, extending under the village, over an area of nearly 400 yards so that it is unlikely that any direct assault will be attempted.

"When the British advancing from Ginchy get to Morval the garrison of Combles will not have much else to do but tighten their belts and make up their minds to surrender."

INCREASE RELIEF TO INHABITANTS OF NORTH FRANCE

London, September 19.—The Commission for Relief in Belgium announces that arrangements have been completed with all the interested governments for the augmentation during the coming year of the relief to be provided to the 2,200,000 civil population in the occupied provinces of Northern France.

The steady exhaustion of food reserves and the diminishing vitality of the population have necessitated a considerable increase in the ration, especially for the industrial population in the Lille and Valenciennes districts.

The Allied Governments have facilitated financial arrangements by which the monthly resources of the Commission exclusively for the French population are to be increased from $3,400,000 a month to $6,000,000 a month. This sum will be used to provide increased imports from overseas and from Holland.

The German general staff has undertaken in order to prevent speculation and to secure rigid distribution of the harvest in the north of France, to requisition the entire cereal and potato crop and to guarantee to the Relief Commission, for the use of the civil population, a minimum supply of 200 grammes of flour and 400 grammes of potatoes per capita, per diem, from the harvest.

DEPENDENT ON OUTSIDE AID.

The combined native and imported supplies will provide a ration equal to about three-quarters of normal human consumption, but yet sufficient to maintain the population in health.

Negotiations are not yet completed as to the food supply and finances for the two other political divisions occupied by the German army which the Commission looks after; that is, first, that part of Flanders, with a population of 1,700,000 people, which is under the German General Staff, and with regard to which like Northern France, the Commission deals directly with the General Staff; and second, the remaining part of Belgium which is under General Von Bissing, comprising 5,760,000 people.

In these areas also, because of the steady depletion of the native food supplies and the increase in the number of destitute, the importations must be largely increased.

With all the resources which the Belgians and the Belgian government can bring to bear, a considerable part of the cost of the support of the destitute population must depend on public charity from abroad.

This load has lately been increased by the necessity on account of failing health conditions, of giving a supplementary ration to all school children, which makes an added drain on the resources of the Commission of two million dollars a month.

THINKS HUSBAND GAY BLADE; MIND WILL BE TESTED

Man Says Wife is Unbalanced and Accuses Him of 'Joy Rides'—He Denies Charge.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 20.—Mrs. Margaret Huber was committed to the County hospital for mental observation, the complainant being her husband, August Huber. It is alleged by Traffic Patrolman Kavanaugh of the Lyell avenue station, who was summoned to the Huber homestead last night, that the woman harbors a delusion her husband is 'joy-riding' with actresses, and Mrs. Huber became so violent toward her husband it was necessary to take her to the hospital.

A year ago Mrs. Huber was released from the Rochester State hospital, apparently cured, but recently symptoms of the malady appeared and she neglected to provide for the two children, one three years and the other nine years old. When Huber returned from work last evening he found the dining room supperless and remonstrated with his wife, who became mentally agitated and accused the husband of going automobile riding with actresses. As the husband earns $13 a week, according to Patrolman Kavanaugh, it was apparent to the policeman that the woman's hallucination was baseless. The husband says he is a hard working man, devoted to the family, and innocent of even entertaining thought of gay rides with actresses or anybody else.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS FOUND AT AGINCOURT

NORA PELLATT, AGED SIX, IS THE PATIENT — SCHOOL HAS BEEN CLOSED.

Agincourt, September 19. — There was considerable anxiety here last night as a result of the finding of a case of infantile paralysis by Dr. Conn.

Nora, the six-year-old daughter of W. J. Pellatt, is the patient. As the child is a pupil of School No. 1, the school has been closed and the family placed under quarantine.

A second child in the family has been under observation but Dr. Conn reported that in regard to this child there was no further cause for concern. Every precaution has been taken to prevent a spread of the dread disease in this section.

Council Appoints Officer To Enforce the Temperance Act

Followed a Formality Required by the New Act and Chief Thompson Was Named—Water Main to Auburn, If Work in the City is Completed Early.

CITIZENS TO PAY FOR REMOVAL OF TREES

The Council divided last night upon a by-law to appoint an officer to enforce the Ontario Temperance Act. It named Chief Thompson as a matter of form required by the measure in order that any fines collected should revert to the city. Without this by-law such monies would be paid to the government. The Council had their hands out with palms up and cupped for that prospect, but some of them were cautiously withdrawn when the next clause was read specifying that the city should pay the expenses necessary to prosecutions under the Act.

Mayor Duffus first thought it might prove a losing game, and then concluded that the city would have to pay the cost of any prosecutions the police department might make. Hence the pea was under the Council's shell in any case.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Weir that this second clause be struck out.

The extension of the idea of expenses was detailed by City Solicitor Gordon, who mentioned witness fees, automobile hire, physician's fees and that sort of thing.

Ald. Edgar supported the entire by-law. The government had put the temperance law into effect and the people should see that it was enforced. Ald. Saunders supported his amendment and it rolled in with a count of 7 to 2 in its favour.

Mr. W. H. Hill's petition for the removal of a pole on Water street before a proposed new entrance to the Crown building yard was referred to the Board of Works.

City Engineer Paterson applied for two weeks' holidays beginning Monday, October 2nd.— Referred to the Board of Works.

Goaded by the threat of a writ if a cheque was not forthcoming not later than this (Wednesday) morning, Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that this communication was referred to Ald. Stratton and City Solicitor Gordon with power to act.

Mr. H. J. McCannon forwarded an account for $4.40 from Adamson & Dobbin for cost of relaying sewer pipe at 556 Charlotte street. When put in the sewer was eleven feet short of the street line.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that a cheque for $20 be forwarded to the Hydro-Electric Railway Association as a special contribution toward the expenses of the by-law campaign in Toronto and London. The call upon the municipalities is one dollar per thousand of population.

Mrs. John Bell attributed to a defective sewer the presence of water in the cellars of property belonging to the Bell estate at 308, 312 and 314 Townsend street, and at 122, 124, 126, 128 and 130 Park street. At 122 Park street the water interfered with a furnace, she wrote, and requested that immediate relief be provided.—Referred to the Board of Works. Mr. Parsons was also asked to make a report on the alleged conditions.

The City Engineer in reply to Mayor Duffus, stated that the expenditure on the outfall sewer was about even with the appropriation for the work.

That Water Main to Auburn.

The Utilities Commission notified the Council that a water main would be laid into Auburn this fall upon the completion of work in the city if the weather permitted.

Mr. W. H. Moore, on behalf of himself and family, acknowledged the Council's letter of condolence upon his recent bereavement in the death of Mrs. Moore.

The Utilities Commission announced that they would instal hydrants at the corners of Smith and Donegal streets and London and Donegal streets.

Ald. Duncan moved, seconded Ald. Saunders, that any person requesting the city to remove a tree or trees from in front of their property on any side of it, pay the city for the cost of the work after permission has been granted for the removal and when a removal is required by the city that the Council pay for the cost of the work.

Princess Mary Now A Milkmaid

King's Daughter Draws Several Pailfuls Without Kick From Cow.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—King George's only daughter is the latest society milkmaid. When she was last at York cottage, Sandringham, it seems Princess Mary became acquainted with the whole art and science of milking a cow and drew several pailfuls without getting kicked once!

Long before the war the princess was quite an expert buttermaker, like her royal mamma and her grandmother, Queen Alexandra, and used, one hears, to take a special pride in turning out dainty pats for her parents' breakfast.

Her little country holiday could not be of long duration, for Buckingham palace is a positive hive of industry in these days. The king and queen do not allow a moment to be wasted.

Both pass practically the whole morning at their writing tables, Princess Mary helping. After luncheon their majesties nearly always hurry off to visit hospitals, and every spare moment the queen fills up with knitting.

WOMAN TRIES TO DROWN SELF AT WATKINS

TELEGRAPH OPERATOR RESCUES MRS. M. B. MORRIS FROM SENECA LAKE.

Watkins, September 20.—An elderly woman made an attempt at suicide by walking into Seneca Lake, near the Pennsylvania railroad station. A. D. Erway, an operator, saw the woman twenty feet from the shore and rescued her after she had been in the water only five minutes. She suffered greatly from the cold water and was taken into the station until Health Officer D. W. Scutt arrived, and had her taken to the home of Mrs Mericle, in Madison avenue.

It was found that the woman registered at the Jefferson house on September 1st as Mrs. M. B. Morris, of Elmira, and had been there until Saturday night. When questioned she said she was 72 years of age and had lived with her brother, Edward P Carpenter, near Horseheads, until a month ago, when they had a quarrel, and she left. Mr. Carpenter was called on the telephone and replied that he did not care to have anything to do with her, and the authorities will be compelled to dispose of her case.

The woman had $47 in her possession, and $12.34 in coin was recovered in three feet of water. It is believed that $35 in bills was carried down the lake by the south wind. Her umbrella and glasses were recovered from the water. The woman was neatly dressed. She said she was 72 years of age, and did not want to live. She seems to be a woman of refinement.

The Problem Of Demobilization

Questions for the Unions to Solve Now.

Concern for the problems of demobilization continues (says the quarterly report of the Management Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions). Criticism of the Government's delay in formulating proposals loses point in face of Labour's similar inactivity. No general or reasonably clear understanding has been reached in respect of women's trade organization, yet women will be the most important factor in the after-war problem of employment and wages. She will inevitably lower the general average of men's wages unless very definite steps are taken to develop within her the spirit and power of resistance.

"Evading the problem does not solve it, and the wisest thing the trade unions could do would be to set aside a portion of their time and money for this purpose. The woman is in the factory, she is working the machine, she is welding and brazing and she is doing these things in a manner which at present wins commendation from her employer and the factory inspector. She is doing these things at rates which are lower than men's rates.

"Is she to continue on this work? If so, is she to continue at lower rates? Or, will the trade unions take the matter in hand and help her to organize? These are questions that should be answered now."

1,500,000 WORKERS TO ASK FOR MORE PAY.

London, September 19.—Unless the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress obtains from the government at an early date the assurance that steps have been taken either to control food prices or to fix maximum prices a large body of trade unionists will present to the government a request for a uniform advance in wages, says the Central News Agency.

The movement is said to have the support of 1,500,000 workers outside of those whose wages are regulated or have been adjusted recently to meet the high cost of living.

Berlin, September 19.—The employees of all the big German banks held a special meeting to-day to discuss the cost of living. They adopted unanimously a resolution asking the general directorate of the Association of German Bank Officials to request the directors of all Berlin banks for an appreciable increase in salaries in order that the employees may be able to make both ends meet.

CANADA STANDS WHERE ENGLAND STOOD YEAR AGO

"We have now reached the point which England had reached a year ago. All who are in a position to judge are agreed that voluntary enlistment has about reached its end. The willing have already offered themselves; the unwilling have become used to their position and have steeled themselves against argument. The recruiting meetings are now melancholy affairs. Everything is being done that can be done to attract men; so much is being done that one wonders whether it is not a waste of money, as it is certainly a waste of valuable men, to spend it thus in trying to reach those who do not want to be reached. Ingenuity of every kind has been exercised in this work. The Press have done nobly in seconding the efforts of the recruiting officers, and now the result is practically nil. The recruits in this great city are coming in at the rate of a few a day, but the picture shows, the theatres, the poolrooms and the baseball and lacrosse parks are filled with young men upon whom the recruiting authorities can make no impression. And that is not to be wondered at, when the police have distinguished themselves by trying to arrest an officer in the execution of his duty as a servant of the King. Truly we are citizens of a great city!"

In what he stated at the outset was not a sermon, but the expression of his views upon conscription for Canada, Major, the Rev. Bruce Taylor, delivered a remarkable address at St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Montreal, on Sunday night.

His remarks were pointed and came straight from the shoulder.

"This is not a sermon," he said. "Were I going to take a text I would take the Song of Deborah, and merely quote the list of the tribes who were present and who stayed away from the battle which ended in the defeat of Sisera's hordes."

After some general remarks upon the nature of the war, and of the effects of conscription in England, Major Taylor dealt in detail with the system as applied to Canada, discussing the problem of recruiting and the difficulties placed in the way of recruiting officers by the Nationalists.

ARMAGEDDON, INDEED.

"Such a war as this," he said, "has never been known before in the history of the world. It is a deliberate attempt on the part of our enemies to gain the dominion of the world. Our great Empire has grown unconsciously by the energies of our people in the centuries when the blank spaces of the world were being filled up. And then in the latter years Germany comes forth and declares that hers is the right to rule because she has a civilization to give to the world finer than anything known before.

"This is a war in which on both sides not merely the armies of the nations, but the whole nations themselves, are involved. In former days a single battle among a few thousand men might settle the fate of a nation: an hour's fire altered the geography of Europe; a skirmish settled the fate of Canada. But now the battles rage on a front a thousand miles long, and continue without intermission for weeks.

"It is a war of exhaustion. Who can keep it up the longest? The calculation now is that the Allies have 250 men for every 100 the Central Powers can muster. Can we secure that our equipment and handling of it shall represent a like relative superiority and thus hasten the end? It is for this reason that every man is needed. Let no one take to himself the comfort that he will not be wanted or that he will be too late now to get into the firing line. Can we send such a stream of men and material that the enemy will get no rest, that his effectives will be kept in constant strain, that he will never know where the assault is going to break over his lines?

THE LONGER—THE HARDER.

"The sooner we can make the whole German people realize that the longer the conflict the harder the terms, the sooner we are likely to have our men back again. The Old Country has recognized the fact and has done what those who knew her best declared she could never do.

"Canada's, too, is a wonderful achievement. She has sent twice as many troops as Bernardi thought the whole British Empire could raise to fight her battles."

At this point the preacher made the remarks quoted at the outset of the report.

"If we make the Empire's cause ours," he went on, 'then our vision is to be bounded not by Drolet street and the rascals who have battened and fastened upon the community of which we are members, but in India, Egypt, Australia, the Strait Settlements, by South Africa and by every domain over which the Flag flies.

"Through many centuries the individual in our democratic society has been securing his rights; now for the first time the full measure of his responsibilities has been brought home to him.

UNFAIR SYSTEMS.

"There is the manifest unfairness of a system by which men with conscience and heroism give all that is dearest to them, that others who are without conscience or heroism may stay at home and scoop up the good things. I have already told you of the classic reply of the lady in Westmont, who was asked if neither of her sons, both unmarried, was going to the front. Her reply was, 'No! Why should they? They both have good jobs.' And why should other men upon whom the burden of the times had laid heavy, married men with young families, go and pour out blood and life that these two slackers should be kept in their good jobs? The voluntary system is splendid. A wonderful test of character. But there comes a time when we need to say that we are not going to allow this tremendous burden to fall all on the willing horse, a point when the unwilling horse must be made to pull. And when we think of of our hooligans and corner boys, of the multitudes growing up within our own civilization too nothing save a life of vice and crime, we shall surely not condemn a system which says to all: 'You must learn that your country has a claim on you.'

"The fact that Canada has been so ready to give hospitality to so many of other nationalities makes the situation more difficult than it is in Australia (where, as the preacher remarked, they have come to the same crisis in recruiting as Canada). A man cannot have two citizenships at the same time, as our neighbors to the south of us are beginning to discover. If a man uses British liberty he must serve the Empire's cause.

QUEBEC'S SHOWING.

"The real difficulty in the question of conscription is reached when it is asked what the effect of such a measure would be, were it passed upon the French-Canadian population. It is said that it would be impossible to put the measure into force against the determined opposition of so great a number of the population of Canada. But before any such statement as that is accepted it must be recalled that the French-Canadians have already played no small part in the war. There is a regiment at the front, the 22nd battalion, which is entirely French-Canadian, and this battalion has gained a name inferior to that of no Canadian regiment, not even the Princess Pats. The Germans who hold the lines opposite to them have good reason to remember them. I heard a major of this battalion declare himself in favor of conscription the other day, and I feel sure he was voicing the opinion of hundreds of his brave fellows in the field.

"But it is the case that French-Canadians have not enlisted in anything like the numbers that might have been expected, considering that they form so large a proportion of the population. Quebec makes a poor showing with the other provinces, and the grave feature is that the hanging back of so many is not merely a decision of individuals but a policy furthered by the Nationalists.

"The French are told that this is not their quarrel; they are advised to stay at home and let the business be fought out by the British element. In one place where a recruiting meeting was being held the men were advised not to attend or to enlist as they would possibly be needed to repel an invasion from the United States!

"If there be behind this reluctance the idea that by holding back at present and allowing the British element to pay for victory with its blood, a very grave situation is being created. For after this war there will be a rush to Canada of those who left her shores at the call of duty, as well as a great fresh immigration of men of adventurous type to whom the old settled life will be too tame. These men will be in no mind to have their policies dictated to by those who hung back in the universal crisis. The true Nationalists are those who strive to maintain the Dominion of Canada by maintaining the Empire. Any other nationalism is a dream and fatuity.

"The present system, under which the brave fight for the cowards," the preacher concluded, "the willing for the unwilling, the native born for the stranger, places too great a strain upon the readiness that every true citizen has to sacrifice himself for his country. As a private said a while ago at a recruiting party to some interrupter who had a grievance to air: 'I do not mind fighting for my King and country, but I am blessed sorry to think I am fighting for a thing like you.'"

Cold boiled rice added to stewed tomatoes and seasoned with minced peppers, onion, salt and pepper, makes a savory dish which is served with chops.

That Feeling of Satisfaction—knowing you got your money's worth goes with every pair of J. & K. SHOES

Were you ever "talked into" a pair of boots?

And found that the harder you tried to "break them in," the more you tortured your feet. And before they were worn out, you probably had to throw them away.

It's different with our shoes; they make friends with your feet the minute you put them on. Instead of burning, aching feet that tire you out, every step is a pleasure in J. & K. Shoes. You can walk in them all day.

It's true economy to buy J. & K. Boots—the ones that fit the arch—require no breaking in—and stay comfortable.

"WONDERFUL TRIBUTE" TO CHURCH UNION

"We cannot deprive those people of the bread of life," said Rev. Mr. Brown. Then there is the foreign problem. In Montreal there are one hundred thousand people who speak neither French or English, and yet they stand beside us at the ballot box. These people must be looked after or our moral standard will be lowered. In the north country and the West we have sought to extend our activities by co-operating with the Presbyterians. Our method is to take over certain areas exclusively, and the Presbyterians do the same. By that means we are enabled to cover a much larger area and save thousands of dollars that would otherwise be expended if both denominations sought to operate in the one field. The speaker expressed the hope that this would be a banner year for the conference.

Foreign Missions.

A very interesting address on foreign mission work was given by the Rev. G. G. Harris, a returned missionary from China. The speaker spoke of the vast extent of the work in China, and expressed the hope that the people at home would remember the heathen abroad, and assist in a practical way, the work that is being carried out by the missionaries.

Ten Per Cent. Increase.

At the close of the meeting the District pledged itself to increase the missionary givings for the year by ten per cent. It is worthy of note that the Methodist Church during the second year of the war increased its offerings for missionary work by twelve thousand dollars.

It was announced that the Boys' Work Conference will be held in Lindsay this year on the 27th, 28th, and 29th of December. The local churches are invited to send a large delegation.

SIX BODIES OF QUEBEC BRIDGE VICTIMS FOUND

Search Being Actively Prosecuted—Preliminary Inquest Opened Yesterday Morning

QUEBEC, Sept. 20.—The river is fast giving up the bodies of the victims of the Quebec Bridge disaster. Up to nine o'clock yesterday morning six bodies have been recovered, three of which have been identified. On Sunday the body of Cyrile Bernier was recovered; Monday morning that of A. Jourdanais, of Napierville, was found and Monday afternoon the body of Cleophas Cadoret, of Sillery, was found in New Liverpool.

Tuesday morning a river schooner arrived towing a body found floating down the river. This one is supposed to be that of Charles Sweeney, of Lachine. The two other victims recovered, one at Levis and the other near Ste Anne de Beaupre, are not yet identified.

With six bodies to open the inquest upon, initial proceedings of inquiry into the disaster were taken yesterday by Coroner Jolicoeur, who swore in a jury of competent men at Moisan's Morgue, where most of the bodies recovered have been taken.

The widest scope will be given the coroner's inquest, and not only will Coroner Jolicoeur go through the ordinary course and formula of a coroner's inquest, but extensive researches will be directed to find the exact cause of the disaster. Expert advice will be at hand at the inquest to help establish the cause of the accident to the centre span of the bridge, and men of mechanical and engineering training will be heard.

Yesterday's inquest will be immediately followed to-day by a more extensive investigation that will be held at the Court House with the Attorney-General, the coroner directing the researches.

Music & Drama

THE BLACK FEATHER.

Albert Brown, the clever young comedian, who scored such a big hit here last year in the role of Christopher Brent, the English secret service agent in "The White Feather," won fresh laurels at the Grand last night in the stirring comedy drama, "The Black Feather," the work of a Canadian dramatist, Mr. W. A. Treymane.

The play is in four acts, the setting for three of which is laid in the apartments of a young Canadian in the diplomatic service in London, while the other is in the corner of a country estate in England. The episodes occur during the summer of 1914, and deal with the spy system of the Central powers in its efforts to obtain messages intended for the British ambassador to Serbia before they leave England. The spies, two of the Austrian nobility and the son of a spy in Alsace-Lorraine, at the time of the Franco-Prussian war, are outwitted by a clever young Englishman, who accomplishes his work in the secret-service while acting the part of the typical monocled London Johnnie.

Throughout the main plot there is the love story of Dick Kent, the secret service man, and Evelyn Thornton, the sister of the young Canadian, who is saved by him from disgrace at the hands of the Austrian countess, who breaks her heart while winning that of her victim in order to obtain information for her country.

As Dick Kent, Mr. Brown had a role identical with that which he handled so artistically last year. Apparently an idler, known only as the "son of his father," in reality he is a shrewd, clever secret agent who baffles the foreign spies with his usual skill and incidentally keeps the audience in roars of laughter with his cheery nonsense. It was a delightful performance on the part of Mr. Brown and confirmed the splendid impression he made on his previous visits. He is well supported by a capable company and the play has been given a lavish setting. "The Black Feather" is good all the way.

Drifts 7 Miles In a Burning Balloon

WISCONSIN AERONAUT'S PLIGHT NOT LEARNED UNTIL HE RETURNS LIMPING TO THE STARTING PLACE

Milwaukee, Wis., September 19. — Only the fact that the wind was off the lake saved M. L. Tinney, aeronaut of the State Fair, from death, when his balloon caught fire. He drifted helplessly for seven miles before coming to earth.

The strange part of Tinney's experience was that none in the thousands in the fair grounds realised his narrow escape from death until he limped into the park exhausted, with his hair and eyebrows burned off and his clothing in tatters.

ONE-LEGGED MAN BAGS FIVE PLANES

And His Artificial Leg Was Smashed in a Late Encounter.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Flight-Lieut. De-Rochefort, who brought down his sixth German machine on Saturday, has been posted as missing. Flight-Adjt. Tarascon, who was mentioned in yesterday's official statement by the War Office as having brought down his fifth enemy machine, has only one leg. The other was amputated as a result of an aeroplane accident prior to the war. Adjutant Tarascon's artificial leg was smashed by a shell splinter during one of his latest daring flights.

Subscriptions To Loan Already 75 Millions

Ottawa, September 19. — Subscriptions to the Canadian war loan already amount to considerably over 75 million dollars and there is no doubt but that the loan will be very considerably over subscribed.

It is quite possible that the same policy will be pursued this time as in the case of the first loan, and the issue be increased to perhaps $150,000,000, in order to take up the subscriptions offered. In any event, subscriptions from the general public will be given priority of allotment over those of banks and other big corporations. The Minister of Finance announced to-day that before the subscriptions for the war loan were opened on the 12th inst., the chartered banks of Canada had agreed to subscribe fifty millions to the loan. Each bank is subscribing approximately 46 per cent. of its paid up capital.

The subscriptions are as follows:

Bank of Montreal, $7,091,800; Quebec Bank, $1,211,900; Bank of Nova Scotia, $2,880,500; British North America, $2,156,500; Bank of Toronto, $2,215,600; Molsons Bank, $1,772,400; La Banque Nationale, $886,200; Merchants' Bank, $3,101,800; La Banque Provinciale, $443,000; Union Bank, $2,215,600; Bank of Commerce, $6,647,000; Royal Bank, $5,229,700; Dominion Bank, $2,658,800; Bank of Hamilton, $1,329,300; Standard Bank, $1,329,300; Banque d' Hochelaga, $1,772,400; Bank of Ottawa, $1,772,400; Imperial Bank, $3,101,900; Home Bank, $862,400; Northern Crown Bank, $632,900; Sterling Bank, $534,800; Weyburn Security Bank, $154,000.

In addition to the 50 million subscription of the banks, insurance companies, Provinces, municipalities, and other large investors have already taken up about twenty millions.

Lifeless Body Of Aged Culloden Man Is Found Hanging

Family of J. Fewster Can Ascribe No Reason For Rash Deed.

TILLSONBURG, Sept. 20.—The lifeless body of J. Fewster was found hanging by a rope in his barn near Culloden by other members of the family. It is assumed that he committed suicide and no cause can be given for his rash act, as he was in apparent good health and spirits.

He was 64 years and 11 months old.

PARALYZED AS RESULT OF FALL FROM A TREE

ROBT. ANDREWS OF SODUS SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN AT WORK FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT.

Marion, September 20.—Robert Andrews of Sodus, an employee of the Marion Electric Light Company, fell from a tree in front of the residence of L. W. Snyder of Union street, cutting his head and severely injuring his spine.

Andrews was resting on a limb, which gave way, precipitating him to the ground. In his descent he struck on another limb and then fell to the cement sidewalk. He was carried into the home of Mr. Snyder and Dr. Arthur Bessemer was summoned. The cut in his head was sewed. Upon examination it was found that he was paralysed from his waist down. It was impossible to say whether the spinal column was broken or suffered from concussion. A bed was made on the auto truck owned by S. B. Curtis and Andrews was taken to Sodus at noon. He is married and has two children.

$300.00 STOLEN FROM LABOURER

LINDSAY, Sept. 19. — A daring theft was perpetrated late Saturday or Sunday morning at the arsenal plant when a Russian labourer was deprived of his savings amounting to $300.

When retiring Saturday night the man placed his pants containing the wad under his pillow, and was surprised Sunday morning to find a slit across the pocket and the money missing. Chief Short was notified of the theft, and visited the bunk house where he interrogated a number of the labourers. They all had good fat wallets, but the Chief is satisfied that none of the labourers committed the theft.

Chief Short states that four of the Russian labourers at the bunk house had savings aggregating $7,015.

New Barge Canal Into The States Longest of Kind

Two new all-water routes from Canada to New York will be available when the barge canal in New York State, the largest of its kind in the world, is opened.

This canal, which, according to reports is rapidly approaching completion, consists of 440 miles of new canal construction, says Syren and Shipping, with 350 miles of intervening lakes and rivers, a total of 790 miles, passing through the most thickly populated manufacturing districts of the United States. The eastern end runs from the St. Lawrence, by the Richelieu River and Lake Champlain, the western from Lake Ontario to Oswego.

There are fifty-seven locks, the most important of which is a flight of five at Waterford, giving 169 feet lift, the greatest lift of any locks in the world, being twice that of the Panama Canal locks. The minimum bottom width is 75 feet, and depth 12

FAR TOO MANY SUBALTERNS

Hundreds Qualify for Service, But Cannot Get Appointments.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—Canada is surfeited with subaltern officers. The Militia Department reported that there are two thousand of them. They have enlisted and qualified for commissions, but cannot get attached to regiments. What to do with them is the problem, especially as few new units are being organized.

Recently about five hundred were sent overseas, and many of them went to France in short order. Activities at the front may call for more at any time, but as matters now stand the proportion of officers is away in excess of requirements at home.

PETERBORO HARDWARE WILL HANDLE THE GURNEY STOVES

Local Hardware Company is in a Position to Supply Anything in the Way of Stove Value and Stove Quality—A Few of the Leaders.

There are few people if any who have not heard of the Peterborough Hardware and the Gurney Foundry Company. The names of both firms have long been associated with a class of goods that represent the acme of both quality and value. Therefore it should not surprise anyone to learn that the Peterborough Hardware Company in deciding to launch into the stove business should select the goods manufactured by the Gurney Stove Company of Toronto. This Company needs no introduction to the buying public. The Company manufactured stoves twenty years before Confederation and are still in the ring, only on a much larger scale. Incidentally it might be mentioned that this season for the first time in the history of the firm, the Peterborough Hardware Company has added a stove department to their well equipped store and are now in an enviable position to meet the needs of the community for stove value and stove quality. The Company is in a position to save the purchaser anywhere from five to twenty dollars on every stove sold, and in addition will guarantee each stove for a period of one hundred days.

Fuel Economizer.

The stoves are equipped with a special fuel economizer that not only effect a substantial saving in fuel, but can be as easily handled by the experienced housekeeper as the beginner.

A big share of the family income goes for food—food that should give the family back 100 p.c. in nourishment — body warmth — pleasurable meals—contentment. To accomplish this, the food must be selected, and then, well prepared. The kitchen is really a little factory that receives raw material from the butcher and the grocer, and the finished product should be good meals—the kind that turns kiddies into thriving young men and women. A pretty important kind of factory, is a kitchen. A factory often wastes 10 p.c. of its raw material for one reason or another. Supposing the kitchen spoils one tenth of the supplies, for one reason or another, it either comes out of the family savings account, or the family lacks that much nourishment. And yet fairly intelligent people buy a poor stove to save $10.00. Families make the old stove do when it is wasting $80.00 worth of nourishment every year, because it is not fit for the job.

A Leader.

The Peterborough Hardware Company is featuring a leader in the form of a big steel range that is adapted to farm use. It is an excellent article. Another range is specially adapted to city use. It possesses all the admirable features of a good stove and is fitted with the famous Gurney "Economizer." Another line is fitted with a gas section making a combination coal and gas range.

Every stove represents maximum value, and the best the money will buy anywhere.

THE STORE WITH EXCLUSIVE STYLES

Barrie's FURRIERS

LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR DEPARTMENT

¶ An impression appears to have gained credence in some quarters that this department only carries the Higher Grade Garments in SUITS, COATS, DRESSES, WAISTS and SKIRTS, and while this may be and as a matter of fact is actually true in a general sense, on the other hand the BARRIE policy is to cater for all tastes and pockets, exactly the same care being exercised in the selection of the more reasonably priced garments as in the case with the more expensive ones.

¶ Further, a lady desiring, say for example a suit at $15.00, $20.00 or $25.00 is absolutely certain of receiving just the same measure of courtesy and attention as a lady buying one at $60.00 or $70.00.

¶ Several ladies visiting the store for the first time have commented on this fact remarking also that Barrie's Limited is one of the prettiest and best equipped stores in Canada while the attention and service given is beyond question.

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.

BUT—

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.

Complete and absolute Family protection may be had by your taking a policy in THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA—The LEADING CANADIAN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

MONAGHAN RATEPAYERS PROTEST VIGOROUSLY AGAINST SITE OF CITY'S SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT

Aroused by Decision of the Provincial Board of Health Public Meeting Last Nigh Demands That Compensation Should be Provided for Prospective Depreciation of Property Values.

North Monaghan's opposition to the location of the city's sewage disposal plant on the Scott and Rutherford properties is gathering force. The fact that the Provincial Board of Health has formally sanctioned and authorized the selection of this site seems to have caused but little discouragement among the ratepayers of the Township. The effect upon their determination has been quite the reverse, judging by last night's indignation meeting in St. George's Hall, Braidwood Avenue. Reeve McIntosh looked out upon a crowd that filled the building to the door when he called the meeting to order and briefly outlined its purpose. But it was in the addresses and their reception by the audience that the township's temper was revealed. The meeting left the impression that if their new attempts fail to prevent the location of the plant on the site selected, the Monaghan ratepayers will demand compensation for expected depreciation of property values.

The speakers included Reeve McIntosh, ex-Reeve W. G. Howden, John Holmes and Mrs. W. C. Simmons, the latter representing the mothers of that section of the Township. Mrs. Simmons, in a rather peppery speech stated that the sewage disposal plant would be an entirely undesirable fixture around which the children would play.

Sweeping Resolution.

The meeting unanimously adopted the following resolution:

Moved by John Holmes, seconded by Alex. Gordon.

That the resident ratepayers of the Township of North Monaghan, in the County of Peterborough, assembled in public meeting, in the Township of North Monaghan, on Tuesday evening, September 19th, 1916, do enter a protest against the action of the Provincial Board of Health in authorizing the city of Peterborough for its own purposes to construct, erect, operate and maintain a sewage disposal plant in the Township of North Monaghan, and that the said ratepayers do further protest that in any event the place authorized by the Provincial Board of Health is not, having regard to the interest of the Township, and the interests of the residents, a proper and suitable place; the protest of said ratepayers being based on the following, among other grounds:

1.—That a sewage disposal plant in any municipality mut be necessarily offensive to residents by reason of its existence, its possible odors, and other objectionable features, and that such offensiveness is not necessarily based upon danger to health or personal discomfort.

2. That the establishment of any sewage disposal plant necessarily involves loss to the rural municipality and its property owners by reason of the following facts:

(a) The property taken over by the city municipality for the site of such sewage disposal works, although situated possibly in the centre, or other important part of the rural municipality, immediately becomes exempt from taxes on the part of the rural municipality, to the consequent loss and damage of such rural municipality.

(b) The surrounding property becomes depreciated constituting not only a loss to the property owners, but creating a further loss in taxable values to the rural municipality.

3. That any legislation which enables a city municipality for its own purposes to invade a rural municipality necessarily requires that the officials, who are vested with power to authorize such act, should only do so after the fullest investigation, and after full opportunity is afforded to the rural municipality and its residents and property owners to raise their objections or suggest alternative plans.

4. That the place selected is in a part of the Township of North Monaghan rapidly growing in population, and that the selection of such locality is calculated to retard the growth of population in the said Township, and to depreciate the taxable values of surrounding properties to the loss of the rural municipality and its residents.

5. That the residents of the Township had no sufficient and proper opportunity to raise their objections, and that the notice of the Hearing did not set forth the location in the said Township of such Sewage Disposal plant.

Want Compensation.

6. That in any event no permission should be given to a city municipality to establish for its own benefit such a sewage disposal plant in a rural municipality to the loss, detriment and injury of the rural municipality and its residents unless proper provision is made by the Order granting such permission providing:

(a) Full compensation to the rural municipality for its present and future losses in taxes derivable or reasonably expected to be deprived from the property taken over by the city for such disposal plant, and for such present and future losses of taxes caused to the Township by reason of the necessary depreciation of adjoining property or other nearby properties appreciably affected.

(b) Full compensation to the property owners adjoining, and to property owners owning property so near the disposal plant as to be necessarily depreciated in value.

7. That in determining the amount of compensation to be paid to property owners the authorities granting permission for the construction of such sewage disposal plant, or the Legislature, should lay down such principles to all property owners injured, whether or not under the present state of the law damages to such properties would ordinarily be held to be the subject of compensation.

Protest to Premier.

And be it resolved that a copy of this protest be forwarded to the Hon. W. H. Hearst, the Premier of the Province of Ontario; George A. Gillespie, M.P.P., James Thompson, M.P.P., the Chairman, J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Officer Provincial Board of Health, the Reeve of the Township of North Monaghan, and the Warden of the County of Peterborough, and that they be requested to take such steps as will protect the rights and properties of this and other municipalities that may be affected by the construction of a sewage disposal plant.

And be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Mayor of the City of Peterborough.

A Working Committee.

That the Township's protest and demand should be forwarded to the influential authorities, and that future action should be assured, the following committee was elected:—John Holmes, W. G. Howden, Alex. Gordon, W. J. Byers, Albert Sanders, C. N. Mills, Geo. Evans, Mrs. Jas. O'Shea, Mrs. W. C. Simmons, A. W. Archibald, J. A. Armour, Thos. Arnott and F. H. Rowan.

SAYS BRITAIN IS PROUD OF CANADA'S WAR WORK

Duke of Devonshire, New Governor-General, Honored by Freemasons.

LONDON, Sept. 19.— The Duke of Devonshire, being Provincial Grand Master of Derbyshire Freemasons, was presented with a testimonial. The Duke said his task as Governor-General of Canada required energy and courage. With the good will of home friends and the hope of a friendly reception in Canada, he trusted to have the strength and good sense to make the most of his opportunities. We were passing through anxious times. He hoped out of all good would come, and that we would resolve never to allow the outrage which Germany perpetrated to be repeated. That was the message he would take to Canada, of whose generous share Britain was proud.

A First Trip To The Trenches

BY "BOMBARDIER"

The following narrative of a nocturnal trip to the front trenches was written by Bombadier Hunter Lewis of the 36rd Battery, son of Rev. J P. Lewis of Pontypool, and is an interesting impression of the experience of being under fire after dark in a first forward excursion:

Bombardier you are to accompany the forward observing officer to the trenches to-night. Report at his quarters with twenty-four hours' rations at nine o'clock. It was the Sergt-Major who spoke and in the army an order is—well it's an order, and woe unto him who dares to hesitate or disobey.

In this instance, however, the Bombardier had no inclination to disobey for this was a new experience and new experiences are the main interest in life to the Canadian soldier.

Accordingly, in fifteen minutes time see the Bombardier, carrying his meagre supply of comforts, a great coat, a waterbottle and a chunk of bread and another of cheese, with gas helmet slung over his shoulder and steel helmet on his head, picking his way through the ruins to the sandbagged tunnels which the officer calls home.

As dusk turns into the shades of night the two set out on a path all too well within the range of German artillery. When the carnage of war is over these same fields will be places of interest to tourists and the paths they tread so briskly Belgian lovers once idled over. But now bare necessity reigns and it is not wise to loiter. Also two others wait anxiously in the trenches to be relieved, because, during the last twenty-four hours they have had little sleep or nourishment.

Now the two dim figures go over the sky-line zig-zagging from one side of the narrow trail to the other in order to avoid the shell-holes and debris.

Hark! there goes a German gun. Evidently the Hun is wide awake and instinctively we look in his direction. Yes, he's firing at this road. Hear the whiss as the shell draws rapidly near and we wonder for the safety of the two artillerymen.

But our worry is wasted, for a glance assures us that they have heard the shell too, and evidently disappeared from the face of the earth. A second later the shell burst harmlessly fifty yards up the road, and, as soon as the shrapnel has ceased to fly two heads appear from the depths of a shell-hole by the side of the road and the officer and the bombardier climb out as unconcernedly as though they had but stopped to quench their thirst.

Almost before they have reached their feet there comes another report, and another shell speeds toward them. "It's going to burst the same place" we say, but they are wiser than we in the ways of the invader and back they go to their shell-hole Sure enough they were right, for this time the shell burst within ten yards, but low, and soon we are relieved to see them emerge and continue their journey, scarcely giving a thought to the fact that if there hadn't been a shell hole—.

"That's good shoooting, sir, two right on the path. Guess they know that infantry is coming up to-night, thus spoke the bombardier, still brushing the dirt from his clothes. "Darn good, indeed," returned the officer, performing the same operations "but it has nothing on us". You should have seen the way we ripped up their trenches yesterday."

Soon the two clamber over a deserted parapet—of sand bags—the second line of trenches, and look around them, for now they are getting closer. Here the shell holes are thicker and that rat-a-tat-tat of machine guns sounds almost at their elbows. After each volley the bombardier looks around and then at himself in a wondering sort of way, as though he were surprised to find himself still alive, for it must be confessed that he rather expects to at least receive a "blighty." However, he is much relieved to find out that it is his own guns that sound so near.

On through the darkness they go and sometimes they glance at the little crosses that are scattered here and there, marking the last stand of some young brave. But what have they halted for, and why do they stand so still. Surely that rocket soaring upwards does not frighten them. But now we see. The rocket has burst and a ghastly white flare has caressed the ground showing up any slightest move. Scarcely has it dropped when they are started again, only to be halted time after time by the same thing. At last they have come so close to the flares that they have to squat down when one rises, for it is almost as bright as day.

Oh! here comes another, but the bombardier slips on the muddy edge of a half-filled shell hole, lurches to regain his balance and saves just in time too, for a half dozen little whines fill the air over him and he drops flat on his face. Only too well he knows that a machine gun is a nasty thing, the most dreaded of all the machinations of war. As soon as the flare has dropped they hurry with what care they can out of that place, for report has it that a machine gun bullet is very hard on the human system. At any rate it is evidently hard on the nerves for the bombardier appears none tooo comfortable and keeps a wary look out for shell holes handy to his path. Also, for some unaccountable reason the rattle of a German gun seems to make him think of home. You never can tell—maybe he would rather be there.

His anxiety increases as he follows the officer through a net-work of paths. Surely they can't have passed the Canadian trenches and be heading for the Germans. But no "Halt. who are you" rings in a determined voice from a trench just ahead, and a long slender shining thing urges a ready answer. Then, when explanations are made, "Pass" and they go over the reserve trenches and walk along in the rear of dim lines of sand bags for half a mile, and we wonder why the younger of the pair keeps looking furtively at them between flares. Surely he wouldn't rather be in them instead of walking fearlessly (?) along behind. But maybe he would, as some one has said, "You never can understand human nature"

At last they switch in, are "halted and passed" by the sentry, clamber over the trench and drop to comparative safety. One of them gives vent to a big sigh of relief—I wonder which.

Yours,

THE BOMBARDIER

SAYS PRISONERS GET THE PARCELS

Mrs. Rivers Bulkeley Says Proof Ample —One of Good Qualities Germans Show

Mrs. Rivers Bulkeley, the Convenor of the "Prisoners of War" Department of the Canadian Red Cross Society in England, has informed Her Royal Highness that she has received many inquiries concerning the safe delivery of parcels sent by the "Prisoners of War" Department and she has always been able to give ample proof that the prisoners have received the parcels, unopened and in perfect condition.

About twenty Canadians are now interned at Murren, Switzerland and they have written most grateful letters for the parcels sent to them, when they were prisoners in Germany.

Each parcel is packed in double cardboard boxes, and then in strong brown paper, by the Civil Service stores, London, and returned prisoners have given their assurance that, in almost every case, the Red Cross parcels are not opened from the time they leave the Civil Service Stores until they are opened in their presence in the camps in Germany.

They strongly urge the Red Cross Society to continue sending as much food as possible as their comrades left in Germany, and they say that they are almost entirely dependent on their parcels from home. With the tightening of the blockade there seems no doubt that food conditions in Germany are getting worse all the time, and of course, the prisoners suffer first. Further efforts to send them as much as possible, should therefore be made, trusting that the one good quality the Germans have displayed, viz; their honesty in delivering the parcels, will continue.

Bread, which formerly was sent from Switzerland is now specially made in England, and prisoners acknowledge the receipt of this bread in excellent condition.

End of the War and Downfall Of Militarism Are In Sight

While it is idle to speculate as to the probable duration of the war, it requires no gift of prophecy to forecast the outcome. For the first two years, practically, the factors that make for decisive victory were wanting on both sides. Toward the end of the second year the Allies had passed the stalemate stage and were in a position to put to the test the arrogant boasts of the enemy that he purposed holding permanently the occupied territory from which the Allies were unable to dislodge him. In the third year all doubt as to the final issue is swallowed up in the definite assurance of victory for the Allied armies. After twenty-five months of war Germany finds her allies hard pressed, her enemies in the field, reinforced by Roumania, on the offensive in every important sphere of action, and dealing staggering blows that presage irretrievable disaster for the military power on which for nearly half a century Germany has rested her Imperial prestige in Europe and throughout the world.

The causes that have conspired to rob Germany of the speedy and overwhelming victory for which forty years of preparedness had paved the way add a touch of glamour and romance to one of the bloodiest chapters in military annals. The shadows of defeat crossed the path of the Kaiser's armies before a shot had been fired, when, in face of the whole world, Germany renounced her moral obligations as a civilized power and unsheathed the sword of the barbarian. From that hour defeat was inevitable, for it is as true to-day as it was in the days of the great Napoleon that moral force is the real power behind the guns. The moral degeneracy which has proved mightier than the sword in bringing about the downfall of Germany is painted in none too vivid colours by one who has studied German psychology, and whose detestation of the enemy's crimes against humanity does not blind him to the virtues of bravery and heroism, in fact of certain death, that characterize the German soldier on the field of battle. Maeterlinck, the great Belgian writer, will not be accused of reckless extravagance when he says:

"We have to do with the strangest of enemies. He has knowingly and deliberately, while in the full possession of his faculties and without necessity or excuse, revived all the crimes which we supposed to be forever buried in the barbarous past. He has trampled under foot all the precepts which man had so painfully won from the cruel darkness of his beginners; he has violated all the laws of justice, humanity, loyalty, and honour, from the highest, which are almost god-like, to the simplest, the most elementary, which still belong to the lower worlds. There is no longer any doubt on this point: It has been proved over and over again until we have attained a final certitude."

This it is that pronounced the doom of the Hohenzollern tyranny in Europe and decided the issues af war: that Germany lacked what the Allies, with all their military disadvantages, possesesd—a righteous cause and the moral force that strengthens the arm which wields the sword of justice. When Germany was overrunning Belgium and northern France, despoiling the homes and defiling the sacred places of an unsuspecting people, Fate was tracing in indelible characters the decree of outraged humanity and the verdict of history regarding the accursed system that has brought such desolation and woe to European nations.

Military preparedness has proved unavailing in the case of Germany, and this, perhaps, is the most striking feature of the whole war. Rarely, if ever, in the history of the world has humanity risen to such a high level of heroism and selfsacrifice as that reached by the Allied nations as they felt the foundations of civilization crumbling beneath their feet. From every walk in life sprang armies of heroes, turning their backs on the things that are accounted dear in this world that the plague of German militarism might be destroyed forever, and the rights of nations safeguarded and maintained against the tyranny of armed aggressors. Greater than the military power which it envoked, because of more permanent value to humanity, is the moral consciousness that has been awakened by the challenge of the Hohenzollerns. This, not the military uprising of outraged Europe in the fact of an unparalleled danger, is the central fact of the Great War, and one that will stand out in the records of this terrible conflict when the names of the battles are forgotten. But military efficiency was not wanting where the moral courage of the people rose higher and higher. The nations which German efficiency had indexed as decadent have overtaken and passed in military efficiency the greatest military power in the world. This was not accomplished in a day or a year, or without untold sacrifices. But the goal has been reached. Germany is now among the decadent nations of Europe. Her military power has been broken on every front. The day of reckoning is at hand.

Canada can look back with pride to the bloody salient of Ypres, where German guns and bayonets attempted in vain to force a way to Calais. Generations unborn will recall with deepest emotion the memory of the brave Canadian dead that sleep on European soil. But we owe it to their memory to see that there is no slackening in our national efforts to aid in the crushing defeat of the foe. Reinforcements are required to keep the Canadian troops up to fighting strength. The nation must continue to mobilize its resources and to put forth its utmost strength so that the victory, already assured, will prove so decisive that the menace of German barbarism may never again raise its envenomed head in Central Europe.—The Globe.

RUN ON CHICAGO BANK CONTINUES

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Police were called to-day to handle a crowd of depositors, which continued the run on the state bank of Schiff and Company despite the assurance of its officials that the institution is solvent.

The run started because of alarm spread by the collapse of three private banks last week. Officials of the Schiff Bank said that $80,000 was paid out and that the demand of every depositor of $1,000,000 according to an audit Saturday.

A NEW WAY TO KILL RATS

A new way to kill the rats which infest the trenches is reported by a South African officer writing from France. He says "We found one of our men putting a bit of cheese on his bayonett and firing a rifle every time a rat started to eat it."

There is said to be one rat to every acre of land in England and Wales, causing an annual loss to farmers that is estimated at $75,000,000.

Winning Friends by Telephone

"I HAVE never met that young man face to face," said a business man recently, as he hung up his receiver after a telephone conversation; "but the way he talks over the telephone is typical of the whole organization of that house. They always answer every question in a polite and courteous manner. They never keep you waiting unnecessarily. They all seem to take a personal interest in what you have to say, and you can be sure that your telephone requests will have the most careful attention."

Isn't such an endorsement of your house by those who deal with you by telephone a valuable business asset?

It is well worth while to make sure every employee in your organization appreciates the value to himself and to your house of telephone courtesy.

Loafs At $1,800 Per Month
Still Ganzel Is Not Happy

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 20.—John Ganzel is getting $1,800 per month for loafing—but John isn't wildly happy about it.

"I've spent every summer of my adult life in working, and I can't get quite used to this 'taking it easy' idea," says John. "I'd like to handle a ball club again."

John managed the Rochester Internationals until along toward the latter part of the 1915 season. Then Lee Magee quit his job as pilot of the Brooklyn Feds and the Ward family hired John at $7,800 per season.

The Feds are no more—but that contract is. It was a personal agreement between Ganzel and the late Robert B. Ward, and it won't expire until the end of the 1917 season, meaning that John is going to get $15,000 for doing nothing.

"But I reiterate that I'd rather work than merely drop around to the Ward factory twice a month and collect the mazuma," declares John.

BILLIARD GAME ROWDY AFFAIR IN DAYS OF OLD

Commenting on billiard players past and present George Slosson, now with the City club of Boston, asserts that the players of to-day take their contests more seriously than those of twenty years ago. While the rivalry was strong and the professionals tried just as hard to beat each other as they do now, the feeling is not as good as it was then.

The veteran did not wish to convey the idea there were no scrappy matches and instanced two he played with the late Maurice Vignaux, who died last February at Monte Carlo.

Argument Over Shot.

The first of these was played at the Grand hotel, Paris, in April, 1880, at the champion's game. Slosson had only 30 points to go, when the Frenchman had over 200. He missed a shot by a narrow margin, leaving the balls in good position for Slosson. Some friend of Vignaux's then shouted, "Claim the shot. Down with the American!" Vignaux took this cue and claimed the shot.

"You did not count," said the referee. 'Sit down.' Vignaux was persistent and the crowd began to gather around the table. Slosson was trying to shoot, but could not. The Vignaux followers were so threatening that the referee reversed his decision. Slosson and his few friends protested, but to no avail.

Police Keep Crowd Back.

Outside the hall there was intense excitement, a big crowd getting the score by bulletins. It required 100 policemen to keep the crowd in order. Despite the vigorous protest of Slosson, he was not allowed to shoot, and Vignaux ran the game out.

The second match was played at the Grand Hotel, Paris, in January, 1883, and was for a purse of $1,000 at the championship's game, the lines being 18x38. The referee was a prominent amateur named Rondeau, famed as a linguist and sportsman. Throughout the match Vignaux resorted to unsportsmanlike tactics. He walked around the table when Slosson was shooting and frequently made unreasonable claims.

Makes Frenchman Quit.

On the final night he was particularly active and Slosson appealed to the referee, who made the Frenchman desist. Slosson won, 3,000 to 2,865, it being the first victory scored abroad by an American player in public match.

The following day Slosson called to see William St. Martin, who was well known in billiard circles and was the maker of a cushion much in demand. St. Martin was suffering from sciatica and could not attend the match. While Slosson was there Vignaux also called. Slosson's "good morning" was returned surlily by the Frenchman. On the way out Vignaux passed Referee Rondeau, who had called to see St Martin. Vignaux still sore from his defeat, made some insulting remarks to Rondeau which the latter resented and later sent his card to Vignaux.

This was ignored by the billiardist. Later Rondeau sent his seconds, but the duel never was fought.

HONUS WAGNER LAST OF PIRATES

With George Gibson gone, only Hans Wagner remains as a remnant of the 1909 machine that won the National league pennant and then downed Detroit in the world's series, writes David J. Davies in the Pittsburg Dispatch. Babe Adams, the hero of that series, was let go recently, and Gibson, who caught every game against the American league champions, follows his battery mate.

The first break in the membership of the 1909 crew came with the letting out of Bill Abstein, first baseman, and Victor Willis, pitcher, in 1910. Abstein incurred the displeasure of his teammates by making a foolish play in the sixth game at Detroit. He disobeyed orders in coming in from third on an infield hit, and was an easy out at the plate. Fred Clarke vowed then and there that Abstein would not play on the Pirate team again ,and he wasn't seen here after the series. Willis went to St. Louis, but didn't last long, and retired to his hotel in Delaware.

Maddox Sent to Kaws.

In 1911 Maddox was let go to the Kansas City team of the American association, from whence he drifted to Louisville, then Wichita, and is through as a big league player. Pat O'Connor was also sent to Kansas City in 1911, played with the St. Louis Nationals in 1914, the Pittsburg Federals in 1915, the Hartford, Conn. team this year, up to June 8, when he was let go.

In 1912 Deacon Phillippe, a great standby for the Pirates in the champion days of 1901, 1902, and 1903, went to the United States league as manager of the Pittsburg team, and is now running a cigar store in a hotel here. In the same year Tommy Leach and Albert Leifield were exchanged with Chicago for King Cole and Artie Hofman. Cole is dead, Hofman is out of the game, while Leifield is pitching for St. Paul, and Leach is managing Rochester in the International league

Traded to Phillies.

In 1913 Howard Camnitz and Bobby Byrne were sent to Philadelphia Inet change for Cozy Dolan, a trade th Fred Clarke always regretted. By is still with the Phillie, but Camn is through playing, while Dolan is in the American association.

In 1914 came the biggest hole in the old machine, when Jack Miller, Chief Wilson, Art Butler, Rube Robinson, and Cozy Dolan were exchanged with St. Louis for Bob Harmon, Mike Mowrey, and Ed. Konetchy. Every one knows how disastrous this turned out. Mowrey played so poorly that he was released outright, and Konetchy jumped to the Federals, Ham Hyatt was let go to the St. Louis Cardinals by the waiver route in 1915, and was sent to Chattanooga.

At the end of the 1915 season Fred Clarke resigned as manager of the Pirates, thus leaving only three original champions of 1909 on the roster—Wagner, Gibson, and Adams—and now the sole survivor of the old days is Wagner.

KING COBB TO LOSE CROWN

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 20.—Tyrus Cobb, for nine years the leading batsman of the American League, to-day conceded that Tris Speaker of the Cleveland club would be the 1916 champion. Speaker now has a margin of nearly 30 points over Cobb, according to unofficial averages. Cobb said it was a human impossibility for him to try to cut down this lead and at the same time to co-operate in team play to the fullest extent of his ability.

GOT MILLION BY SMOOTH SWINDLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Confession has been made by two members of the alleged syndicate of blackmailers, eight of whom are under arrest here, that operations of the swindlers netted then $1,000,000 during the last year, federal officials announced yesterday. The confessions, it was said, disclosed that the alleged band numbered sixty persons, a third of them women. A dispute over the division of spoils, it was said, led to the confessions. Arrest of a score or more members of the syndicate are expected within a week.

Deaf Man Earns Heroism Medal

Spends Whole Day Under Murderous Fire—Friends Hope He'll Get Reward.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Some day the stretcher bearers who are working steadily throughout the big advance ought to have a monument all to themselves. They have already earned it by their magnificent courage under terrific fire.

One officer of a Manchester "Pals" regiment which fought at Mametz and elsewhere is now in a London hospital, his life saved by the courage of the men who dashed through a curtain of fire to his rescue when he fell helplessly wounded.

He says that all the time the stretcher bearers were doing things which deserved the distinguished service medal, and he told of at least one man who he thinks has won it. This is a man so deaf that he was unfit for work in the trenches. He was a cheerful sort and the men liked the queer things that happened when he failed to hear an order.

Every one but the deaf man stood to. He took no notice.

"Stand to!" shouted the colonel. The deaf man turned pathetic eyes on him. "Is it true, sir," he asked anxiously, "that the government have stopped the rum ration?"

During the big battle he was ordered to the clearing station just behind the lines, but he spent the whole day under the murderous fire of the machine guns and the artillery between the first line trenches and a shorter trench far advanced in the most exposed part of the ground, picking up the wounded, twisting them on to his broad back, and staggering back with them under first until he reached a place of comparative safety.

Then he went back into the thick of it again. He was the one man in that toiling, devoted company who did not hear the awful clamor of the shells, but calmly faced a silent death. The "pals" whom he has so often amused are now hoping that he will get the medal he deserves.

that Dr. John R. Irwin of this town, who has served for a year with the Royal Medicals in France, was recently summoned with twenty others to Windsor Castle, where he received his decoration, the Military Cross, from the hands of the King. His Majesty shook hands with the men, who afterwards lunched at the castle and were royally feasted. Dr. Irwin was attached to the 2nd Worcestershire Regiment, and went down into the front line at midnight when the enemy blew up a mine, burying two of our men. He went down the shaft 30 feet and out 300 feet, bent double, excepting when he had to crawl on hands and knees, and spent an hour working with the men. He was immediately awarded the Military Cross.

Ottawa, September 18.—The Dominion Hospital Commission has been in receipt of recommendations that a larger number of Canadian wounded be brought back to the Dominion for treatment than are at present being brought over. There are upwards of 12,000 Canadians now in hospitals in Great Britain. So far only about 8,000 wounded Canadians have been returned. Of these most were unfit for further service and were destined for discharge. Some came back on special permits to finish courses which had been incompleted when they left, while in the case of others who failed to be appointed many returned when their working pay ceased. Five hundred men, including all these classes, were returned this week. It has been urged that the number be increased to include many Canadian patients now in hospital, and that amputation cases be included.

Questioned about these suggestions this afternoon, E. H. Scammell, the secretary of the Hospitals Commission, said: "Of the 12,000 Canadians now in the hospitals in England, a large percentage will go back to the front as soon as they have convalesced. It would be obviously unwise to suggest that these men be brought back for treatment in Canada, owing to the expense and the scarcity of transports. There are others who, owing to the serious nature of their wounds, could not travel. It is the class between these two that we have been taking. It is not considered advisable that men who would return to the front after convalescing should be brought back to Canada. Neither is it possible to take back the heavily wounded until they are fit to travel. Up to the present it has been the policy that only those who are for discharge should be returned. These include many amputation cases.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—An order-in-Council has been passed under the War Measures Act providing for deductions from pay of deserters in order to recoup the public for the expense involved in apprehending such men. Deductions are to be made "from the pay and allowance of every militiaman who has been convicted of deserting or illegally absenting himself from the unit to which he belongs, or to which he is attached while on active service, and from the pay and the allowance of every soldier of the Canadian overseas expeditionary force who has been convicted of deserting or illegally absenting himself from his unit."

Toronto, Sept. 18.—Capt. J. H. McDiarmid, whose sister resides at 47 Benlamond street, died on Friday at a Halifax hospital. He was on his way to his home after serving with the 4th Battalion in the trenches, where he received many wounds which were not considered to be of a serious nature. His aged parents, who reside in Perth, Ont., were making preparations for his reception when they were notified of his death. The cause of Capt. McDiarmid's death is not yet known. He had been wounded by shrapnel at Zillebeke, and when he arrived in Halifax seemed to be making favourable progress towards recovery. Friday he was taken with convulsions. A second attack quickly followed and proved fatal.

The late Capt. McDiarmid was 40 years of age. He resided for a number of years in Toronto prior to enlistment for overseas. He was commissioned as an officer in the Grenadier Guards in 1905, later became attached to the 21st Essex Fusiliers, and in 1911 was appointed to the reserve of officers. He went overseas with the first contingent. His brother, Pte. Archie McDiarmid, was killed in action on June 3. Another brother, Dr. Colin A. McDiarmid, medical officer of a Vancouver battalion, was wounded on June 7. Capt. McDiarmid was wounded on June 10. Pte. McDiarmid's death occurred on the day it was announced that he had been awarded the D. C M.

PRUSSIAN TRAFFIC GROWS.

Railroads Benefit by Employment of Women in Industry.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Receipts of the Prussian State railroads for the transportation of freight in the second year of the war exceeded by 5 per cent. the former high record, made in 1913. Receipts for the transportation of passengers and freight in 1915 exceeded those of the previous year by 11,000,000 marks. Thus far in the present year there has been a further increase of more than 5 per cent. in the revenue from transportation of passengers and freight.

The recovery in 1915 was due to reorganization of the economic life of the nation and to longer hauls necessitated by the blockade, particularly of coal. The present further development is ascribed to revival of industrial and commercial life made possible by the employment in industries of women and of men under or over military age.

LAWN BOWLING

The Jumble tournament will be completed this week. All rinks not playing as scheduled will default.

All rinks are due to play to-night. Where any skip cannot be present, he will be required to arrange for some one else to play in his stead.

All regular games must be finished by Thursday, in time for the two extra rinks to play off.

Judgment Has Been Reserved

June Sittings of the High Court Came to a Conclusion Yesterday Afternoon

Judgment was reserved in the case of Trombley versus the City of Peterboro. This is an action in which the plaintiff, Mrs. John Trombley, 536 Charlotte street, seeks to recover from the city, compensation to the extent of ten thousand dollars for injuries alleged to have been received as a result of tripping over a projection in the sidewalk. The case was heard yesterday before Mr. Justice Latchford at the Jury Sittings of the High Court, and was concluded at five o'clock. The presiding Judge visited the scene of the accident which was on the north side of Simcoe street near George street.

Pitched Battle Being Fought Along Serbo-Greek Frontier

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Eng., September 20.—Pitched battles are being fought along the Serbo-Greek frontier and in Eastern Roumania, while the Anglo-French forces are engaged in warding off German counter attacks on the Somme front. Interest in these Balkan operations was furthr brightened to-day by reports from Athens that Greece has made a formal demand on Germany for the release of Greek troops made prisoners at Kavala under threat of war. The Roumanian War Office claims the defeat of the main Teutonic force in heavy fighting in Dobrudja. The German War Office admitted that the Russians and Roumanians are stubbornly defending their positions on the Dobrudja line, but claimed a victory in Transylvania. The Italian War Office reported the capture of the left bank of the Maso River and Hill 694.

Russians Have Won An Important Victory

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, September 20.—Russians have won an important victory in Persia according to Tiflis despatches to-day. Russian troops struck from the region of Tabriz, and by a swift movement threatened the Turkish rear. The Turks retreated hastily. Russian forces have occupied Karidjan.

BERLIN, September 20.—The Russians gained local successes in the Carpathians, but fighting northeast of Halitz on the Narayuvka River resulted favourably to the Teutons, it was stated to-day.

Three Indian Soldiers On Trial In Simcoe

SIMCOE, Sept. 20.—Three Indians absent without leave from the 136rd Battalion for the past two or three months, appeared before Justice of the Peace Robert Gunton. Nelson Marsole pleaded that his eyesight was poor, that he wasn't treated well, and that his wife had no place to stay. He was sentenced to one year at Guelph, as his military record had been more or less bad.

Francis Grout, a smart soldierly-looking young Indian, pleaded guilty. When he came home from Camp Borden, July 31 on pass, he found that his wife was withouot proper clothing that she was in ill-health, and that her separation money had not been paid to her. He resolved to work and get some money, and then go back to Camp Borden.

He was arrested by the military police before he had time to carry out this resolve. He had nothing else against him and the authorities resolved to give him another chance. He was accordingly let go on suspended sentence on the understanding that he return to Camp Borden forthwith.

The third man, Charles Edward Johnson, also took a story of the hard ships of his wife. He said his right arm had been injured in a cutting machine some years ago, and that he had trouble with it. In order that there might be no injustice to accused, his case was allowed to stand over until he was examined by the medical officer.

SUPERHUMAN EFFORT OF INJURED WOODSMAN

How He Crawled and Rolled One Half Mile, Without the Use of a Leg and an Arm. Mounted a Horse and Drove Home —Had Hard Experience.

Suffering most intense pain as he crawled and rolled for upwards of eight and a half hours—such was the experience of David Slaney, who now occupies a cot at the General Hospital having been brought here night before last by the S. S. Portia. He is a young man belonging to St. Lawrence. He has only one arm, as he lost the other in a gunning accident a couple of years ago.

Slaney left his home in St. Lawrence early last Friday morning, taking his axe along with him, and went into the woods a distance of four miles "felling trees," as he called it. Shortly before 9 a.m., he hewed a heavy tree, which in falling, came across his right leg, breaking the largest bone midway between the knee and ankle of that member. Poor Slaney lay on the ground for several minutes powerless to help himself and equally unable to remove the tree, which lay where it fell. Believing that there might be other woodsmen or somebody else about he tried to attract their attention to come and give him aid, by shouting as loud as he could, but in vain. After considerable exertion, patience and suffering, he managed to remove the piece of timber off his leg and free himself somewhat, but even after doing that he was still in an awkward predicament. He was in a quandary as to what to do, as all that was left for him was to lie on the ground and remain there until help should arrive. After much deep thinking he stood up on the sound leg supported by the limb of a tree, and looking ahead, fully a half mile away, observed a barren place where horses were grazing. He then conceived the idea that he might be able to reach that spot, and make a conveyance out of one of the horses to reach his home. It was a superhuman task, but Slaney undertook it and accomplished it by crawling and rolling the entire distance, until he reached his desired end. It was a case of getting through trees, over stumps and along the rugged and unbeaten path. At intervals he was obliged to stop, owing to the untold agony the leg was giving him, but when the pain would subside, he continued on his harrowing journey. Towards the end the one-armed man, as can be imagined, became very exhausted and fatigued, but eventually reached his objective after eight hours and a half of cruel torture.

Slaney first took off his cap and started in to pick a cap-full of grass with which he attracted the attention of a pony. He put the cap on top of a post and while the pony was devouring the grass Slaney began to get on her back. He made several attempts, which were futile, as it was no easy task for a one-armed man with a broken leg, but with the herculean strength and undaunted courage that he had, finally manoeuvred about until he landed safely on the back of the pony, and drove off for home, a distance of three and a half miles. The bone was set by a Burin doctor, but owing to the terrible ordeal that the man went through, the bone had to be broken again at the Hospital and re-set.

"You never quote George Washington in your speeches." "No," replied Senator Sorghum. "When a man has done as much for his country as Washington did I don't think he ought to be dragged into arguments in which he has no chance to reply. And, besides, I never ran across any sayings of his that would influence the appropriations my constituents are looking for.

WEDDING BELLS

WHITE—BARLOW.

A pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. Canon Cornish at St. John's Church at 11 o'clock this morning, when Miss Carrie Barlow, daughter of Mr. Walter Barlow, was united in marriage to Mr. Percy White, son of Mr. Jos. White, both of Peterborough. The bride was unattended and wore a travelling suit of brown.

Mr. and Mrs. White left on the noon (G.T.R.) train for a trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, and on their return will reside at 289 Rubidge Street.

GRAHAM—WILSON.

A very pretty wedding took place in Toronto on Sept. 18 of Miss Sadie Wilson, youngest daughter of Mrs. Hanna Wilson, Peterborough, and Mr. Charlie Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Graham, 675 Stewart street, Peterborough, by the Rev. Dr. Graham, of First avenue Baptist church. The bride looked charming in a gown of king's blue silk trimmed with real Irish lace and carried white carnations and lily of the valley, and was attended by Mrs. Geo. Stinson, sister of the groom, who looked very pretty in a tailored suit of blue serge and white hat and carried pink carnations, while Mr. Stinson was best man.

After the ceremony the happy couple motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Leahy, sister of the groom, 30 Winnifred avenue, where a dainty supper was served, the guests numbering about fifty. A delightful evening was spent in music and dancing. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Graham motored to their new home on Lewis street, Toronto.

British Observer Was Only Thirty Yards Away From German Front Line Trenches

Eight Days Before, Place in Which He Stood Had Been Captured From Huns By British Soldiers—"Here Peaceful Spot No One Could Desire"—"No Man's Land" Between Trenches Had Been Smitten, Crumpled and Up-torn by Cascades of Exploding Shells.

BRITISH TOMMIES AT WORK

LONDON, September 21.—The battlefield of the Somme, seen through a periscope from the first-line trenches of the British, or, to be more exact, German trenches which had been captured by General Haig's men in the great Anglo-French advance, is described by an observer who was permitted to visit the lines. The observer's story has been made public by the Official Intelligence Bureau. The description is as follows:

"Thirty yards from the Germans—such was my privileged situation when, in the company of a distinguished cavalry captain, I took stock of matters at the outer edge of a system of trenches which, eight days before, was captured by an Anglo-Scotch combination of our troops.

"The captain and I had the place to ourselves, and a more peaceful spot no one could desire. Less than a stone's throw away, with only a few barrowloads of clay as an intervening shield, was the mighty Prussian military machine, which must be credited, no doubt, with an earnest abstract desire to kill, not only my military associate, but also my civilian self. On the other hand there was I unprovided with so much as an umbrella wherewith to defend myself, and I must confess to a momentary curiosity as to the probable course of events if that military machine were suddenly to let loose its power and fury against us, or, at any rate, if some of its more venturesome spirits were to scramble on to the level and come vaulting over the earthworks.

" 'Ah!' said the Captain, when I put the suggestion before him. "I only wish they would try it on.'

BETWEEN THE TRENCHES.

"And having let slip the word 'level," in allusion to the narrow belt of land occuring between the hostile front trenches, I must a hasten to explain that, so far as surface conditions were concerned, no word could be more grossly inapplicable.

"Grass hillocks we know. Sand dunes we know. Ploughed land we know. But they reveal elements of symmetry and uniformity, and that fire-swept belt of No Man's Land was wholly unlike any of them. It had been smitten, crumpled, lashed, uptorn, and starified by cascades of exploding shells until its surface of lawless irregularity found no parallel in the aspect either of land in any accustomed condition or of water in any familiar state of disturbance whether as a whirlpool, cataract or tempestuous sea. It was a landscape desolate and dead, without leaf or grass-blade—indeed, one could not but suppose that even the worms, insects and seeds had been involved in the general doom.

"Some fifty yards back we had come upon an officer taking observations through a periscope, and he had courteously placed the instrument at my disposal. Thus I had my first vision of a paradoxical region which, while it looks to be lonely and empty, happens to be no less densely populated than a congested city.

"In that first revelation of the enemy's front, the only outstanding features were gaunt relics of trees that had been murdered and maimed. For the rest, it was a khaki-coloured foreground of clay, wherein the German advanced line was distinguishable as a cutter that held a dark streak of shadow. Moreover, in front of that streak of shadow was a squalid higgledy-piggledy of tins and tatters that had been flung over the parapet to get them out of the way—discarded articles that did not stand forth conspicuous by any distinction of colour or tone, but which having been churned up with the landscape by high explosives, had become muddled over by the clay in which they were partly imbedded.

TOMMIES AT WORK.

Not, however, that the image in the periscope enabled me to grasp all that detail. But a minute later without the aid of reflectors, I saw, on the other side of the trench, a belt of clay which, if not actually No Man's Land, had been No Man's Land eight days before, and had not since undergone alteration. At least some trifling modification had now begun on the further fringe, where a party of Tommies were engaged in abstracting from the earth the muddiest of rags and nondescript oddments. That at any rate represents the impression made upon the eye by articles of equipment which had been buried by bombardment, but which, it seemed, would be once more serviceable when cleaned and renovated.

"Presently my attention was called to the ground level. The Captain picked up and handed to me the trenching tool of a German soldier—a tool which, in size, was a compromise between a spade and a trowel, and which, besides being of no use as a pick, could not be carried so easily as the English tool made in two parts. That little alien spade, however, was noteworthy for its structural strength, the sturdy ash handle being firmly fixed in a double collar of steel, and the shoulders of the blade being of two-fold thickness and heavily rivetted.

"'If you like,' said the Captain, 'you can keep it as a souvenir.'

"But my eager acquiescence was interrupted by a cheerful lad who, proferring me another German trenching tool, said:

" 'Perhaps you would rather have this one, as I think it is rather a better specimen.'

"Nor was his judgment at fault. The handle, instead of being of uniform thickness throughout, ended in a knob (on which, by the way, the letter 'W' had been roughly carved.)

"Rummaging about in the mud the Captain and I found another article that the former occupants of the trench had left behind them.

"One was a round metal box with a hinged lid which, when open, disclosed fixed contents covered by wire gauze, suggesting that those contents were destined to be saturated with a fluid giving off fumes available either for heating or for healing. This mysterious little apparatus supplemented a mask, the Captain said, as a remedy against gas. From the interior, when at last I had succeeded in prying it out, there dripped a liquid which caused deep discolouration in a pool of muddy water.

"I was better able to appreciate the ingenuity shown in another contrivance of which we found several examples. I refer to German fire lighters. Much rain had recently fallen and and the trenches the-eabouts held a quantity of water; so, instead of wrestling with the problem of how to keep their fuel dry, our foes had provided themselves with waterproof combustibles. Sticks saturated with bitumen, accompanied by strips of celluloid, were swathed in shavings, the whole being bound together by a covering of wire netting. Such fuel could be in water one minute and in a blaze the next: and note that, instead of that inflammable bundle swiftly flaring away through falling apart, its mechanical cohesion insured slow combustion.

"Suddenly my attention was recalled to regions aloft. A group of aeroplanes was in view, being attended as usual, by those puffs of woolly whiteness that glow so prettily, like dainty little clouds. And here, perhaps, I may mention that the sight of such aircraft manoeuvring overhead, and apparently not caring two pence for the shells sent up after them, had been of daily occurrence—it would scarcely be an exaggeration to say, of hourly occurrence—during the succession of fine days I had spent at the front; with the result that an exhibition which at first was fascinating enough, had by repetition lost the power to hold my attention. True, a brisker interest was always stimuated when, instead, of shells, opposition took the form of rival planes; and the air battle under consideration swiftly developed that character.

"No schoolboy could have been more interested than was my friend the Captain. He brought his glasses to bear on the affair, and was soon making noteworthy discoveries.

" 'That's a fine machine just coming up,' " he was presently exclaiming. 'How wide the wings are, and what a pace she is going at! Have a look at her,' and most obligingly he handed me his glasses."

Peace Talk Squelched By Premier of France

Deputy Who Insinuated England and France Were Not Doing Share is Howled Down By His Colleagues in House—"To the End" Still Motto of France—"Peace at the Present Time Would Be Humiliating and Dishonourable," Briand Tells Chamber Amidst Cheers

PARIS, September 21.—A delicate question was raised in the Chamber of Deputies by M. Rous-Costadau, who asked Premier Briand to see to it that there was not only unity of action on all fronts by the allies but also proportionate effects.

M. Rous-Costadau said that France could not expect to give the blood of all her children, and that the allies should make the necessary sacrifices.

Premier Briand, in reply, objected to the question, and declared that it was unjust to throw doubt on the efforts of the allies in such a sacred cause. England, he said, had never said "No" to any demand for aid. Italy had made the utmost efforts she possibly could, considering the difficulties of the mountainous theater of war in which she was operating. Russia had sent to France her soldiers from across the world.

FURTHER JOINT ACTION.

Replying to another speaker, M. Brizan, representing the Allied Department, in the old province of Bourbonnais, who attempted to calculate the economic value of the men who had fallen in the war, Premier Briand said:

"M. Brizon has suggested that it is possible for the president of the council to bring the war to an end. That is the idea he is trying to propagate, and it is my duty to destroy this propaganda. Your country, Monsieur Brizon, has a splendid past, which should make you love her. This country was seized by the throat after her assailant had passed over the bleeding body of Belgium. To the country which has the honour to be the champion of right and which has poured out its blood in floods, you say: 'Stop the war! Negotiate peace!' "

At this point the members of the Chamber rose cheering M. Briand and howling down M. Brizon.

PEACE NOW A MENACE.

Resuming, the Premier said:

"You little know France, Monsieur Brizon, if you think she can sell her blood. What peace would you make for this country at this moment? If peace were made now it would be a peace of war and a menace to future generations.

"The treacherous blow Germany tried to strike failed, but would be tried afresh. For forty-four years your country worked with a wound in her side. There already gleams on her forehead the aureole of prestige and glory. If you wish the ideas of justice to triumph, pray ardently for victory. Otherwise, there would be a peace humiliating and dishonourable and such as no Frenchman could desire."

The Chamber, which was aroused to the utmost enthusiasm by the Premier's eloquence, voted that the speech should be printed and displayed on all public buildings throughout France.

$15,000 FIRE ON CAVAN FARM BELIEVED TO HAVE STARTED FROM THESHING ENGINE

Thos. H. Aikens Lost Four Barns With Big Crop and Implements, Dwelling House and Stock—Louis Morton's Threshing Machine Also Destroyed—High Wind Worked Havoc.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

MILLBROOK, Sept. 20.—Thos. H. Aikens, R. R. No. 3, Millbrook, a prominent Cavan farmer, suffered a disastrous loss late this afternoon when fire wiped out a house, four barns, containing the greater part of this summer's crop off two hundred acres, a brood sow with ten pigs, numerous farm implements, and other material.

The house was untenanted but was usually occupied by Mr. Aikens' hired man, when he had one. It was a substantial brick dwelling adjacent to the barns. The crop consisted of 800 bushels of wheat, 1,500 bushels of oats, and 100 loads of hay. There also remained about three days' threshing. A fifth barn escaped the flames, the other four were each 30 feet by 50 feet in dimensions.

The fire is reported to have been caused by a spark from the threshing engine belonging to Mr. Louis Morton, of Millbrook, who lost his threshing machine and other minor apparatus of his outfit.

WERE ENGAGED IN THRESHING.

Mr. Aikens is absent in Western Canada attending to farm property, but in his absence Mr. Morton assisted by neighbours were engaged in threshing the Aikens crop. Suddenly about 5:30 p.m. flames shot out from the roof of one of the barns and fanned by the high wind from the southwest soon enveloped the entire superstructure. The threshers were powerless to stop its progress. The flames quickly spread to the adjoining barns and vacant dwelling, licking up the bulging buildings and reaching out for every combustible in their path. The long dry spell had left the barns an easy prey, and the hay and crops added a rich fuel to the fire. So suddenly did the flames appear, and so rapidly did they spread that the whole threshing outfit was threatened, and the cleaner had to be abandoned. The fire was simply irresistible, and the neighbours who had come to assist in the threshing were absolutely helpless.

About 6:30 o'clock the havoc was complete, and an array of modern barns with their valuable contents had been reduced to ashes. Rough estimates placed the total loss at between $15,000 and $20,000, but it could not be learned to what extent the property was covered by insurance.

HAD CONSIDERABLE HEADWAY.

Several reports agree that the fire had made considerable headway before it was noticed by the threshers, and had burned a hole in the roof of one of the barns. Mr. Aikens' nineteen-year-old son was in charge of the farm in his father's absence. The property is familiarly known as the old Boggs farm, and is regarded as one of the best in Cavan township.

The Council of the municipality of Cavan was in session in Millbrook this afternoon and upon receiving the first information of the fire hurried to the scene in automobiles. Quite a number of local people motored out joining the crowd of farmers who had been attracted by the smoke and flames. The driving wind from the south was largely responsible for the rapidity with which the flames spread and attacked the adjoining buildings.

FARMER GETTING BIG PRICES, FOR BUTTER EGGS AND CHEESE

Potatoes have been selling in Toronto down to $1.75. In Montreal car lots of Quebec varieties are quoted at $1.35. British Columbia potatoes are selling in Toronto at $1.70 a bag. The local price is dorpping nearer the $2 price that Ottawa consumers have been paying for several weeks. The farmers are not worrying except those who had to purchase their own supplies. Holders of potatoes seem confident that the market will give them whatever they ask.

HOGS ARE HIGHER.

Live hogs show a local advance of 50c over last week's price and are now bringing $11.75. The market recovered from the top heavy condition that continued for several weeks back and is again keenly looking for supplies.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.

Butter and cheese are again at top figures. This morning W. A. Anderson of Keene, paid Harwood creamery 36c a pound for butter in case lots. That is a rather illustrative basis to work upon. Cheese eased off a little last week but has completely recovered the lost ground. Wednesday's sale on the local board produced a big price. Eggs continue to sell comfortably over 30c, in fact some farmers got 35c a dozen last Saturday.

The Montreal receipts for the week ended September 16, 1916, were 14,477 cases, as compared with 15,383 for the previous week, and 11,297 for the same week last year. The total receipts since May 1 to date were 329,769 cases, as against 326,629 for the corresponding period in 1915, showing an increase of 3,140 cases.

The whole undercurrent of the egg market remains strong.

SUGAR, FLOUR, ETC.

The following are retail quotations:

Granulated sugar $8.75.
Pastry flour, per 25 lb. bag, $1.
Bread, 2nd patents, per cwt., $4.55.
Cheese, per lb., 25c.

GRAINS.

The local grain prices are:
Wheat, per bush., $1.20.
Oats, per bush., 55c.
Barley, per bush., 90c.
Rye, per bush., 90c.
Loose hay, per ton, $10.

OTHER PRICES.

Live hogs, per cwt., $11.75.
Eggs, per dozen., 30 to 33c.
Strained honey, per lb., 15c.
Lamb, per lb., 21 to 23c.

CHEESE WAS UNSETTLED.

The following review of the Montreal cheese situation for last week is interesting:

An unsettled feeling has developed in the cheese situation, which to some extent is due to the very limited demand from the regular English importers for supplies during the week on account of the very high prices ruling here and reports of other developments in the trade which may have considerable influence on the general condition if action is taken, consequently buyers in the meantime have held off and the volume of business done over the cable during the week was small; but on the other hand, there was a good steady demand from exporters here for all the offerings at the different boards held in the country throughout the week, which is attributed to the fact that several of the largest houses are very busy filling government contracts. Prices at the boards held in the early part of the week scored advances ranging from 1-4c to 1 5-16c per lb; but for the balance of the week the tendency was easier and declines were recorded from 1-16c to 2 1-4c per lb. as compared with values paid last week.

The receipts of cheese for the week ended September 16, 1916, were 77,085 boxes, which show a decrease of 193 boxes as compared with the previous week, and an increase of 10,900 boxes with the same week last year, while the total receipts since May 1st to date show an increase of 75,230 boxes as compared with the corresponding period in 1915. Of the total receipts for this week there were 4,229 boxes received from the United States.

Dizziness

and Specks before the Eyes

Liver derangement is the cause behind these distressing conditions, and only restoration of perfect natural action can effect lasting cure. That is why Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief is so immeasurably superior to the old-fashioned cathartic liver-pills and aperient salts. Such things can only give passing relief by forcing the liver to unnatural action, and have to be continued. Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief strengthens the liver, and so brings about natural action in a natural manner.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two tablespoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Coloured Sons Of The Empire Have Done Well

In every part of the Empire, Britain's coloured colonials forgot their unredressed grievances and rallied upon the outbreak of the war to the help of the Mother Country, writes John H. Harris in the London Chronicle. In certain territories the rising enthusiasm was damped down by a frigid official, but in most countries the warm-hearted officers of help were readily accepted. The Central Empires bargained, with good reason, upon the retentive memories of native races. German statesmen believed that the Zulu tribes would recall to-day many things most of us would like to forget; they believed, too, that West Africa would remember its power in the light of its present-day disabilities; that the Matabili would recall the shameful tragedies of '93," and the threatened and impending dangers of 1914-1916. But none of these things happened. Solidly these native children closed their ranks, forgot their grievances, and with unexampled loyalty forwarded from their modest savings substantial gifts to help the Mother Country. Where, then, did German statesman miscalculate? They overlooked that cardinal feature of British rule—the ultimate triumph of British justice. The native races of the Empire know well enough that though oftimes delayed almost to the breaking point of loyal patience, British public opinion, when it is thoroughly informed, will insist on justice being done, and it is this article of faith among our coloured children that provides an unbreakable bond of Empire solidarity. If we should ever forfeit that tradition the days of the British Empire are numbered.

Gifts of £150,000.

Compared with the total gifts of from seven to ten millions of money provided for charitable objects by the white and Indian races of the Empire, the sum of £150,000 seems but trivial, yet, measured by the standards of loyalty and ability to pay, it falls not one whit behind the most generous of individual gifts. This sum of £150,000 has come in the main from the illiterate communities of the Empire, or at least from those who but a generation ago were unable to read or write a single line. One of the most princely of these gifts was that of £38,000, sent to Sir Frederick Lugard by the chiefs of Northern Nigeria, a gift that to the Governor was as spontaneous as it was surprising. The Alake of Abeokuta, whose practical mind was captivated a few years ago by the cotton "gin" of Manchester, sent £500; Ktamia, whose guardianship of the Kalihari Desert so materially assisted General Botha, has given altogether nearly £1,000. There is, however, one noble incident narrated by Sir Frederick Lugard which outweighs even that of Khama and the Alake of Abeokuta. It seems that the Governor of Nigeria received one day a message from one of the Emirs of Barnu, named Mai Agri, to the effect that for the period of the war this native ruler wished to devote half his income of £160 a year to help the sufferers of the war. Sir Frederick Lugard, we are told, expressed to the old man the warmest thanks of the Government, but said that not more than £10 could be accepted, because "a larger sum would be a disproportionate contribution from his resources."

But in equal measure this generosity has been shown amongst the very poorest of His Majesty's subjects. Even the impoverished islanders of Tanna, in the New Hebrides, now reduced to a few score of people, collected £70—a people, be it remembered, who but yesterday were living in their Stone Age, and even now use stone axes and adzes in their industry. The negro coral islanders of the Bahamas, and even the descendants of the German colonists from the Palatinate, together sent £3,000, and when forwarding this sum, Mr. Haddon Smith, the Governor, remarked that this gift had involved giving up in "many cases the necessaries of life, although to have refused their offerings would have caused pain," whilst "there have been other instances of people who had buried gold, which they would not have unearthed except in dire need, but in order to be one of the subscribers to the War Fund they have dug up their hidden treasure."

Coloured Heroes.

The "Wafis" have often been the butt of ridicule, yet the troops composing the King's West African Frontier Force have shown that they can be as steady and courageous as the whitest of European regiments. Under the tropical sun a terrible engagement was being fought on the Mbila River of the Cameroons, under the direction of Lieut. Markham Rose, who was killed very early in the engagement. Without any hesitation, Sergt. Jalu assumed command, and with fine courage held out for several hours, controlling his men without any European help whatever. Away in Northern Rhodesia a small British force was suddenly attacked by a German patrol, and a British officer mortally wounded. A sergeant from Nogoniland rushed to the spot where the officer lay dying in the long grass, and with splendid devotion mounted guard and defended him until he died, and then he got his body away. Another officer who saw the incident truly remarked: "I have heard of men with dusky skins being pure white inside, and I certainly had proof of that on more than one occasion on this border." One of the finest instances of negro courage occurred on the Dibombe River, in the Cameroons, in an engagement with German troops. Two British officers came under violent fire and were both wounded, one of them mortally. Pte. Dagarti, seeing that one of the officers, though seriously, was not dangerously wounded, cleverly persuaded him to lie still where he had fallen, and then concealed himself in the vicinity. At the first opportune moment he rescued the wounded officer and carried him back to safety. These are but three incidents of noble loyalty and courage shown by the coloured colonials of His Majesty's forces.

But these dependencies of Great Britain have not merely been content to find large sums for war victims and to show great courage on tropical battlefields, they are now proposing to take up a share of the permanent debt charges. Ceylon has offered to take £1,000,000, Jamaica £2,400,000. Nigeria, £6,000,000, Bermuda £51,750. These shares of Britain's war debt are to be spread over periods varying from ten years in the case of Ceylon to 40 years in that of Jamaica.

6 Months Old Baby CURED OF DIARRHOEA

During the hot weather young children are very much subject to diarrhoea, in fact, more so than adults, on account of the more delicate construction of their constitution. It behooves every mother to look after her children on the first sign of any looseness of the bowels, for if they do not some serious bowel trouble such as diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum, cholera morbus, Summer complaint, etc., is liable to follow, and they will, perhaps, loose their little one by not taking the precaution to check this looseness of the bowels by using Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. Chas. Monck, Marlbank, Ont., writes: "When my little girl was about six months old she took a severe attack of diarrhoea. I tried castor oil, daudanum and other treatments, but they were of no use. A neighbour told me about Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I tried it, and after giving my baby two doses I could see a great change for the better. I have always praised "Dr. Fowler's" since then."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the original. See you get it when you ask for it.

SANG UNTIL KILLED.

Now and then a "close up" shows in the big war drama in France. An English officer returning wounded to London told the story of Paul.

At a point where the opposing lines were so close the enemies caught occasional glimpses of one another, Paul's rich baritone entertained his German comrades and the British Tommies alike.

During the lulls in the fighting, to a mouth organ accompaniment, Paul sang favorite tunes from light operas. He always drew a generous hand from the British soldier.

One day the British "went over" for a charge. When the lines were reformed they called for a song.

"Tell Paul to sing," yelled a Tommy.

There was silence for a moment. Then a German called back, "You haf shooted Paul; he sings no more."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Pearl Scarfpin

It Proved a Dead Giveaway.

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Jack Herkimer was a very pleasant fellow. He was popular with both men and women. Flaxen haired, blue eyed, a boyish face on a massive figure, good natured, careless of everything except the feelings of others, he drew about him so many friends that he found it difficult to avoid distressing them from an inability to accept and return all the favors they lavished upon him.

One day Jack was sitting in a street car when a young lady got in. She sat for a few moments oblivious to the fact that persons are not expected to ride in street cars for nothing, then made a dive for her portmanteau, supposed to be contained in the bag she carried. There was a succession of dives, each more spasmodic than the last; then she arose and started to leave the car without stopping it.

Jack interposed. "Pardon me," he said, placing himself in front of her, lifting his hat and smiling benignly; "if you are without change for your fare I will pay it for you. There is no need to get off."

He held in his hand a quantity of large change and picked out a nickel from among the coins. The young lady, apparently reassured, refrained from her attempt to commit suicide for the want of 5 cents and sat down. But she was still too flustered to thank Jack for the loan. The conductor received the fare, passed on, and the young lady sat trying to regain her equanimity. Presently a thought struck her all of a sudden. It was that it behooved her to make some arrangement for the payment of the debt. She was a young woman and had not the experience adequate to the occasion.

"How am I to—to get it back to you?" she asked Jack.

"There's no need to get it back to me at all," he replied, with that winning smile of his. "But if you insist upon doing so"— He hesitated. He would have liked to add, "I'll call for it if you'll give me your address," but it occurred to him that if the young lady did not consider this taking an advantage of her youth there were doubtless members of her family who would, so he finished the sentence by giving his own address, at the same time begging her not to take the trouble to return so small an amount.

By this time the girl had so far recovered her composure as to say, "Thank you very much." She would have liked to return Jack's smile, for it was catching, but she was only sixteen years old and had been brought up to give no encouragement to a stranger.

Jack, who was feasting his eyes on her beauty, passed far beyond the point where he had intended to leave the car. When the girl arose to alight she was apparently in doubt whether or not it would be proper for her to nod an adieu to the handsome young fellow who had befriended her. She decided in the negative, and Jack, who was about to go out before her in order to hand her off the step, sat still. The episode was ended, but left a very pleasant sensation in the young man's breast.

That night when Jack went to sleep he was paying the girl's fare again and again and assuring her that a nickel was of no consequence and she must not think of returning it to him.

The next day Jack received an envelope addressed in a man's handwriting containing a bit of paper and postage stamps to the amount of 5 cents. On the paper within in the same hand as the address was the word "Thanks." Evidently the girl's father or brother had taken the matter off her hands. Jack felt sorry. He had hoped to receive from the young lady something that would have given him the semblance of an excuse to take another step toward an acquaintance. This return of his loan by one other than the creditor herself ended the matter. And in a week Jack, who had bouquets of smiles thrown at him from pretty girls, forgot all about it.

One day a little box, addressed in a feminine hand, came for Mr. Herkimer by post. Jack was the recipient of so many favors from young ladies that he naturally supposed it to be from some girl with whom he was "spoons." He did not recognize the handwriting, but quite often his favorers who wished to conceal their identity had addressed him through an amanuensis, and he thought nothing of it. Opening the box, he found nestling in cotton a scarfpin set with a single pearl.

Jack ran over all the girls to whom he had recently made love—that is, all he could remember—with a view to getting a clew as to the sender. He formed an opinion that she was one of three, but he could not tell which one. He would await developments, being well aware that no woman was likely to so favor him without in due time getting credit for her gift. Whenever he met a suspect he would put out feelers with a view to testing her as to whether she had sent the scarfpin. But week after week passed and there was no clew. Jack wore his pearl ornament for several years, studying the face of every woman who fixed her eyes upon it, hoping for a betrayal, but found no one who gave any indication whatever that she had bestowed the favor.

One September day Jack, who had gone to Europe with the American summer hegira, was in a compartment of a railway carriage in Germany on his way to Hamburg when an elderly man handed a lady into the car, then got in himself. The girl was a beauty, and it seemed to Jack that he had seen her before. It was some time before the gentleman got his hand baggage stowed away in the racks and the lady had settled herself in her seat. Then she looked about among her fellow passengers. Jack from the time he had received the mysterious scarfpin had never worn any other. He saw the girl's eyes hovering upon him and finally light on the ornament. Immediately the blood left her cheeks, then rushed back a crimson flood.

There was no more doubt in Jack's mind that the young lady was the donor of the scarfpin than that she was present before him. But who was she? Certainly not one with whom he had been on intimate terms. He was quite young enough to remember faces, especially of those with whom he had an acquaintance. But no racking of his brain served to bring forth the identity of this lady who had sent him an anonymous gift. And yet something had passed between them, for he was sure he had seen her before.

The train was an express and connected. As soon as it was well under way the conductor came through for tickets, and the first person he approached in the compartment was the young lady in question, who referred him to the gentleman who accompanied her.

If it were not for suggestion our world would be a very dull one. Seeing the girl ask for her ticket brought back to Jack Herkimer a picture of her when, three years younger, she had started to leave a street car in America for lack of fare. The riddle was solved. She had rewarded him for what she doubtless considered a favor of importance, sending the reward anonymously.

Jack was a man of quick resource. What he would do flashed upon his brain with electric rapidity. He began to fumble in his pockets for his ticket—that is, in every pocket except where it was. The conductor stood before him, waiting. Jack continued the search until, pretending that the ticket was not forthcoming, he said to the conductor in the only language he knew, English:

"I've lost my pocketbook, with my money and my ticket as well."

Naturally, every eye in the compartment was turned to the unfortunate man, the girl's included. She was not the unsophisticated creature she had been when Jack had paid her fare, and it did not take long for her to become aware that he was enacting this scene on her account. To conceal a smile she turned her face to the window.

"You are an American, are you not, sir?" said the young lady's companion.

"I am."

"If you will tell me what you require I will be happy to oblige you."

"I need only my fare to Bremen, where I will take steamer for home."

"In that case the matter is simple. I sail on the Crown Princess tomorrow morning."

"I go by the same steamer. I have the documents by which to obtain all I need from the purser."

The gentleman paid Jack's fare. Jack asked for his name and address and was given a card bearing the name of Farnsworth. Then the passengers, having lost all interest in the matter, settled down to their various ways of passing the time. There was one person who, not being deceived by this audacious imposture, continued to look through the window at the scenery as though she would not lose any of it for a fortune. At last she turned, but carefully abstained from meeting the gaze of the unfortunate man who had lost his valuables.

Americans abroad come at once to a friendly footing. Jack Herkimer was profuse in his thanks to Mr. Farnsworth and, taking a seat opposite him, talked about everything he could think of, expatiating especially on that confidence those born under the stars and stripes have in one another, and so ingratiated himself into the favor of the old gentleman that the latter at last said, "Permit me to introduce you to my daughter, Mr."—

"Herkimer. I am John Herkimer of Troy, N. Y."

That was the trying moment of Miss Farnsworth's life. She felt a great impulse to fix her eyes on Jack's scarfpin, and Jack threw open his coat that she might get a good view of it. A half vexed, half amused smile played over her features like a fitful breeze among flowers. Jack gave no outward sign of ever having met her before, but there was a happy triumph within that was as plain to Miss Farnsworth as it was unobservable to the others present.

As soon as the steamer was reached Jack, after a pretended visit to the purser, paid his indebtedness and tipped the head steward to put him at table beside the Farnsworths. After such adventures with a young lady and a week's voyage ahead of them it would be absurd to suppose that the principal actors would cross the Atlantic ocean without a love affair. Indeed, the gift of the scarfpin made it plain to Jack that a conquest had been made long before, and he found love-making dead easy. Fortunately he had found a girl he wanted and, as he expressed it, "wanted her bad." An engagement occurred on the steamer, and the wedding followed in due course of time.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

Barn Burned At Hastings

Mr. J. Taylor Lost a New Buggy and Other Property

HASTINGS, Sept. 19.—A number of our citizens visited Peterborough during the week, taking in the Exhibition. A special train on Saturday evening proved of great service to the visitors.

The weather has taken a decided change to colder and ice is reported from some quarters.

The barn belonging to Mr. John Johnson and leased by Mr. J. Taylor, took fire on Tuesday last, and was burned to the ground. Fortunately no other building caught, thanks to the promptness of the fire brigade, which was quickly on the scene, and prevented the fire from spreading. Mr. Taylor succeeded in saving his horse, but lost a new buggy, a cutter, harness, etc. The contents were insured and will partially cover the loss.

The following day (Wednesday) the fire bell again rang, and it was discovered the fire had broken out in the vicinity of the station, and was rapidly spreading in the grass. The fire was soon under control.

We are pleased to report a decided improvement in the condition of Master Clifford, second son of Dr. and Mrs. Hess, who has been in a very critical condition for some days, suffering from blood poisoning as the result of a decayed tooth which had been extracted a short time ago. Dr. King of Toronto was called and performed an operation, assisted by Dr. Huycke, and the boy is on a fair road to recovery.

The Marks Company entertainment given in the Town Hall on Tuesday was not very largely attended.

The stock and farm machinery belonging to the late Jas. Doherty of Asphodel were disposed of by public auction sale on Tuesday last. Good prices prevailed.

Miss Butler is making extensive arrangements for her fall display of millinery, the opening to be held on Wednesday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Wilson are on a visit to Hamilton and Guelph.

Mrs. Mary Brown of Roseneath was in town on Thursday. We are informed that she is about to dispose of her property here to a resident of Havelock.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson spent the week end with friends in Toronto.

Mr. Dufus of Peterborough called during the week.

Mr. Alex. Smith has purchased a new Chevrolet car from the local agent, Dr. Hess.

Mr. Ernest Maybee spent Sunday in Toronto.

Mrs. Gregg of Roseneath spent Thursday in Hastings.

Mrs. (Rev.) Richards of Thomasburg is renewing acquaintances in this vicinity.

Those who attended the lecture given by Major Frost on his experience as Chaplain in the present war, were well pleased.

Pte. Don Fowlds is spending a few days with his parents here.

Rev. D. A. Thomson has returned to his pastoral duties after a pleasant vacation in Toronto.

Mr. C. P. Fisher is on a two weeks' holiday.

The many friends of Capt. Walter Thomson of the 39th Battalion, will be pleased to learn that he has obtained his certificate as field officer.

Mr. Geo. Maxmel has gone to Owen Sound to accept a position in the tannery. George will be greatly missed in Hastings, as he was very popular.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. M. S. of the Methodist Church, was held on Thursday last.

Mrs. E. Tait will be at home to her friends on Wednesday, Sept. 20

ROBSON TO RETIRE.

Veteran Skater Will be Given Diamond-Studded Medal.

Fred Robson, the dean of speed skaters of both the United States and Canada, has decided to retire, and in appreciation of his good work the Toronto Speed Skating Association will present him with a diamond-studded medal. Robson is known all over America and has taken part in more championship races than any speed skater now living. He has been in the racing game for twenty-two years, and in that time has won hundreds of medals and trophies. He was the originator of the T.S.S.A. Robson is a great booster for the skating game, and it has been through his means that many young skaters have taken up the game.

Ten Minute Cold Cure Relives Almost Instantly

Nothing cures so quickly as the healing pine essences in Catarrhozone. It fills the breathing organs with a healing, soothing vapor that relieves irritation at once. Ordinary colds are cured in ten minutes. Absolutely sure for Catarrh, and in throat trouble it works like a charm. Catarrhozone is a permanent cure for bronchitis and throat trouble. Not an experiment—not a temporary relief—but a cure that's guaranteed. Get "Catarrhozone" to-day, and beware of substitutes. The dollar outfit is guaranteed and small size 50c; trial size 20c., at all dealers.

FRENCH NAVAL POWER.

Five New Dreadnoughts Since Outbreak of War.

The 'Petit Parisien' points out that France has not only kept her fleet intact, increased it by fresh units perfectly trained. The journal says: The French have only lost the old battleship Bouvet, which was of no military value. The Jean Bart, which was torpedoed at Cattero, was speedily and carefully repaired.

The fleet has been enriched by the addition of five new Dreadnoughts—the France, Paris, Bretagne, Lorraine and Provence—ships of 25,540 tons, with ten 34-centimetre guns. With the Jean Bart, the Courbe, the six battleships of the Danton class, and five of the Verite and Patrie classes, this makes a very powerful naval force.—Reuter.

FASCINATION IS WEAPON OF GANG OF BLACKMAILERS

Chicago, September 19. — Eight members of the alleged blackmail gang charged with using the beauty of their women members and the fascinating powers of their male confederates to defraud wealthy men and women out of more than $1,000,000, are in the custody of the Federal authorities here to-day and will be taken to Philadelphia for trial.

The band, including five men and three women, were arrested shortly before midnight Saturday night in a raid by the Department of Justice officials in a fashionable South Side apartment hotel. They were accused of fleecing men and women of social prominence in Chicago, Baltimore, New York and Philadelphia, through organised efforts.

Their scheme according to Hinton G. Clabaugh, of the Department of Justice, was to compromise their victims and then blackmail them. Impersonation of the Department of Justice officials is another charge against the men.

The men are said to have used the charms of their women confederates to win attention from rich men and then to have threatened their victims with prosecution under the Mann Act.

KIDNAPPING IS CHARGED.

Those arrested gave the names of Henry Russell, Edward Donahue, Helen Evers, Mrs. Frances Allen, Mrs Edward Donahue, James Christian, Frank Croker, and George Bland. George Irwin, the alleged director of the group, is still at large.

The chief charge against the band is the alleged kidnapping of Mrs. Regna H. Clifford, of Philadelphia, one of their alleged victims, and wanted as a government witness. She was spirited away to Canada, it is charged, at the time that she was wanted to testify against the band.

Clabaugh said there were fifteen known victims of the gang.

Forty thousand dollars was obtained from one person and $35,000 from another, he said.

The authorities refuse to reveal the names of the victims. Some, it was said, are men prominent in political life, who were victimised while at the Republican convention here last June.

OPERATED TURF EXCHANGE.

Operations of the syndicate, which now appears to have been of international proportions, were not confined to the blackmail of wealthy men and women, according to information developed to-day.

Among the effects in the office of "Doc" Edward Donahue, one of the men caught in the Saturday night raid, was stationery of the "United Turf Exchange," with "headquarters in New York and offices all over the world."

There were also cipher codes for deciphering messages received by wire telling what horses to bet on, how much to bet, what races and what positions to play.

Fake newspaper clippings detailing the wonderful clean ups made by a young eastern plunger in pool rooms, apparently had been used to lure victims.

According to the Department of Justice officials here to-day, the "United Turf Exchange" must have been an exclusive affair. The rules stated that members using the club rooms in the evening must appear in full dress. It is said to-day that the organization had worked as a whole since the first of the year, and it is believed to have cleaned up in that time $1,000,000.

The eight members of the syndicate will have a preliminary hearing before the United States Commissioners to-morrow.

FOUND SCORES OF PICTURES.

Detectives arrested the supposed blackmailers by taking possession of the apartment house where they were staying on Sunday. One detective operated the switchboard and listened to all conversations. Dictagraphs were placed in the rooms of the suspects. They waited until most of those that they wanted were in the rooms and then swooped.

If Strength Declines As Age Advances Follow This Suggestion

So many women grow old before their time, perhaps your wife or sister. A little while ago, buoyant, full of vigor and activity — she enjoyed life and imparted pleasure to the whole family; but now in a few short years she has faded and lost colour and strength. She is just ready to develop some disease that will further weaken and debilitate. You remember how it began, failure of appetite, tired in the morning, found housework burdensome, always nervous and a little irritable. It's a shame to let her go down hill further when you can build her up so quickly with Ferrozone. The change this nourishing tonic makes in a weak woman is surprising. It gives great zest for food, increases appetite and digestion enormously. The blood gets richer and stronger and adds new life to every organ in the body. A rebuilding process works through the entire system. The first week will show an improvement, and a month or two will fatten up the thinnest, most run-down woman you can think of. Take Ferrozone for lost colour, for nervousness, for weakness, — use it when run-down and feeling poorly — it will do you more lasting good, keep you in better health, than anything else. Just as good for men and children, too, because Ferrozone is harmless and safe, 50c. per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRLS' DRESS

By Anabel Worthington

For a girl up to twelve years of age this is a dress with exceedingly good lines and novelty in employing contrasting material makes it really fascinating.

A vest shaped yoke is joined to the fronts, which are fitted with two tucks. In the back two tucks are made in each half. At a lowered waistline a belt of self material marks the skirt section, that falls in wide plaits. Underneath the belt a square pocket is stitched at either side and the top is folded over to form a tap. This little detail finish in contrasting color goods is very attractive.

Tiny pearl buttons, quite close together, trim the shaped yoke, and scalloping is the finish for the collar, the deep cuffs on short sleeves and the pocket lap. A tie gives a little jaunty air.

This design is very smart for tub fabrics and just as good for serge, homespun and wool mixtures. Also for silk. For a daytime or school dress it is very desirable.

You cannot know what is left out of a bought dress that should go into it until you make one like the model illustrated for your little girl.

The pattern, No. 7,901, is cut in sizes six to twelve years. To make in size ten will require 2¼ yards of 36 inch material and one-half yard contrasting goods in the same width.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

ABOUT THE PRISONERS

BY CANADIAN OVERSEAS

To the Editor of the Examiner:

I noticed by the 4th of August edition of the Examiner that some Peterborough people thought they recognised Sergt. A. F. Field in a group of prisoners in Switzerland, published by a Montreal paper.

Sergt. Field is still in Germany or at least was on August 2nd, as the last letter received from him was written from Germany on that date.

According to his letters he is glad that he was not sent to Switzerland but if one is able to read between the lines I think he is disappointed at not going. Miss Glassford, who is known to many Peterborough people on account of her unceasing kindness to our boys, has come to the same conclusion after having read some of Sergt. Field's letters.

In one letter he wrote "I am glad to say that the doctor has found me too healthy to go to Switzerland with the invalids. He sounded my troubled lung and found no disorder, so here I stay, very pleased to be better and though certainly way below par, still most cheerful at not being catalogued with the Swiss crowd." Nevertheless, the whole tone of the remainder of this letter as well as of letters since is disappointed and underneath all there is a strong current of bitterness.

Lord Northcliffe in his dispatches from Murren, Switzerland which were published yesterday, August 30th describes the life of the prisoners there. He writes "to-day here at Murren in the most beautiful spot in all Switzerland, I am watching two British bluejackets looking through a telescope at a distant eyrie, in which a couple of young eaglets can be plainly seen, the great parent birds wheeling and swooping like a pair of more graceful aeroplanes.

The bluejackets, within between four or five hundred officers and men of his Majesty's army, are prisoners of war, interned here, and interned, I may say, in the very lap of luxury. Accompanied by Colonel Picot, ex military attache to our Legation in Switzerland, we set out early this morning on one of the most delightful motor rides imaginable, through the Berneese Oberland, by Thun, its towering Schloss and emerald lake, to Lauterbrunnen Tirol itself affords no greater delights to the eye. All is German of course; the inns—Gasthouser zum Loewen, Adler, and the like and the motor signs: "Achtung!" and the very necessary "Achet auf die Kinder"—for the roads swarm with flaxen-headed tots.

Here and there are the unexpected contrast of French "Poilus" in their "blend horizon" fishing, flirting, strolling in groups or cycling, but generally fishing, and with greater result than in the Seine or the "lac" in the Bois de Boulonge, for they hold up to us great trout, pike, and 'chevaliers"—the last a fish new to me. These are the French interned prisoners in Switzerland. Unlike our men, who are at present chiefly at two centres, Chateau d' Oex and Murren, the French are scattered in little companies throughout the Oberland. There are one-eyed, one-legged and one-armed men, but they have all escaped from the horror. Presently we came to Interlaken, and soon at Lauterbrunnen we take the steep mountain railway up to this delectable assemblage of bottle and chalets in which our soldiers, broken in the war, are being rapidly restored to health by the healing air and sunshine of these higher Alps. Col. Neish received us at the little station and in a few minutes we are in the midst of as great a war contrast as can be imagined. Almost everyone knows Murren but for those who have not that pleasure I will say that it is on a little plateau, immediately joining what many people regard as the most beautiful mountain in Europe, the Jungfrau, within view are the Wetterborn, the Figer, the Monch.

By an arrangement with the Swiss Government who have behaved as kindly to our poor men as have the Swiss people themselves—which is saying a great deal—the soldiers who were taken at Mons and at Le Cateau at Loos, and some even more recently, are housed in the very best mountain hotels and chalets in Switzerland.

The men only arrived at Murren last week and have not yet settled down to freedom. Many of them still wear the strange look noticeable in those who have got out of Germany. Numbers can hardly yet realise that they are free, and more than one remarked that when he woke in the morning in his comfortable bed room, and gazed out upon the brilliant sunshine on the snowy expanses opposite, he feared it was but a dream.

For the whole of the general arrangements we have to thank Colonel Hauser, the Swiss P.M.O., Murren and its region is in charge of a young Swiss medical officer, Captain Llopart. Our prisoners, of course, are under Swiss discipline, and our officers and non commissioned officers, only hold their rank by courtesy of the Swiss authorities. So far this extremely delicate arrangement has worked admirably.

Col. Neish, who looks and says he feels like a boy out of school, after his long imprisonment, escorted me at once to the Swiss officer in command and we then made an inspection of the village. In as much as most of the hotels and chalets have been built for winter sports they are quite new. And if there be any more sumptuously housed privates in the British army in any other part of the world, I should be greatly surprised.

A man from hateful Wittenberg was lying in a deck-chair on the sunny verandah outside his bedroom, to which was attached the very latest type of private bathroom. There was a bowl of roses and edelveiss and a box of woodbines by his side. He was getting stronger he said, as he stood to attention and saluted Colonel Neish and Captain Llopart. By his side I noticed a photograph of his wife and children at home and he had abundance of books and English newspapers.

His surroundings are typical of all those at Murren. Nothing can be too good for our soldiers and at Miirren and also at Chateau d' Oex of which I obtained full accounts from English visitors. The best that modern hotels-de-luxe can give is given them. Flowers, sleep, sunshine and happiness are everywhere.

The officers are housed separately, as are of course, the non-commissioned officers.

All the hotels are on the same scale of comfort and there is therefore no difference of treatment.

At Chateau d' Oex work is in full swing, and the little colony at Miirren is already settling down into some form of discipline, when they first arrived such as were able to walk clambered up and down the rambling mountain paths. Shouting and singing like children on a school treat. They could with difficulty bring themselves to believe that they were free. Lately brothers in affliction all were now enjoying the first taste of liberty, and liberty in the nearest approach to an earthly paradise that can be found in Europe.

Organization is steadily growing. Tailor soldiers have started a tailo shop, there is a library, in charge of a sergeant, and a barber's establishment. All who are able are beginning to help in such matters as waiting, washing up, and domestic assistance generally. The meals are exactly the same as those served to summer and winter visitors at Swiss Mountain resorts. For breakfast, coffee rolls and honey. A substantial mid-day dinner of the best good Swiss soup, roast mutton, roast beef, plenty of vegetables and fruit, plain puddings and compotes. For supper, bread, cheese, jam and everything in unlimited quantities. The men need it. Some are increasing in weight at a rate that seems almost incredible. All who are able to be out in the healing sunshine are getting sunburnt. There seems to be little desire for alcohol among them, but they can purchase if they will, the light Swiss beer with which many of us have quenched our thirst in our holiday climbs.

Happiness is contagious. One of the most pleasing moments in my recent very varied itinerary is this day among the prisoners of Murren. Each has his own tale to tell of life in fierce many and each will remember as long as he lives. It is not the immediate policy of the British Government to emphasise German cruelities, and so I will not repeat the innumerable stories I have heard.

The particular sailsmen at Murren do not appear to have been badly used in Germany. One blue jacket from the Hebrides told me in his Highland accent that his life in Germany "might have been better and might have been worse." An engineer from the Appam captured by the Mouve, said that the Captain of the Mouve was a thorough sportsman and a gentleman, and that his treatment in Germany had been fair. It is not wise to generalise, but from the conversations I have had with sailors at Miirren, it would appear that in their case, at any rate, different treatment was dealt out to sailors.

I heard other good things about Germany too. Among the many acts of self sacrifice of the war is that of the distinguished Liverpool dental surgeon, M. J. A. W. Woods, who has given up his practice and come out to Miirren to look after the prisoners teeth. He told me the several of his patients had had good dental attention in Germany, and that in some cases false teeth had been given them. Of other cases the less said the better.

For games there is the bowling alley and such officers as are able to play have put the lawn tennis courts in order. But at the present time most of them are inclined to laze and read and get well. Many are veritable Rip Van Winkles. Entirely shut off from news in Germany, except such fragments as they receive from more recently arrived prisoners, they even now know practically nothing of what has happened since they were captured and when I ask if there was any kind of reading they would care to have the invariable reply was they wanted histories of the war, especially those with illustrations. These I have arranged that they shall receive as speedily as possible.

As our interned men recover health the question of their employment in Switzerland will become pressing. The whole subject is indeed fraught with difficulties, which are being solved as they arise, by the energy, knowledge and tact of Colonel Picot, than whom a more suitable selection could not have been made. A British officer of world-wide experience and, as I said late military attache to our legation, he understands the views of the Swiss and also those of our own men. The question is complicated by the fact that when so many of the Swiss factories are making munitions it is forbidden, of course, that British or German soldiers interned in Switzerland should take part in such work. The Swiss labour leaders who naturally jealously guard their own interests, do not desire that the local labour market should be disturbed by what may prove to be an army of invading workers.

For the moment I repeat the great object is to get our prisoners well, and to that end Col. Hauser and Col. Picot work untiringly.

This sketch gives a good idea of the life of the prisoners in Switzerland and it is a life to be desired rather than shunned. I might also add that steps are being taken or at least a scheme is under consideration for sending the wives of these men to Switzerland for a visit.

A few days ago I was talking to a returned prisoner from Germany and he said the prisoners depended almost entirely on the parcels and that such things as butter and fats were missing from the parcels. Some of the firms in London that are supplying the prisoners with parcels are leaving out the butter as it is quite evident that the Germans are removing it.

The prisoners send cards acknowledging the parcels but it is very difficult to know just what does happen because they can say so little about it. As Sergt. Field said in his last letter, "when I have left out things forbidden and things I dare not say, there is nothing left but 'I am well, thank you. How are you?'"

How to Rid the Skin Of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface, and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.

CATTLE MARKETS

Receipts at the Toronto Union Stock Yards yesterday were 87 cars, made up of 902 cattle, 120 calves, 1,867 hogs, 2,341 sheep and lambs.

Cattle prices were good and steady yesterday, with a fairly active trade. Rogers & Halligan are operating in the market for a large supply of feeders. It is estimated they will require for this season's feeding from 3,000 to 4,000 feeders. Feeding steers, 900 to 1,000 pounds, are selling steady from $6.25 to $6.75.

There was a sudden and big drop in lamb prices yesterday, the decline being from 50c to $1. The early week prices for lambs went up to $11 and $11.25. These prices were evidently responsible for the big run to-day and the consequent slump in prices.

Calves were steady to firm.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid, of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

FRENCH WIN TRENCHES AT VERDUN

THE BRITISH ADVANCE SOUTH OF ANCRE

FRENCH TROOPS IN THE BALKANS HAVE ADVANCED THREE MILES

Operating on Allied Left Wing Southwest of Monastir French Have Made Great Progress---Vicious Counter Attacks Fail to Stop the Serbians--Sofia Admits Russo-Roumanian Forces Are Maintaining Their Strongly Fortified Positions.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS (French Official Communique), September 21.—French troops made two successful attacks on the German lines northeast of Verdun last night, capturing two trenches and one hundred prisoners, south of Thiaumont, and advancing one hundred yards in Vaux Chapitre Wood. The Germans made no new counter attacks on the Somme front, bad weather hindering operations. In the Argonne a German attack near Four de Paris failed.

The French forces operating on the Allied left wing in the Balkans have advanced nearly three miles toward Hill 1550, taking 50 prisoners. The French gain was made southwest of Monastir near the frontier. The Bulgarians are delivering most vicious counter attacks against the advancing Serbs. At one stage of the battle Bulgarian troops entered the Village of Boresnico, but were finally driven out by the Serbs in violent fighting. East of the Crna River the Bulgars made a strong counter attack against Kamakchallan Mountain, captured by the Serbs early this week, but were driven off.

British Troops Have Made More Gains

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 21.—British troops advanced south of the Ancre last night despite heavy enemy resistance, General Haig reported this afternoon. The Germans made strong counter attacks against the New Zealanders, but were beaten off with heavy losses.

Russo-Roumanians Are Holding Ground

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

SOFIA, Bulgaria, September 21.—The Russo-Roumanians are maintaining their strongly fortified positions in the Dobrudja in the face of heavy Bulgarian attacks, it was officially admitted to-day. The battle is increasing in violence. Both sides are fighting with the greatest stubbornness. In Macedonia the battle around Florina is developing favourably for the Bulgars.

Australia To Take Referendum On Conscription

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 21.—The Bill passed by the Australian House was for referendum on conscription, not for conscription itself.

Australian Women To Vote On Conscription

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

MELBOURNE, Australia, September 21.—The wives and mothers of Australia will go to the polls within a few weeks to decide whether or not they shall force those of their sons and husbands who have not already gone to go to war. It is probably the first time in the history of the world that women of any country have been permitted to make such a choice. The House of Representatives by a vote of 47 to 12 passed a bill calling for a referendum on conscription. It is considered certain that the bill will pass the Senate. Women's votes will probably decide whether the conscription measure strongly advocated by Premier Hughes will be approved at the referendum. It is the general belief that it will. Thousands of women with relatives already at the front are certain to vote for the measure.

Canadian Casualties Totalled 37,861

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, September 21.—The Canadian casualties from the beginning of the war until August 31, totalled 37,861. Of this number 5,998 were killed in action, 2,248 succumbed to wounds, and 398 died of sickness. In addition to the above 723 missing for six months are presumed dead. The wounded totalled 27,218, and the known prisoners of war 1,282. Of the wounded probably a third at least would return to service.

More Prisoners Are Taken By Russians

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, September 21.—The Russians captured 693 Germans in the fighting in the region of Korytnitza and Sviniuchi, it was officially announced to-day. The Russians also captured an enemy position east of Panther, taking 348 prisoners and six machine guns.

Mackensen Forced To Try New Plan

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, September 21.—Halted in his invasion of Eastern Roumania Field Marshall Mackensen has shifted his attack and is attempting to carry the war into King Ferdinand's country by a stroke from the northwest. The German War Office this afternoon announced that the Austro-Germans have won a victory on both sides of the Vulcan Mountain pass, driving the Roumanians back ten miles. The Roumanians have halted and are defending themselves behind a new fortified line. The Bulgarian War Office today admitted the defeat of German and Bulgarian attempts to penetrate the new Russo-Roumanian front in Dubrodja. The Roumanian War Office not only reported the repulse of all Teutonic attacks but declared the Russians and Roumanians are now attacking on the whole front.

PTE. VIC. HAGERMAN, well known Peterborough boy, who is officially reported wounded. Pte. Hagerman, whose home is at 161 Hunter street, east, is one of four Canadian born brothers overseas, and is the second to be wounded. He enlisted in September, 1914.

Executive Committee Leads With a Total of $2081 Secured—Encouraging Letters Received From Outside Friends

STANDING OF TEAMS

The team workers in the Y.M.C.A. subscription canvass are feeling very good over the results obtained in the first two days of the canvas, there being subscribed $3,100 of the desired $5,000.

While the ground has been quite well covered by the canvassers, still there are many friends to here from and the workers are very hopeful of reaching the desired goal. The largest subscription obtained is from Mr. T. F. Matthews, who heads the list with $250. A number of subscriptions have been received of $100 each and a good list of fifties, but the committee realize that if the full $5,000 is to be received, that the wage-earners of Peterborough should contribute their bit.

Any person not approached by a canvasser may send their contribution to the Association office. Subscriptions are payable any time between this and the 1st of January.

Executive committee, composed of team captains, with G. A. Gillespie, chairman, have secured $2,081.

The standing of the other teams follow:

J. J. Howden	$420.00
Thomas Barrie	259.50
J. J. Turner	194.00
Joseph Wearing	140.00

A number of encouraging letters from out-of-town friends of the Association have been received, among them the following from Judge G. M. Roger of Cobourg, formerly of Peterborough:

Dear Sirs,— Enclosed please find cheque for ten dollars, the best I can do at present as I am subscribing to the general Y.M.C.A. military work, which I consider one of the best voluntary efforts in connection with the war. If you are still short I should be glad to hear from you again about the beginning of the year.

Yours truly,
G. M. Roger.

Must Observe The Rules of the Street

Chief Thompson collected another fine to-day from an automobile owner who pleaded guilty to a breach of the traffic by-law. He cut a corner too sharply. The Chief has apparently instructed his men to go out into the highways and byways and bring in every driver they observe forgetting the law. Carelessness in this respect costs money and might easily lead to accidents.

A Local Appreciation Of The Y. M. C. A. Work On The Firing Line

(Extract from letter from Lieut. Gordon S. Matthews, Trench Mortar Brigade, 3rd Canadian Division, France.

MONDAY, September 4, 1916.

"Yesterday afternoon the officers played the N.C.O.'s a game of indoor baseball. We were victors 18-8. To-day were were to play the gunners, but as usual it rained. I am captain of our team.

To-day was Labour Day, and so we held sports. The officers put in 10 francs each for prizes. The men certainly enjoyed themselves. We had jumps, running, three-legged race, putting the shot, gun laying, etc. "Y" battery, of which I am 2nd in command, cleaned up practically everything. Feel quite proud as I was the originator of the sports.

Visited the Y.M.C.A. here yesterday with Captain Pete Bennett, our O.C. Was able to get from them for nothing, two pairs boxing gloves, two indoor baseballs, four bats, two outdoor baseballs, a football, and a gramaphone. They surely are a wonderful organization.

The gramaphone is being used all the time to-night, as it is our last day in rest. We are separating from our division to-night or to-morrow, and going back into the trenches to support the 4th Div. Canadian. Everybody is very jolly to-night. Am hoping the gaiety is not forced. Must close. Love to all, "GORDON."

[redacted]

The above is a copy of a letter received by T. F. Matthews from his son, Gordon S. Matthews, of the 3rd Canadian Division, France. This letter shows the great appreciation that the boys in the trenches have for the Y.M.C.A.

About three thousand of the needed five thousand dollars for the local Y.M.C.A. and its overseas budgets has been contributed up to dats, and as it is a physical impossibility for the few canvassers who are at work to call on every Peterborough citizen, a general appeal is made to friends of the Association work to send their subscriptions direct to the Association office this week. Pledges may be made payable at any time previous to January 1st.

TWO PETERBORO' SOLDIERS OFFICIALLY REPORTED WOUNDED

Ptes. Victor Hagerman and H. C. Evans Now in Hospital in England---Enlisted With the Second Contingent--Information in Regard to Parcels for Prisoners in Germany---To-day's General Military News.

Word was received to-day of the wounding of two Peterborough boys, probably in the last offensive along the Somme.

Mr. A. Hagerman, 161 Hunter street east, received a message from Ottawa this morning that No. 59406, his son, Pte. Victor Wilfrid Hagerman, is officially reported admitted to the Military Hospital at Nottingham on Sept. 17th, suffering from a gun shot wound in the shoulder. Pte. Hagerman is one of four Peterborough brothers to go overseas and the second to be wounded. He was one of the first Peterborough men to enlist with the 21st Battalion, joining in September, 1914, and has been overseas since early in 1915. Pte. Hagerman's brother Will, a member of the Princess Pats, was wounded some time ago. Two other brothers, Stanley and Alfred, are overseas with the Canadian Field Artillery.

Mrs. C. Evans, 512 Aylmer street, received word to-day that No. 59039 Pte. Harry Charles Evans, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported admitted to the Northumberland War Hospital, Gosforth, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Sept. 19th, suffering from a gunshot wound and foot fracture. Pte. Evans enlisted early in the war with the local detachment in the 21st Battalion.

LIEUT. MANNING WOUNDED.

Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton received word yesterday that her brother, Lieut. H. G. Manning, had been admitted to Rouen Hospital, seriously wounded by a gun-shot wound in the abdomen. Lieut. Manning is a son of a former pastor of Charlotte Street Methodist Church and has a host of friends here.

HAMILTON, Sept. 19.—Magistrate Jeffs to-day gave Pte. Wm. King six months in prison for desertion. He claimed to have left because his wife did not get any separation allowance; the battalion officers stated that he had not married until long after enlistment. The Hamilton units have prepared a statement showing that outside of the American Legion, which is recruiting strongly here, the average desertion is five to six per cent. In the case of the American unit, out of 1,900 men enlisting 1,400 were rejected or deserted, including several officers.

OTTAWA, Sept. 16. — Congratulations from Canada have reached the Canadian troops who have taken such a splendid part in the Somme fighting.

Sir Robert Borden, on receipt of definite news of what the Canadians had done, cabled General Sir Julian Byng, commanding the Canadian army corps, as follows

"My colleagues and I have received with deepest appreciation tidings of the splendid gallantry and resourcefulness of the Canadian army corps under your command in the recent fighting. We send you and your officers and men warmest congratulations."

General Byng's reply, dated to-day, is as follows:

"On behalf of the officers and men of the Canadian corps I beg to thank you and your colleagues for your kind and encouraging message. I am proud of the Canadians under my command, and of the skill and courage with which they have fought. We feel that our success is largely due to the support and encouragement we have received from Canada."

Barriefield War Camp, Sept. 20.—It is reported in camp circles that the artillery brigade, which recently left Barriefield camp for Petawawa, will return to the city for the winter so as to recruit to strength. They will be quartered in the dry docks barracks which is largely fitted for the accommodation of just such a unit. It was said when the artillery left that they would go overseas in October, but the military authorities have evidently changed their minds, and the brigade will add that much more to the military population of the city during the winter months.

Mrs. George Mahew, 139 Rubidge street, whose husband, Private George Mahew, was killed in action, has received the following message of condolence from the King and Queen:

"The King commands me to assure you of the true sympathy of His Majesty and the Queen in your sorrow."—Signed, Asquith.

Overseas Club Tobacco Fund

Important Meeting Will Be Held To-night

There will be a meeting to-night of the Executive of the Tobacco committee of the Overseas Club, in the Bank of Montreal chamber. All the members are asked to be present as it is necessary to get the fall campaign under way in order that the boys from Peterborough may not be deprived of their smokes.

GREEK ULTIMATUM MEANS A NEW ALLY

Hellenic Kingdom Expected to Cast in Its Lot With the Entente Immediately If Germany or Bulgaria Refuses to Yield.

IGNORED BY ALLIES

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Greek intervention on the side of the allies appears to be only a question of hours. A casus belli has been found. The Greek Government, according to a Reuter despatch from Athens, said to be based on reliable authority, has sent an ultimatum to Germany, expiring to-night. It demands the immediate return of the Greek garrison of Kavala, which "surrendered" when the seaport was occupied by Bulgars and Germans.

One despatch from Athens to-night says that a similar ultimatum was sent to Bulgaria. Amsterdam reports that the ultimatums expire Friday.

Greece has made it clear to Berlin and Sofia, despatches state, that war will be the only alternative if the demand is refused.

The ultimatum is based upon the statement that the Greek soldiers at Kavala did not surrender voluntarily to the Germans and Bulgarians, but that the army corps' commands had offered to surrender to the British and to them alone. Therefore, Greece argues in her ultimatum, the troops are kept prisoners, which is a violation of Greek neutrality.

Refusal Means War.

If Germany or Bulgaria, or both, refuse to yield to Greece's demand, the Hellenic kingdom is expected to cast in its lot immediately with the Entente, probably without declaring war.

This is what Premier Briand is believed to have alluded to when he stated in the French Parliament yesterday: "To-morrow you will see this joint action of the Allies expanding still more."

Meanwhile the Entente Powers are doing everything possible to speed along Greek intervention. They have begun to exert extreme economic pressure upon Greece. The Greek coast has been put under blockade from the mouth of the Struma to the Greco-Bulgarian frontier. The blockade which, according to the French Journale Officiale, became effective September 16, is explained by the Entente Ministers in pointing to the occupation of Kavala by the Bulgars.

Ignored by Allies.

The whole policy of the allies toward Greece has changed from pressure by courteous diplomatic entreaties to one of action. As far as the Entente Ministers are concerned, the new Greek Cabinet, headed by Premier Kalogeropulos, does not exist. They have constantly refrained from dealing with this new Ministry. The reason for this is believed to be the latter's failure to translate his words into action, for his utterances upon assuming the office foreshadowed prompt intervention. Coupled with the glacial silence for the new Cabinet is a general policy of absolute distrust toward the Greek authorities. The blockade is being tightened steadily and allied warships are continually cruising all around the Greek coast. All the while the internal revolt grows.

The reported ultimatum is the result of this situation. It was despatched, Athens messages say, immediately after a conference between King Constantine and his Premier. The departure from neutrality was decided upon, a Reuter despatch says, "with a view to dissipating the Entente's apparent distrust of the new Cabinet.

Another effort was made to-day to bring the Entente Ministers and Premier Kalogeropoulos together, evidently without result. The Greek Foreign Office sent an official to Entente diplomats and requested them, it is said, to recognize the new Cabinet as a matter of form. He is reported to have added that the Cabinet would resign if such course were considered inevitable.

Not to Fight Against Germany. ..

A despatch from Athens late to-night says the Greek note to Germany demands that the Greek troops be brought to the Swiss frontier in order that they may be taken to a Mediterranean port, thence to proceed to Greece. Greece is said to guarantee in its ultimatum that the troops will not be forced to serve against Germany.

The action of the Greek troops' commander, Gen. Madjopoulos is disavowed by the Greek note, the despatch says, and explains that the disregarded orders to transport his men to another Greek port.

ANDREW FAIRBAIRN'S NARROW ESCAPE AT LAKEFIELD FAIR

Well Known Farmer Upset When He Drove Across Race Track During the Progress of the Green Race

ESCAPED UNINJURED

Mr. Andrew Fairbairn one of the best known residents of the County had a very narrow escape from serious injury at the Lakefield fair yesterday. During the progress of a heat of the green race Mr. Fairbairn who had been in the infield attempted to drive across the track, evidently ignorant of the fact that the race was on. He drove out of the gate just as the leading horse swung around the bend and the result was a crashing collision. For a moment there was a panic while the women nearly screamed loudly. Fortunately however, no one was hurt although the knees of the leading trotter-pacer struck Mr. Fairbairn's buggy upsetting it and throwing out the occupant. Mr. Fairbairn gamely stuck to the lines and although dragged around held on until help reached him. His presence of mind averted a catastrophe as the frightened horse would have undoubtedly bolted into the crowd. Mr. Fairbairn escaped with a bad shaking up and a few bruises, neither his horse or the pacer was injured.

HAZEL DAWN AT THE EMPIRE

In a Play Radically Different from Anything This Captivating Favourite Has Ever Appeared in

The saleslady, the title of Hazel Dawn's new photoplay is a tale of a country girl whom poverty forces to try her fortune in New York. Upon her arrival in the city her beauty attracts the attention of a band of villains, who become instrumental in subjecting her to a series of vicissitudes that are strange, stirring and dramatic in the extreme. A unique fact connected with this unusual Paramount Picture is the reproduction on the screen of one of New York City's greatest department stores, in which many of the more important scenes of the play occur. The Empire Theatre shows photoplays that are clean and never have any objectionable features.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, SEPT. 21, 1916

THE WAR LOAN AT HOME.

Reports from all parts of the country and from virtually official sources, indicate that the new Dominion 100-million dollar war loan will be oversubscribed. A prominent local banker stated as his opinion that Peterborough's takings would probably amount to between $400,000 and $500,000, a pretty good proof that there is a plentiful supply of money, and that many have been enabled to take advantage of the fruits of economy of their incomes. Outside of the $50,000 subscribed by the Town Trust Commissioners there appears to have been no large subscription amounts but many applicants of $100, $200 $500 and $1,000. If Peterborough's subscriptions to the war loan total half a million dollars it is evident that amount is distributed among a great many of our prudent citizens, who have by the exercise of thrift been able to take advantage of a good thing—a good investment and at the same time do an act of patriotism, help finance the war.

A POSTAL SURPLUS.

It is gratifying to know that the Post Office business is picking up and that the good old times of post office surpluses are returning. War conditions have made increase of revenue, and this has been accompanied by decrease of expenditure, a very creditable condition of administration. It is to be remembered that this turning of the scales has been helped by a one-third increase in postal rate—one cent on letters and one cent on postal cards. A few years ago a similar reduction of postage was followed by a period of surpluses. This year a surplus, or an excess of receipts over expenditures of $2,849,271 resulted, and the expenditures, as compared with 1915, were less by $42,947. The improvement of post office finances under new management is very marked. For the five years preceding 1916, the annual increase in expenditure was so great that it advanced yearly from a little over one million to a little over three millions in 1915. That this increase was overtaken and converted into a decrease in one year, would indicate to some that for the past five years there has not been practised the economy that appears to have obtained last year.

DOMINION PROHIBITION.

Prohibition of the liquor traffic is justified in Ontario as a war measure to prevent the waste of money and manhood and production capacity. In this regard it should have been applied to the whole Dominion. This action would have been justified, not only as a measure of conservation of national means and muscle but on the higher ground of general national welfare and as a concession to overwhelming prevalence of popular opinion. At present it is stated that the whole of Canada is "dry" except sixteen per cent. of the municipalities of Quebec province and it is pretty certain that the Dominion Government will be subjected to a demand for a prohibitory enactment to apply to the whole of Canada. It is evident that such a law would be in accordance with popular sentiment and a measure of conservation and economy such as a state of war demands. The whole Dominion is submitting to sacrifice in the matter of manhood and money and the result of their sacrifices should not be lessened by waste of either, added to the inevitable waste of war. If we are to regard prohibition of the liquor traffic as a measure of conservation of our national resources, especially demanded by war conditions we should logically make it as effective as possible. There are constitutional impediments in the way of the provinces enacting a full measure of prohibition, the enactment of a complete measure which would include the prohibiting of manufacture for beverage purposes, and importation for beverage purposes and within the powers of the Dominion Government and in no other way can the completest form of protective and preventive measure of the financial industrial and personal vitality of the nation be effected. Russia has found the abolition of strong drink to represent increased efficiency of her soldiers; France and Britain have found corresponding good in repressive measures; and if a constitutionally necessary partial prohibition measure is justified as a war expedient, to strengthen our resources it is evident that the Canadian Government ought to measure up to the national high spirit of Russia. Apart altogether from moral considerations the promotion of our military and economic efficiency becomes worthy of practical recognition and would justify the Dominion Government in making what may by many be regarded as a sacrifice, in the national interest. When everybody, however, in some form or another, is making sacrifices in the interests of promoting the success of our share in the war, why should anybody be exempt, if his sacrifices involves high promotion of national and individual interest?

WORK FOR SOLDIERS.

The problem of providing employment for Canadian soldiers after they have helped intern the Kaiser at St. Helena, quitted the grim work of war and returned to Canada, is a serious one, and is engaging serious attention. If promises of employers are kept, the places of many soldiers who left good positions to go fight, will be kept and in these cases the problem of employment will be solved. But there are many others who enlisted, especially in the early stages of the war, who had no employment and the soldiers' pay was a godsend. These will come back and employment must be found for them. Many were unskilled work men and work must be found for them to do. It will largely rest with the government to find this employment.

An interesting article from the Journal of Commerce, appearing on this page, suggests a splendid and profitable way to find this employment. It points out that when the close of the Napoleonic wars released thousands of soldiers, work was found for them in constructing the splendid system of highways in the old country which, though a century or more has passed, still are the envy of other countries, especially Canada, where, though we have spent millions upon millions in building railways and canals, our government has neglected an equally, if not more, important work, good highways throughout the country. The Journal of Commerce in this regard timely says:

"Of what avail is it to have magnificent railways spanning the country if there are no proper roads to act as feeders to the railways, roads over which can be hauled the product of forest, farm and mine?"

In undertaking the work of post bellum readjustment, we have at hand, or should have when the war is over, material to solve, in part, one of the problems and at the same time provide conditions, whose value and far reaching effect will go far to compensate the sacrifices we have made. We must admit that the highways of Canada do not measure up to the standard of civilization, that considered them a sine qua non two thousand years ago. The Romans in their wars of conquest, laid waste countries and subjugated peoples, but they left in their wake splendid highways, of such permanency of character that some of them are in use to-day after having borne the increasing traffic of a score of centuries. If the government will devise some systematic scheme of employing our returned soldiers in building, or helping build, a Canadian system of public highways of permanent character, they will have done a national good, that will outlast the memory of this and many succeeding generations. They will find profitable employment for thousands for whom no other opening will present.

We need, increasingly, good highways in Canada, to help the farmers get their product, their cheese and grain, and other commodities, to the markets, to the railway stations or the canal wharves. Good roads will, in the saving of time and wear and tear of horse-flesh and vehicles, net the farmers a substantial increase in prices. The increasing use of auto vehicles also emphasizes the demand for good roads. The auto is no longer a mere vehicle of pleasure, but an element in transportation, and the day is, perhaps, not far distant when the farmer will be as generally an auto car or auto truck owner as the civil dweller or the city business men.

Good roads will be a necessity and more than that, if provided, an immense national benefit, and when these provisions can be made tributary to harvesting, the aftermath of after-war unemployment they will be doubly justified.

Road Building Solved The Problem of Finding Work For The Returned Soldier

Everyone agrees that "everything possible should be done for the returned soldiers," but very few of our law-makers have any practical suggestions to offer.

A century ago tens of thousands of British soldiers returned from the Napoleonic wars and found the industrial life of the nation in a chaotic condition. Work for them was not to be had, wages were low, the cost of commodities had risen until the struggle to exist had become a most acute one. There was danger of an industrial revolution—some even feared a repetition of the French Revolution.

A far-seeing statesman took cognizance of the situation and provided the returned soldiers with work building roads throughout Great Britain. For years these warriors contrusted the great highways which now stretch like ribbons across the Tight Little Isle. The roads built by those soldiers have stood the wear and tear of a century, but they have done far more than merely act as highways; they saved England by solving for her a great problem.

The building of the roads furnished employment to tens of thousands of returned soldiers and gave them a chance to "find" themselves and become adapted to the changed conditions of life. The roads thus built have proved a good investment and have repaid the outlay many times over as all familiar with English highways know. In a few months, or a year or two at the most, some two or three hundred thousand Canadian soldiers will be returning from the front. Many of these men have professions, trades and occupations into which they can easily fit themselves, but the vast majority are unskilled labourers and they will find it extremely difficult to get back their former jobs or adapt themselves to the arts of peace. Some provision should be made for their home-coming and not leave everything until they are back with us as a pressing problem.

Canada is more in need of good roads—great national highways—than anything else in the Decalogue. Why not commemorate the war by building a great national highway from East to West and at the same time give our returned soldiers steady work? Such a policy would be of untold benefit to the country. At this stage it is not necessary to enumerate at length the advantages of good roads. Improved highways mean an enhanced price for the adjacent farm lands; they mean that less time is consumed in going to market, that larger loads are hauled, that foreign travel is encouraged, that social intercourse is improved, that the church and school are made easier of access, and a score of other advantages. We have spent hundreds of millions in building railroads and canals, but precious few on public highways. Of what avail is it to have magnificent railways spanning the country if there are no proper roads to act as feeders to the railroad, roads over which can be hauled the product of the forest, farm and mine?

The United States waited a half century to build its Lincoln Highway. Are we to wait that long to commemorate our part in the Great War? It is far better to give our returned heroes something worthy to do than to make them objects of charity. Let us employ them in building national highways. The work will require co-operation between Dominion and Provincial authorities, but that should be easily arranged.—Journal of Commerce.

Worse Even Than Germans!

Bulgaria's Black Record of Outrage in Serbia

BY CLAUDE ASKEW

At this particular juncture—when Serbs and Bulgars are once more in conflict—I should like to bring certain facts home to the vast number of Englishmen and Englishwomen who still labor under the delusion that the Bulgarians are not really the foes of Serbia but have been forced into the war by their ruler and Ministers. This is not the case; the Bulgars hate the Serbs with a fierce ferocity that has for its aim the extermination of the Serbian nation, and they have committed deeds of the most intense brutality in Serbia. This unfortunate country has been ravished and rent and washed in innocent blood during the last six months, and fear broods over Serbia to-day—the terrible fear of what the enemy may yet do before the soldiers of Serbia win home to their women and their children, for the helpless civil population are tragically aware that they are in the hands of a ruthless, unscrupulous and vindictive foe.

Quite recently the Serbian authorities issued a pamphlet dealing with atrocities committed by the Bulgars in the course of last year's fighting, and it well that the hideous facts should be made widely known. The crimes that Bulgaria has committed must be paid for when the day of reckoning comes round, paid for heavily, as they were not perpetrated in the heat of battle, but deliberately, in cold blood, and nearly always under officers' orders.

One fact stands out in ghastly prominence in this record of horrors. It is the disposition, not only to slay men, but to annihilate a race. This was particularly the case in Macedonia, the territory which the Bulgars claim as their own, and we know now that the abominable work begun last year is still being carried on.

The pamphlet issued from the Serbian headquarters contains thirty-three authenticated cases of gross brutality, cases so fully proved that they are beyond dispute. The majority deal, not with outrages against isolated individuals—a record of these cases will have to be dealt with later—but relate the massacre, under revolting conditions, of large numbers of helpless people—by the hundred at a time. In one case 500 victims are mentioned; in another 196.

Details of this merciless carnage have been given me, but they are of such a revolting nature that I dare not give them to the British public.

It was especially in the villages last year that the worst atrocities were committed, and it is still the villages that suffer most from the enemy occupation. It is easy to understand why this is so. Serbian villages are isolated, and so under present conditions, crimes—not only against men, but against helpless women and children—may be committed with the utmost impunity.

What charges will have to be brought up against Bulgaria? These charges, apart from the minor ones of robbery, maladministration, and cruelty in various forms, are essentially that wholesale massacres of Serbian prisoners were carried out under official orders, and that in certain quarters whole villages have been destroyed and their inhabitants exterminated, the object being to do away with, or at any rate to diminish, the Serbian element.

As to outrages against women, young girls, and children, the record is black enough. I was surprised, I remember, when I left Pirot in the wake of the Second Army last October by the panic of the women folk when they realised that the Bulgarians were close on the town. I am not surprised now.

I marvelled then to see the village people crowding into Pirot—weeping, ashy-faced women! I saw withered old grandmothers, carrying chairs and tables on their backs—young girls swaying under the the load of heavy bundles of household gear—wild-eyed, expectant mothers, staggering pantingly along—and I thought it foolish of these simple, harmless folk to leave their homes to wander God knows where. I imagined their terror to be an exaggeration. Heaven forgive me, though. The women were wiser than I was. They knew what cruel mercy would be dealt out to them, so they fled in their hundreds, their children with them, poor souls, their burdens upon their backs.

The agony of Serbia! Do we really appreciate here in England, in our island home, girded and guarded by the sea, what is going on in that stricken little country, that may soon become a mere graveyard, for the agony of Serbia is not over yet, the campaign starting anew in the Balkans is bound to plunge Serbia once more in the crimson wave of war. She will be the battlefield for the Great Powers—men will fight for mastery in the Balkans over her bleeding body She must suffer—suffer terribly during the next few months—the inevitable suffering that a conquered nation has to endure before her soldiers can win her back by their swords. Think of Serbia during the days that lie ahead, pray for her men fighting for her, and for her women and children in cruel bondage, pray for her heroic, unconquered soul.

IRISH NEED BUTTER COLOUR.

American Article Is Undesirable and Oleo Trade Increases.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19. — Irish butter, which forms a large part of the London supply, is being affected adversely owing to the difficulty in getting the dyestuffs that are employed to make it yellow. Consul Wesley Frost, at Cork, in a dispatch to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to-day, describes the condition of the market and says that owing to the shortage in colouring the oleomargarine industry is getting ahead of the genuine trade.

Before the war the supply of butter colour came from Germany. When that source of supply was cut off, the American butter colour was tried, but was found to be undesirable in quality and expensive in price, considering the quantity required to use to get effect. Now the Irish dairies are looking to Norway and Sweden for their butter dyes, and a part of the supply lately has been obtained from Denmark.

WAR LOAN

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $100,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st October, 1931.

PAYABLE AT PAR AT

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st APRIL, 1st OCTOBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 97½

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st APRIL, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above named Bonds for subscription at 97½, payable as follows:—

10 per cent on application;
30 " " 16th October, 1916;
30 " " 15th November, 1916;
27½ " " 15th December, 1916.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred million dollars exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of October, 1916, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the October instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, or Victoria.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 23rd September, 1916.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA, September 12th, 1916.

ACT OF WAR FOLLOWED MOVING PICTURE SCENE

London, September 19. — A letter received here from Bucharest telling of the final appeal of the German Amabassador to the King of Roumania, not to enter the war, contains the following:

Meantime 125 miles away on the Transylvania frontier the first blow had already been struck just beyond the Red Tower Pass, which leads to Hermannstadt, the great military camp called by the Hungarians Nagyszeben. It was an accident—one said to have been unavoidable in the circumstances.

A film play had been written by the famous Viennese dramatist, Alfred Deutsche, from an incident of the present war. By permission of the Hungarian authorities the scene was staged for rehearsal in a mountain defile just south of the military camp.

The play was called "Bogdan Stimov," and to make it more realistic, some of the Serbian prisoners working in the district were ordered to take part. They were furnished with useless rifles and were to submit "to the attack of the Magyar heroes," and surrender immediately.

As the sun rose the Roumanian outposts at the Red Tower Pass, waiting for the declaration of war, saw the preparations made for the film play. It all looked to them to be preparations for the massacre of the Serbian prisoners, so they approached and waited for developments. They could not understand how the Serbians came to be armed, but they saw the Hungarian line of bayonets. As the line advanced the Roumanian officer stepped forward and asked what it all meant. The Hungarians in charge told him to get out of the way. They pointed to the cameras, then in rapid rotation, and said he was spoiling the picture. Everybody laughed but the Serbians.

The Roumanian, humiliated, stepped back, undecided. Just then a Magyar poked a Serbian with his bayonet until the blood ran. That was too much for the Roumanian officer; he signalled to his men who were in hiding, and they came back and made all the Hungarians prisoners. Then he marched them all back to the frontier. He was feeding the Serbians, and listening to their stories, when news finally came of the declaration of war.

"Now," he said, "we will go back there and finish the play. We will play the role of the Serbians, but we shall have rifles that can shoot."

Fliers Have Time To Watch Shells

"SAIL FOR HOURS WITHOUT PUTTING A HAND ON LEVER," SAYS ONE.

The hardest thing about flying in war is the thinking that a flying man has to do. Here's the idea in an English flying man's own words, writes a London correspondent of The New York Sun.

"There is not enough to keep a man's mind busy in the air since the war has developed the aeroplane. In the old days of the aeroplane there were so many things a flying man had to watch that he did not have time to worry about what might happen to him. But these days sitting in a machine is about like sitting on a log, and waiting for something to happen.

"We don't have to use our hands as we used to. There is only one lever and you don't have to watch that very closely. You can fly for hours without having your hand on it. You can write or read or smoke, and unless your touch the lever to change its position you will fly along at the same level indefinitely owing to the self stabilization of the machine.

LOOK DOWN, WATCH SHELLS.

"So, with your attention only mildly occupied, you keep looking down over the edge to see what is happening. You get to watching the wires and wondering what would happen if a bullet cut one of them. You look at the frail affairs and consider how frail they really are. Shrapnel is breaking below you and around you perhaps. That's a daily occurrence. There's no use of trying to dodge it, for by doing so you may only run into it.

"So there you sit imagining all sorts of horrible possibilities. You have been told to go to a certain place and then return. Your route is all laid out for you and your duties are so simple and easy that while you are performing them you have a thousand times too much spare time for thought and worry. As for myself, I'd much rather have the aeroplane a less simple affair, just to have my attention occupied. An imagination is a curse to a flier."

And then there's the problem of the whirling compass.

An airman flies in a cloud; suddenly the fingers of his compass begin to whirl around like a clock gone mad. Scientists say it does not whirl, but so many English airmen have had the experience that even the scientific men are wondering whether the phenomenon is not worth studying.

THE WHIRLING COMPASS.

Here's a flying man's side of it:

"My compass finger has whirled like a top when I have gone into a cloud. It's enough to turn you demented. If is bad enough, goodness knows, to be lost in a cloud, but to have your compass go back on you at the same time is too much. Our scientific instructors tell us that the compass doesn't change but that we lose our heads when we get into the mist and change our courses without realising it, so that the compass indicator changes naturally.

"But in some clouds your compass doesn't change. It remains as steady as it was in the sunshine. Why should a flier jiggle his course unknowingly in one cloud and not in another? My opinion is that there are certain kinds of clouds that are charged electricity. In such clouds your compass goes crazy. In other words, where electricity is not present your compass behaves itself."

HOW HIGH ARE THE CLOUDS?

How far are the clouds above the earth?

As high above as we wish to climb. But the chief question with a flying man is how low the clouds are. A crack English flier told the correspondent something about low clouds.

"You may be walking along the street on a heavy day and, looking up may think that the clouds are miles high. As a matter of fact they may be only 200 or 300 feet above you. That's the kind of a day that the airman dreads. I've been lost in a cloud in France and come down out of it only to find myself flying around among the church steeples of a French town, with good chances of killing myself.

"In a cloud you can never tell whether you're over the enemy's lines. You may come right down on to his trenches before you know it. Clouds, the low kind, are the most deadly thing that we have to fear."

THE OLD U. S. MACHINES.

The same flying man drew a photograph from his locker and showed a likeness of himself sitting in an aeroplane such as fliers used in the United States, in, say, 1912. With this aeroplane the flier at Los Angeles had flown over a moving freight train and a movie hero had dropped from the aeroplane to the top of a boxcar.

"You couldn't get me into such a machine as that now," he said. "I've gone through all sorts of experiences on the English front but as I look back at them now I was always in more danger flying in that old machine of mine in the United States than I have ever been flying over the front. I don't see how we ever dared fly in the contraptions we had then."

And he had been a star flier with the Moissant troop that first showed flying to the American people. He is a British flying captain now so his name cannot be used.

Europe Will Be Greater Show Place Than Ever

NEW YORK—Millions of dollars poured into this country by warring European powers for munitions, are to be poured back into Europe at the end of the war by American tourists and immigrants who will return to their home countries to aid in the work of rehabilitations.

American curiosity to see famous battlefields, and the desire of aliens to play a part in rebuilding the war-torn cities of their countrymen, will send money flooding back to Europe according to indications at steamship officer here to-day.

Taking as an estimate as viewed, by steamship officials, that 100,000 Americans will visit Europe during the first year after the war, and that they will spend on an average of $1,000 each, $100,000,000 will be returned to the European countries within twelve months after peace is restored. Europe will, of course, be a greater show place than ever before after the war, steamship men point out, and considering the wealthy Americans who will visit the continent as well as those of more moderate means, the estimate of $1,000 each as the amount they will spend is regarded as low.

PASSAGES BEING BOOKED

Inquiries and applications for passage on the first ship to sail from the United States after the war are rolling in to the booking offices by hundreds, and causing steamship companies to make every preparation to handle the biggest trans-ocean traffic in history after the war.

But two companies—the North German Lloyd and the Hamburg-American lines—are actually accepting tentative bookings in the face of the uncertainty as to the termination of the war. Hamburg-American line officials refused to divulge the number of passages already booked. These bookings are being made in the order of receipt, and are subject to cancellation. The North German Lloyd has 107 passengers booked for the first vessel to sail after the close of hostilities.

The International Mercantile Marine, which controls the American line, the Atlantic Transport, the White Star and the Red Star lines, is making preparations for record traffic, both east and west bound, according to J. B. Lindsay, booking agent. Uncertainty as to rates, however, and dates of sailing, prevents maintenance of a passenger list.

RATES MAY BE ADVANCED.

Trans-ocean passenger and freight rates may take a jump after the war, Lindsey said, because of conditions which will increase the cost of operation.

"However this is a matter of speculation," said Lindsey, "and it is too early to give it great consideration."

SHIPS BEING BUILT.

The International Mercantile Marine now has four ships under construction and tentative plans are ready for the construction of several more to handle the anticipation rush of traffic from America to Europe, and the flood of European goods which will be thrust upon the American market.

Cunard and Anchor line officials said they were prepared to handle heavy traffic and that their vessels were being kept in shape that they may be put in service immediately an armistice or peace is declared.

Inquiries coming to the office of C. B. Steck, of the Cunard line, indicating that many of those desiring to return to Europe immediately after the close of the war are foreigners, who have come to America, become wealthy, and now want to go to their home countries and aid in the work of rehabilitation. Applicants for first class passage have been received in several instances from aliens who came to this country in the steerage.

BULGARS WANT TURK ARMY

LONDON, Sept. 19.—A dispatch from Milan to The Daily Telegraph says:

"The visit of King Ferdinand and Enver Pasha to Berlin and German headquarters are taken as events of special significance. A long dispatch from Rome to the Secolo says:

"Despite certain rumors of discontent and agitation among the Old Turks Enver Pasha still is undisputed dictator and arbiter of the military situation in Turkey and enjoys the entire confidence of the Turkish Army. If Enver, therefore goes to Germany it is not a mere visit to courtesy. Its object is military and political.

"The convention between the responsible heads of the Teutonic coalition is for a solution of the grave Balkan problem, in which King Ferdinand is also interested. The situation of the Germanic League is critical, but not yet desperate. A German offensive by the interior lines is no longer possible. Worse still, the defensive power of the Central Empires is declining, owing to lack of reserves and growing inferiority in numbers compared to the Allies.

"That Austria has no reserves is abundantly proved in Transylvania. The enemy is able to take the offensive only at one point, viz Dobrudja, but this will certainly be checked by the combined Russian and Rumanian forces. The concentration of a strong Russian force in Bessarabia was announced months ago, and if Premier Bratiano preferred to anticipate a declaration of war before the Russian expedition was fully ready it was because greater advantages were assured by a surprise movement in Transylvania, and compared with it the German advance in Dobrudja is small. There is nothing to show it will not end in disaster if the great Russian forces are brought into action.

"The Germans perceive this danger and the Bulgarians realise it still better. Bulgaria would have preferred to continue her inactivity of the last nine months. Her sham offensive in Macedonia was only to prevent Rumanian intervention. When this diversion failed Bulgaria was threatened on a new front and naturally demanded further help estimated at half a million at the beginning of the war, had lost 100,000 men, and now is only 400,000 strong. The combined forces of General Sarrail at Saloniki, of the Rumanians along the Danube, and of the Russians in Dobrudja will before long have a crushing superiority.

The 50,000 Germans, which is the number of these auxiliaries of the Kaiser supposed to be in Dobrudja, hardly suffice. The Turks have material in Thrace for an army of about 200,000 men, and the object of King Ferdinand is to obtain 150,000 Turkish troops to oppose them to the Russian and Rumanian troops in Dedrudja and on the Danube, leaving the rest of the Bulgarian army free to defend the Macedonian front. The Turks have hitherto refused to dispose of this army of Thrace, alleging it may be needed at any time for the defense of Constantinople.

"The only condition on which the Turks would consent is compensation by Bulgaria, which Bulgaria is unwilling or unable to give, and hence the visits of Enver Pasha and Ferdinand to discuss the question with the Kaiser and Chancellor Von Betamann Hollweg at German headquarters. A solution of the problem is further complicated by the urgent solicitation of the Magyars for assistance also in Transylvania."

A Syracuse, N.Y., woman has five daughters, all nuns, all members of one order.

Wool or silk fringe edges the foot of the new long Russian tunics, says a Paris authority.

France still has three hundred thousand women ready for munitions work.

The last census shows that there are ten women stationary engineers in the United States.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES TO THE MILBROOK LAWN BOWLERS

Members Were Addressed by the Rev. Dr. Lee, President of the Club—Mr. H. L. Burnham Figured in Two Events—The Speeches.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 21.—The members of the cup rink for 1916 as well as the winners of the Scotch doubles assembled on the green on Friday evening last to receive their trophies. Mr. John Steele, being present to make sure that each recipient received the present intended for him.

Rev. Dr. Lee, President of the Club presented the prizes in a manner befitting the occasion. In presenting the cup to C. W. Richards, the skip of the winning team, Mr. Lee, touched on the splendid season just concluded and of the many enjoyable evenings spent on the green, also the quality of the bowling and of the many close and exciting finishes. He also spoke of the good fellowship that existed between the different rinks, and that incidents like the present were but milestones in life's journey.

In presenting the cup to the winners of 1916, Mr. Lee spoke of the success attained by Mr. H. L. Burnham who skipped the winning rink in the final game, and said that it was unique that Mr. Burnham should have figured in both events, viz. the cup game, and Scotch doubles. He charged Mr. Richards to keep the cup spotless and bright as he received it and to defend it to the best of his ability for the season of 1917. Mr. Richards, in reply spoke of the honour it afforded him to receive the cup on behalf of his rink, all of whom assisted to win it, and gave assurance that he would do all in his power to keep the trophy clean and bright and defend it against all contenders next season. He paid the worthy President a high tribute on his seal for the good of the Club, and of the keen interest he had always taken in its welfare. Mr. H. L. Burnham spoke of the fairness that should characterise sport and that if a man played the game fair he had good reason, if successful, in feeling justly proud. He also paid high tribute to the President's interest in the club, at all times and expressed the wish that he might continue to hold the same position next year. The President then called on the Secretary-treasurer, Mr. G. W. Sayles to make a few remarks, but he believes in the old maxim that "actions speaks louder than words" and instead of making an address, simply asked the boys on behalf of himself and Mrs. Sayles to partake of their hospitality, which was accordingly done.

Each member of the cup rink received a tie pin and Alvin Richards, a silver, gold-lined bon bon dish, and Mr. H. L. Burnham a glass and silver sugar bowl and shell for winning the Scotch Doubles.

Rural School Fair A Success

Most Creditable Showing For First Notable Event

The Belmont Township Rural School Fair, held at the Park here on Tuesday, surpassed the expectations of those responsible for its promotion, and attracted an admiring throng of between 700 and 800 spectators, who took the deepest interest in the exhibits of the rural pupils.

The exhibits of corn, vegetables and flowers was not as large as it would have been had the past season been an auspicious one, but some remarkably good specimens were shown. The poultry was exceptionally good, as was also the collections of weeds, and weed seeds. In the domestic science department the youthful maidens exhibited delicious looking bread and cakes and preserved fruits.

The Citizens' Band attended the event and were very liberal with their selections. The Belmont Women's Institute, who had a booth on the grounds and the various local patriotic button and flag sellers, were well patronized.

Altogether the Fair was a big success and prophesies were heard on every hand that next year's event would be more than twice as good.

The stiff-backed satin which was promised for the future seems not to be meeting with much favour.

Japanned trays should not be washed in water; dip a cloth in alcohol and wipe them off.

Put a little salt on the dishes on which eggs are served and the egg will wash off easily.

To keep home-made catsup fresh after the bottle has been opened is to pour a little olive oil into the bottle after use and before it is put away for the next meal.

INDIANS PREDICT MILD WINTER

Indians assert that the coming winter will be one of the mildest in recent years. They base their assertions on the following signs:

The oak trees have no acorns.

Squirrels are seldom seen.

Muskrats have not started to build.

Fur-bearing animals have thin coats.

There are some other signs they go by for their assertion that the winter will be mild and short. But there seems no good reason to believe that Indians, oak trees, poplars, squirrels, or muskrats know any more about the weather than the Observatory.

ANCIENT TABLETS TELLING OF FLOOD NOW DECIPHERED

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21. —A Sumerian epic that tells the story of the reconstruction of civilization after the deluge has been discovered on one of the famous Nippur tablets in the University of Pennsylvania Museum. Announcement of the discovery and the completion of the translation of the epic was made yesterday by Dr. Stephen H. Langdon, a distinguished Sumerian scholar, and assistant curator of the museum here.

The epic, according to Dr. Langdon, takes up the history of civilization after Paradise, the fall of man and the flood, and is a sequel to the Sumerian epic which he translated a year ago. The fragment which contains the latest story is four and one half inches long and one inch thick. It contains about 300 lines of inscriptions.

It dates from about 2250 B.C., and hence presents a literature older than that of the Babylonians and the Chaldeans. A search for other fragments will be instituted at once among the University's collection.

"The boat, or ark, is mentioned," Dr. Langdon said, "as well as Lahama, the God of the Deluge. It describes the regenerations of the ancient land of Sumeria at the hands of the God of Wisdom, who decreed that it should be the centre of civilization and the Sumerians the rulers of the world."

A Plea For Popular Support Of Ontario Government in the Enforcement of Prohibition

Editor, The Evening Examiner.

Sir,—In the language of a deservedly obscure poet:

"Every little boy alive
Is born a Grit or Conservative."

And many of these little boys grow up to be men, imbued with the idea that they must be prepared to swear that black is white, and if necessary to swallow the conscientious convictions of a lifetime, if by so doing they may aid their party. I am a humble adherent of the Liberal party, but I am fully aware that partyism, when carried to the childish extreme, that it so often is, in Canada, has a narrowing and dwarfing effect upon a man's mind. Is it not well for us to be broadminded enough to realize that after all party is not an end, but is merely a means to attain an end? Mr. Aylesworth took the Globe to task the other day for being willing to attain an end through the medium of a political opponent. While, of course, conceding Mr. Aylesworth's great abilities, I am unable to accept this narrow interpretation of Liberalism. A Conservative government succeeded in June, 1914, in retaining power in Ontario with the aid of the liquor vote. I do not know whether our Conservative friends are proud of this or not. Shortly after the election a temperance member of the Legislature rose and suggested that the Government do something. The Cabinet rocked with laughter. It was the most amusing suggestion they had ever heard. It was the joke of the season. The theatres had been rather dull lately, but the Ontario Legislature was now the place in which to get a good laugh. The temperance member was really too funny. He must have been drinking. However, they were obliged to him for affording them so much amusement. Our legislators certainly had a merry time, and the fun lasted for months. But meanwhile the tide of public opinion had been rising. A lively storm was brewing. And Mr. Hearst was a good enough sailor to see that if he did not immediately trim his sails and run before the breeze, his little barque would go under. So he stopped laughing and promised us prohibition in September. And now he is about to commence what may prove to be a rather difficult task, the enforcing of this partially prohibitive law. Be assured that every means will be employed to discredit this law, and to make the people believe that it cannot be enforced so that after the war former conditions may be resumed. The usual stock arguments will be used against it, and even clergymen will be asked to preach that it is contrary to the teaching of the New Testament. The liquor men are bitter, and the things they are saying against the Government would not look well in print. I once heard of a man who only weighed ninety-seven pounds, but ninety pounds of that was backbone. I wish we could find that man. We need him now to lead the Government.

I have heard that a dog with a piece of meat in his mouth was once crossing a stream on a log, when seeing the shadow of the meat in the water, he grabbed at the shadow, thereby losing the piece of meat and getting nothing. Now this dog seemed to know so little about water that I am inclined to think that he was not a temperance dog. Possibly he was a beer-and-wine dog. There are quite a number of those dogs around and he may be one of them. So I have no hesitation in asking him to represent for a moment the liquor men of Ontario. The Stream of Time we will label June, 1914, and the dog we will label General Election. And, again with the kind consent of the dog, we will place in his mouth a bag containing $250,000. A little boy named Rowell is holding up a piece of banish-the-bar meat, the shadow of which the dog mistakes for another piece of retain-the-bar meat, many pieces of which have been handed out by another little boy named Hearst. The dog grabs at the shadow, drops the bag of money into the stream, and gets nothing. Mr. Editor, did you ever spend $250,000 foolishly? Did you ever pay out that amount for something that you could quite easily have obtained for nothing? If so, you will readily understand the present feelings of the liquor men. They now realize that they are out of pocket $250,000, and will lose their business besides. Howell would have done the job for them a quarter of a million cheaper! But, Sir, why should a Liberal worry about all of this? It is simply a causus belli between Gooderham and Hearst, and we will allow them to go into the back yard and fight it out. In the meantime, whether Mr. Hearst arrived at the prohibition station via the $250,000 route or not, the important fact for us is that he has arrived, and that he is there with both feet, and that he needs the moral support of every good citizen.

I once knew a good old lady who was remarkable for the mildness of her language. If anyone did anything wrong, the severest thing that she would say was: "It isn't pretty." If that good lady had been alive in June, 1914, and had witnessed the great crowd of professed temperance men who went to the polls and deliberately voted to keep the bar-rooms open, she certainly would have said "It isn't pretty." Charity, I hope thy name is Smith. I therefore wish to urge on behalf of all those who voted on that occasion in a way that "wasn't pretty," that, at that time, they were unaware of what the Kaiser was about to do. But now the war is on. Many of our soldiers have made the supreme sacrifice, and I fear that many more will do so. Many homes are desolate. Canada is in mourning. Then surely every loyal man and woman, irrespective of religious creed or party affiliations, will give his and her moral support to Mr. Hearst in his efforts to suppress something that is helping the Kaiser. For, be it remembered, Mr. Hearst's little programme is only a small part of a world-wide movement. It is only a link in a chain; but all of the links are necessary. We are told that through this war we are suffering for our sins, that God is chastening us for our transgressions. Well, I never studied theology. I am conscious of many faults and shortcomings; but, so far as I am aware, no one has ever called me a theologian. But even a layman knows that Joshua, although possibly as able as Joffre, could not win until he had first killed Achan. And have we any guarantee that this war will not drag along indefinitely until both the British and Canadian governments put down the liquor traffic with an iron hand? Our armies are very powerful and they are becoming more powerful every day. But, nevertheless, we cannot win this war one minute sooner than God wills us to do so. Will the retention of the liquor traffic by our Federal Government and by the British Government make Him more likely to grant us an early victory? It is not pleasant to think that during the past two terrible years, when leading men have been urging the British people to wear their old clothes, do without motor cars, and practice other economics, that in Ontario the bar rooms have been kept wide open, and every man who wished to cool himself in summer or warm himself in winter with a Hearst cocktail or a Hanna highball, had only to visit a convenient bar. And it is still more unpleasant to remember that at such a time of stress this heavy load was forced upon us at the instance of a very small minority of the people of this Province. Sir, whatever the issue may be, minority rule is something that every man with British blood in his veins should resent, and I trust that the day is not far distant when the people of Canada will sufficiently appreciate their privileges as to rise in their might and teach the politicians the much-needed lesson that they are not our masters, but our servants, and that the will of the majority of the people must prevail.

In the meantime let us hope that the sixteenth of September, which I trust will rival in brilliance even the first of July, will soon be eclipsed by that brighter day, so fast approaching, when our Federal Government will enact a real prohibitory law.

J. C. SMITH.

Millennium's Coming Is Not Foretold

Toronto, September 20. — The beast that rose from the sea in the Apocalypse might be interpreted as a German submarine or the German Kaiser in these days. Rev. W. B. Smith, B. A., in the course of a lecture on the Book of Revelations at the Victoria College Alumni, said that the book deals with local events and conditions in Asia Minor. Emperor worship was represented in Nero, who was the beast and the Anti-Christ. The lecturer said that there was no basis in the Book of Revelation for calculating as to the end of the world, or the millennium. The early Christians were deceived by such beliefs, as they are to-day. Figures of speech are taken literaly, and result in curious and morbid people who neglect the present for a spectacular second coming of Christ. The teaching of the Apocalypse is that the conflict of good and evil is continually going on, but that righteousness must prevail, and the devil cast into the lake of fire at last.

Rev. C. E. Cragg, B.D., spoke at the morning session on the Old and New Evangelism. He regarded Billy Sunday as a man with a message for his time. He believed that the baseball evangelist, despite his slang and stagy methods, wielded a great spiritual power among the people, and that his work was of a valuable and permanent character.

The alumni meeting continues until Thursday.

People of Germany Longing For Peace

Amsterdam, Sept. 20. — A coalition government for Germany is urged by the Berlin Tageblatt in a long leader by Hans Sivkovich, a member of the Reichstag.

"Never since the beginning of the war," he writes, "has the German people awaited with such tension and apprehension the forthcoming meeting of the Reichstag. The period since the last meeting has brought us successes, but also many difficulties, military set backs and new enemies.

"After two years of fighting, blood shed and self-denial, the peace for which every heart longs is still at an immeasurable distance. The fighting lust of the enemy has been revived by Russian successes, and the entry of Roumania. The whole people stand at the gate, waiting and asking.

"The Reichstag leaders will have to listen to speeches stronger than ever on the events of the past few weeks. Therefore it were wise to consider carefully whether the leaders of all our great parties should not be called together to form a coalition Ministry."

Police To Enforce Temperance Act

Hamilton, September 20.—The city council last night held a special meeting to deal with the proposed Hydro-radial route matter, and to appoint all the members of the police force officers to enforce the temperance act. The police officials will do this that the city may receive the fines imposed for breaches of the act when they prosecute, instead of turning over the money to the Provincial Treasurer.

IRISH NATIONALIST EX-M.P. IS KILLED

Dublin, September 19—Lieut. Thos. Michael Kettle, professor of Economics in the National University, was killed in action at Ginchy. He was a brother-in-law of the late Sheehy Skeffington, who was shot during the recent uprising in Ireland. In 1906 Professor Kettle made a tour of the United States and Canada in the interest of the Irish Cause.

Professor Kettle was born in 1880, the son of a pioneer of the Irish land movement. He was a lawyer and a journalist, and from 1906 to 1910 represented East Tyrone in parliament. He was attached to the 16th Irish Division, raised in Munster and Connaught, and previous to going to the front was heard all over Ireland in the interests of recruiting.

Urge Conscription To Include Ireland

London, September 20.—The application of conscription to Ireland is suggested by the London Daily Mail in an article calling attention to the urgent necessity for obtaining more men for the army—a problem, which it says, has engaged the full attention of the government. The newspaper suggests two other methods for adding to the army, namely, the raising of the age limit from 41 to 45 years, and the combing out of the young men from exempted occupations, of whom it estimates there are 1,250,000 physically fit who have not yet been drafted into the army.

The Times military correspondent, discussing the same problem, says:

"There can only be one rule for the allies, namely, to place in the field every able bodied man that we can raise. The time has arrived for drastic reform in the administration of the service acts, and if this action is not taken quickly and thoroughly Germany will beat us in organizing her man-power.

"Compulsion for Ireland is necessary if the Irish divisions are to be maintained. As to Great Britain raising the age limit, it is not pressingly needed until three or four million men ensconced in civil occupations and sheltered from service have been combed out."

The Daily Telegraph says the government is about to appoint a committee for the special purpose of this combing out, of which Austen Chamberlain will be the chairman and Lord Middleton vice-chairman.

The Easiest Way to End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

BOARD OF WORKS COMMITTEE ACCEDES TO MR. HILL'S REQUEST

Will Permit the Construction of Two Bay Windows on the Street Line and Also a Nine Inch Wall in the Third Storey of the New Addition to the Crown Building —City Engineer Applies for Two Week's Holidays —The Dust Nuisance.

GENERAL BUSINESS

At a meeting of the Board of Works Committee of the City Council, held last evening, it was recommended that permission be given to Mr. W. H. Hill to construct two bay windows on the west side of a new addition to the Crown building, at the northeast corner of Hunter and Water streets, and also to construct a nine-inch wall in the third storey of the building, instead of a heavier wall, as required by the building by-law. The bay windows encroach on the street line. Similar permission was granted when Mr. Hill built a new addition to the building some months ago. The committee also recommended that the city construct a new entrance into a lane on the north side of the building. City Engineer Parsons was of the opinion that Mr. Hill should pay for this work, whereas both Ald. Weir and Ald. Duncan contended that the city should bear the cost.

"He's spending them for his own benefit," put in Ald. Saunders.

Ald. McIntyre—"I don't see why we should do this work. We refused to give the Dustless Sweeper Co. an entrance to their property."

Ald. Weir—"That was a different thing."

It was moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Mayor Duffus, that the work be done."

Ald. McIntyre—"You are ignoring the City Engineer's recommendation. You wouldn't do that last night. You only do it when it suits you."

With this remark the matter was closed. The recommendation will go on to the Council for ratification.

Two Weeks' Holiday.

"As head of the department, did Mr. Parsons consult you and mutually agree upon a suitable time?" enquired Ald. Stratton of Ald. McIntyre. The latter replied in the negative.

Ald. Stratton—"Then he is overriding the head of the department."

"It seems quite a lot of holidays. Two weeks at the first of the year, two weeks now, and a day whenever he wants it," remarked Ald. Saunders. The holidays at the first of the year, referred to by Ald. Saunders, represents holidays that the Engineer failed to get last year, owing to the rush of business due to street paving and other work that were under way at the time.

It was moved by Ald. Stratton and seconded by Ald. Duncan, that the matter of holidays be left with Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Board, with power to act.

Danger from Flood.

Mr. O'Connell, Concession street, claims that he is in danger of being flooded out. Ald. McIntyre and City Engineer Parsons will look into the matter and, if necessary, have the ditch cleaned out.

Quotations on different grades of road metal from trap rock to crushed limestone was received by the Committee. It was decided to repair the roads with a good grade of gravel, which is all the city can afford at the present time. The appropriation has been reduced to about two thousand dollars. This will have to cover the needs of the next three months. Ald. McIntyre intimated that he would rather resign his position as chairman of the Board of Works Committee than wind up the year with an overdraft.

The matter of levelling up the roadway between some sections of the street will be taken up with Mr. G. W. Ferguson, local manager of the Peterborough Radial Co., and if the original agreement is still in force, whereby the Company pays for the cost of the work, the necessary repairs will be made. Some months ago the Provincial Government acquired possession of the Electric Power Company, together with its various properties. The agreement in question may be effected by this change.

The Dust Nuisance.

A petition signed by the residents of Bolivar street, requesting relief from the dust nuisance, was received. It was agreed that no action be taken this year as the appropriation would not permit of added expenditures. A similar request was received from a portion of Perry street.

"Chances are that it will rain," remarked Ald. Saunders.

Ald. Stratton said he predicted rain last Spring.

Some of the aldermen were of the opinion that the present method of compelling the entire city to pay for the cost of oiling and watering the streets should be changed so that the residents on the streets that did not receive oil or water would not have to bear a share of the cost. Street oiling and watering could be done as a local improvement so that only the residents on the streets supplied with this form of public service would have to pay. As it is now, people have to bear a share of the cost whether or not the street on which they reside is oiled or watered.

Letter Was Late.

The Township of North Monaghan, through the legal firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, addressed a letter to the Board of Works Committee, giving the city a limited time in which to repair certain streets over which the outfall sewer had been constructed. If this work was not done within the time specified a writ would be issued for damages to the highways of the municipality.

City Engineer Parsons informed the Committee that the work was done before the letter was even received. He said that one of the streets referred to was nothing but a sand road and was now in better condition than it was before the excavation was made for the sewer.

The Committee will recommend that the city secure an acknowledgement from the proper authorities of the city's rights to the road allowance between McDonnell and London streets and now partly occupied by buildings in connection with the St. Vincent's Orphanage. Action was taken at the request of Mr. D. W. Dumble, an interested property owner in that vicinity. The Committee was inclined to recommend that Mr. Dumble remove a fence on London street, which encroaches on city property.

STEEL ROOF TRUSS FALLS ON JAMES BARTLETT, FROM SYDNEY, N.S.

St. Catharines, September 20 — James Bartlett of Sydney, N.S., engaged on the addition to the mill of the Ontario Paper Co., at Thorold, was instantly killed yesterday and his body mangled in a frightful fashion by the falling of a heavy steel roof truss upon which he was standing. Six of these trusses had been raised, and the seventh was just being placed in position when it gave way, and carried the other six down to the girders, twenty feet below, one of them landing on top of Bartlett. He leaves a wife and family in Sydney. Several other workmen engaged on the structure escaped his fate, only one, Levi Taylor, being injured. Coroner Herod has ordered an inquest.

Recruits to the number of 3,175 were gathered in Canada during the past two weeks.

This brings the total of men raised to 365,000.

During the past two weeks there were raised in the Ottawa district, 278 men; Montreal, 705; Toronto, 469; London, 367; Maritime Provinces, 238; Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 229; British Columbia, 543, and Alberta, 346.

WILL REDUCE THE NUMBER OF RACE TRACKS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—The adoption by the Dominion Commons of an act reducing the number of horse tracks in Canada, particularly near the United States frontier is a probability of the near future. The Miller bill passed some years ago sought to do this as well as to doo away with book making. Racing men, however, found a loop hole in the act and revived a number of charterers secured by letters patent some years ago. Consequently horse racing increased despite the supposedly restrictive legislation. The Minister of Justice is reported to be preparing a new act.

Aikens Property Was Well Insured

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

MILLBROOK, Sept. 21—It was learned to-day that the crop and buildings belonging to Thos. H. Aikens of Cavan destroyed in yesterday's fire were well covered by insurance and that the actual loss will be comparatively small. The details of the property consumed in the fire had not been compiled this morning and a statement of the total damage could not be secured. It was stated, however, that the first estimate of about $15 000 may not be an excessive exaggeration. It is now generally accepted that the fire was caused by a spark from Louis Morton's threshing machine.

LAST NIGHT OF YELLOW MENACE

The million dollar serial drama, in two reels, 'The Yellow Menace,' will be shown for the last time to-night at the Royal Theatre. The Third Episode, with all the Broadway Star features, will be put on to-night as well as the First and Second Episodes, which have already been given, for the benefit of those who have not seen them before. Crowds were turned away last night. Be early and secure good seats and don't miss this great treat. Two performances this evening.

ARRESTED IN TORONTO WAS REMANDED TO-DAY

Chas. C. Joron of Montreal, was remanded in police court this morning on a triple charge of theft, obtaining money under false pretenses and surreptitiously beating his board. He was arrested by the Toronto police on a wire from Chief Thompson and Detective Newhall brought him down last night. It is alleged among several other charges that he issued a worthless cheque for three dollars.

WANTED—Girls' & Women good pay, steady work. Apply The Quaker Oats Company.

NOTED ARTIST IN THE ROCKIES

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—A message from Lake Louise received at headquarters of the C.P.R. to-day says: John S. Sargent the famous American artist has spent the last month painting in the Canadian Rockies staying at Lake Louise and Field, and camping out in the Yoho Valley and at Lake Ohara a beautiful lake, seven thousand feet above sea level to which a trail has recently been constructed by the government. When at Field Sargent met James Lane Allan the well-known American author who has spent the summer in the Canadian Rockies writing, climbing, and fishing. At Lake Ohara Sargent painted an open air portrait of his Norwegian guide Tax Carl who was much annoyed because the artist would not let him comb his hair. In the words of Carl, Sargent was tickled to death by the scenery.

OWNERSHIP OF RIFLE QUESTION IN COURT

The ownership of a shotgun is involved in an action opened before County Magistrate Langley this morning. Russell Darling of Smith, was charged with having in his possession a gun belonging to Isaac Archer, which was found by County Constable Moore under search warrant executed a week ago. Archer alleges that the gun disappeared on or about October 30th, 1915.

Mr. Jos. Wearing appeared for the defendant and Crown Attorney Hatton and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the other parties. By consent of counsel an enlargement was arranged for two weeks.

ADMITTED ON ACCOUNT OF FARM EMPLOYMENT

In addition to those who passed the High School Entrance Examination in June, the following have been admitted on account of farm employment. Certificates will be given for them in the near future:

Arthur Backus, Ross Bullied, Peter Clancy, Bruce Clark, Wilfrid Clough, V. Fennel, Jos. Foster, Patrick Lynch, Clifford Rushaw, Jesse J. Smith.

Police Court Again Without a Drunk

Another day without a drunk in police court. Reference to the fact may dispel the charm, but it seems necessary to remark that without the usual array of bleary-eyed drunks penned in the police court dock there seems to be something lacking from the usual series of occurrences that comprise a day's experience. Detective Newhall spent Wednesday in Toronto on official duty and this morning remarked that he had not seen even one intoxicated person there.

Earl of Faversham Killed In Action

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, September 21.—Lieut.Col. Earl of Faversham was killed in action on September 15 while leading his battalion. He was an Oxford graduate and large land owner, and was Lieut.Col. commanding the 21st Battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps, wich he raised. He was a member of Parliament from 1906 to 1915. He married Lady Marjorie Greville, eldest daughter of the Earl of Warwick.

Rioting In German Cities More Serious

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 21.—Reuter's Copenhagen correspondent says: "Encounters between civilians and military in Germany lately has assumed alarming proportions. Last week several street fights occurred with fatal results. There was another Sunday night when civilians armed with knives attacked a party of marines near the railway killing two and mortally wounding others. The assailants escaped."

Recent Offensive Cost 2,000 Canadian

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, September 21.—Information received at Militia Headquarters indicate that the casualties sustained by the Canadians in the fighting of Monday and Tuesday around Courcelette and Martinpuich fairly heavy. According to present information the total casualties suffered by the Dominion's troops were in the neighbourhood of 2,000. This included about 400 killed in action, about 1,200 wounded, and over 300 missing. While the price paid for the gains made may be considered a heavy one, the casualties suffered are not nearly so great proportionately as those suffered by the Canadians in former defensive actions. The casualties at St. Julien totalled over 10,000, and at Zillebeke they number over 13,000. It would thus appear that holding trenches against a storm of high explosive shells is more costly than offensive work over ground cleared beforehand by similar shells from one's own guns. No details are yet available here as to what regiments suffered particularly. That the Canadians have done well is indicated by the brief cable received from Generay Byng by Premier Borden, but details of their noble deeds are sadly lacknig.

TELEGRAM FROM SON A TOUCHING ONE

A telegram was delivered at the home of a certain young subaltern a few days ago, and his mother, receiving it, hesitated to open it as visions quickly called up possible casualties even to the supreme sacrifice. She carried it gingerly to her husband and in that short time had reached a state of excitement that was not reflected by the husband's collected reception of the threatening missive. "There's only one thing to do with telegrams," he said, and illustrated his idea by ripping open the envelope. And this is what he read to his wife: "Dear Dad, please send me 18 (pounds) as soon as you possibly can. Love."

PHONOGRAPH RECITAL

The J. M. Greene Music Company announce that the phonograph recital with the new Edison Phonograph will open to-morrow night in the Studio, and will be held each Friday night until further notice. The public is cordially invited. The programme will open to-morrow.

Concrete Bottom In Sewer Trench

City Engineer Parsons has dug into another difficult section of Park Street, immediately under the C.P.R. crossing on Park Street, at which location the outfall sewer is struggling through quicksand and a heavy blue clay. The heavy pipes are being laid in four inches of concrete to avoid the disjointed conditions that Romaine Street boasted. Not only is the new sewer line at this point being bedded on concrete, but on both sides and across the top the City Engineer has ordered the extra reinforcement. Foreman John Thirnbeck has been confronted by an exceedingly difficult position, and the workmen themselves deserve a word of praise for the obstacles they are steadily overcoming.

RUMOUR THAT HANNA IS TO RESIGN

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—It is again rumoured that Hon. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, has resigned. He declined to make any statement this morning for publication.

LIEUT. H. G. MANNING
Brother of Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton, who is officially reported admitted to Rouen Hospital, seriously wounded.

A FINE RECORD FOR MR. D. H. MOORE

Presented With Solid Gold Watch by Sun Life Company

Mr. D. H. Moore of the Sun Life Assurance Company, is justly proud of a practical recognition of his ability, on having had presented to him by the Sun Life Company, a handsome solid gold watch, which is a reward for his successful efforts in retaining consecutive membership in the McCauley Club for the past five years. In order to retain this membership the agent must write $100,000 of life insurance, or over, in a year. The record, which is engraved on the inside of the watch presented to Mr. Moore, shows that for the past five years Mr. Moore has not only retained his membership, but has a handsome margin to spare. Mr. Moore is justly proud of the fact that he has made the above record.

OLD RESIDENT IS IT THE CITY

Mr. Thos. Kennaley, of Ashland, Wis., called into the Examiner Office to-day to renew his subscription to the Examiner.

Mr. Kennaley left Peterborough thirty-four years ago. He was the first proprietor of the Albion Hotel, on Hunter Street, East City. In his trip over to Peterborough from Wisconsin, Mr. Kennaley states that he stopped off at a great many places, and he found Peterborough was as busy and presented as fine an appearance as any small city he had been in. He is in town for a week, and is endeavouring to look up any old friends that may happen so be here yet.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

A number of iron girders belonging to the city and at present located in the East Ward will be removed to some other location. The City Engineer has been asked to secure prices for the material which may be sold as junk.

DRAIN ON PARK STREET.

Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Board of Works has been given authority to decide whether a drain is needed at the corner of Park and Dublin streets in the vicinity of Blade's greenhouse.

REPAIRS TO SIDEWALK

Repairs will be made to the sidewalk in front of George Street Methodist church. Two blocks of the sidewalk have been raised by the action of the frost.

REFUSE BOXES

An agreement concerning the instal lation of twenty illuminated refuse boxes at various points throughout the city has been sent back to City Solicitor Gordon for minor alterations.

MILITARY NEWS

New information has reached the local post office as to the packing of parcels for Canadian prisoners in Germany. The Department has been notified by the British post office that many parcels sent from Canada to prisoners of war are being received in London in damaged condition, so that frequently they have to be repacked before they can be forwarded to Holland for transmission to Germany. The British post office adds that in most cases the damage appears to be due to the fact that the parcels were inadequately packed by the senders The public are to be warned, therefore, that parcels for prisoners of war, unless they are very strongly packed, will probably arrive in such a condition as to be of little or no use to the recipients.

Ordinary thin card board boxes, such as shoe boxes and thin wooden boxes should not be used, nor does a single sheet of ordinary brown paper afford sufficient protection. Even where proper materials are used it is important that the contents should be tightly packed so as not to shake about during transit. The following forms are recommended:

(1) Strong, durable card board or strawboard boxes, those made of corrugated card board and having lids which completely enclose the sides of the boxes are the most suitable.

(2) Tin boxes, such as are used for packing biscuits.

(3) Strong wooden boxes.

(4) Several folds of stout packing paper.

Mrs. Wm. Hill, Union street, received a cable to-day from her son, Gunner Holly Hill, Canadian Field Artillery, that he is doing well. He is now in a Kentish hospital. Gunner Hill was reported seriously injured a few weeks ago, being injured in the ankle, hip and side, and his condition at that time was considered serious.

THE WAR LOAN.

Have you "done your bit" by subscribing to the new Canadian war loan? This is a field in which almost everybody can lend a helping hand. "If you can't fight, pay," is an appeal made in respect of another war service. But in this case you are not paying; you are making a sound investment at a fair rate of interest, thus helping yourself as well as helping the good cause. The loan will be well subscribed. But don't let the big fellows have it all. Buy a bond, a large one, if you have the means, but if your surplus cash will not allow that, put your name down for one of the smaller bonds. The more hundred dollar bonds there are in this issue the better it will be for the country, for the participation of the mass of the people in this loan is much to be desired.

DICK LOADMAN LOST IN A SENSATIONAL BOUT TO CHAMPION WILLIAMS

BUFFALO, Sept. 20.—Kid Williams, the bantam champion, took Dick Loadman into camp in a whirlwind, sensational toe-to-toe battle at the Auditorium, but he couldn't take from the Lockport boy his nickname of "Fighting Dick". Instead, Loadman left the ring with as many loud and hearty roars of approval for his game and willing battle as there were cheers for the champion. It was a battle worth waiting a whole season to see.

William is every inch a champion. There's nothing in the ring game, that he hasn't got, and there isn't anything connected with the hook, swing and jab pastime that he didn't use on Loadman last night. When the crowd wasn't roaring its delight at the game onslaught of Loadman or the finished execution of the champion, it was sitting in silent wonder at the manner in which Loadman was able to stand up under the terrific punches of Williams.

DICK TIRED, BUT GAME

Round after round, from start to finish, Williams jabbed, crossed, hooked and swung his right and left to Loadman's jaw, with a force sufficient to stop a lightweight, but there was Loadman, taking them on the chin and face, actually smiling, and half the time even disdaining to block or protect himself. No human being could stand it for long and in the tenth Dick was tired and slowed to a walk, as the boys say, still there, but ready to step down the long road if the bout had gone a few more rounds.

Williams didn't miss a punch. The secret of his fighting reputation was revealed last night. Straight and true his punches went to the mark, left, right and repeat. When he shifted to the body his aim was just as good. Some of the blows were blocked or deflected by Dick, but they were not wild or aimless. Williams is the straightest hitter Buffalo has seen.

MAKES CHAMPION DO HIS BEST

True to the promise, Loadman made the champion fight. He walked right into a terrible melee when the first bell rang and he never stopped. The champion couldn't get away from a fighter like Loadman without some beating. In the third, fifth and seventh rounds Dick had Williams in retreat before a fusilade of punches propelled with real power and strength. In the third he reeled Williams with a mighty swing to the ear that had the crowd on its feet and when Williams went to his corner there was a trickle of blood from his ear.

In the fifth Dick again forced Williams to the ropes with a succession of right and left swings, to body and head, that kept the champion busy blocking and sidestepping. Even then he didn't avoid all the punches and many a resounding whack sounded off the ribs of the kid and smacked solidly alongside his chin and ear. Again in the seventh Loadman tore in with all his batteries working, both hands flying and plenty of punch in them until brought to a halt with a clinch sought by the champion.

In the eighth Williams stopped this sort of thing by standing toe to toe and meeting Dick, and here he showed the value of a straight punch over a swing. His punches went to the body and head, rat-a-tat-tat, throwing Loadman off balance and destroying the effectiveness of his hitting. And here Dick began to tire. Williams would outbox him for a half minute or so, then gathering strength, Dick would hury himself into another desprate rally and bring the crowd shouting to its feet. Dick's nose bled a little in this round.

GREAT TENTH ROUND.

In the tenth Williams tried his best to end it and Loadman, the terrified pace and Williams' punches, beginning to tell, took the worst mauling of the battle. Williams' hands worked like piston rods. No waste effort, no missed blows, all straight, hard and sharp to their mark. A left to the body lifted Williams a bit and a straight right almost turned him around, but he was back with both hands flying, even if they were wide of the mark. The bout ended with the two head to head, punching vigorously and hard to the body.

"I knew he was a tough boy; my toughest bout since I had Pete Herman at New Orleans," said Williams, and he usually doesn't say much.

"I made him fight and I kept trying to win a knockout every minute," said Dick to an admiring crowd that surged about his corner. "I guess he knows he was in a battle."

And Dick guessed right.

BOXING FANS LOOK FOR ONE SLASHING BATTLE ON FRIDAY

You can write your ticket the ten-round scrap between Billy Allen and Young Taylor, at Paro Royal, Friday night, will lay over the Welsh-White hugging match a city block for excitement. Both the contenders in the local scrap will go after each other in dead earnest. There is no title at stake, nor will there be a barrel of dough to battle for. It will be the case of a real good boy endeavoring to come back against an ambitious youngster with the whole world in front of him.

There is no need rehearsing the facts of the two former clashes between Allen and Taylor at Syracuse. Billy had a good draw on each occasion, but was given a sharp deal in the second bout when Taylor was awarded the fight with Battling Johnson. This was the goal each sought, but there appears no doubt the Canadian boy was discriminated against.

Those who believe Allen has not comeback, should visit the scene of Friday's mill and watch him. His old speed is there and he can hit quite as hard as he ever did. Never a slugger, Billy used his aggressive tactics every second of a round, playing a tattoo all over his opponent, and there isn't a battler living whom he has met that can say Billy didn't use him up pretty badly. This includes Abe Attell, Tommy O'Toole, Jimmy Walsh, and all the good ones he fought four years ago.

Three slashing preliminaries are on the cards and the show promises to be one of the best ever staged across the river. Seats are on sale at Allen's billiard parlor, 173 Bank street.

It was announced this morning that Alf. Smith, the well-known hockey and lacrosse coach, will referee the bout. Alf's experience in the sporting arena will stand in his favor and he should have no difficulty making good.

CONVICTED OF ARMY FRAUD.

London, September 19.—Lucien Asseling, an inspector in the Army Clothing Department, was to-day sentenced to five years penal servitude on the charge of accepting bribes from contractors to pass their goods and also of obtaining $7,000 under false pretenses by instigating another man, in the name of a fictitious firm, to make a tender for a supply of razors and knifes, less than half of which were alleged to have been delivered to the government.

Charges are pending against other official departments, and the Judge who sentenced Asseling suggested that the government should overhaul the whole system of purchasing department and place business men at their heads.

LAKEFIELD'S ANNUAL FAIR WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Large Attendance, Fine Weather and Gratifying Showing in all Branches Made the Event One of the Best in Record of the Society—Many Peterboro Visitors Were in Attendance

Favoured by a beautiful September day, with a warmth in the air that had been absent for several days, the annual exhibition of the Lakefield Agricultural Society held yesterday on the fine grounds of the Society at Lakefield, was a gratifying success. The attendance was splendid, fully up to, if not ahead of, the big turnout last year. For this the popularity of motoring must be thanked to a considerable extent. From all parts of the district the gasoline propelled vehicles brought merry parties to the exhibition and there were scores of cars on the grounds and packed outside the entrance. Many Peterborough people went out on the noon train and many others motored out during the afternoon, with the result that the city was well represented. The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition had many representatives on hand, including President Geo. A. Gillespie, and R. Denne, R. M. Glover, T. H. Hooper, J. H. Garbutt, J. Cox and other directors. Among other Peterborough people at the exhibition were Mayor Duffus, Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., Chris. Graham, W. S. Conway, W. G. Ferguson, F. L. Roy, John Riddell, Jas. Davidson, Lt.-Col. Johnston, Lieut. Quinn of the 247th Battalion, and Lieut. Gordon Graham.

A splendid showing was made in all lines of live stock and farm products. The main building contained an excellent display of fancy work, embroidery, etc., grains, fruits and roots. The grains and roots display was larger than at the Peterborough Industrial and the fruit exhibits were also good. The main building was a centre of attraction during the afternoon.

Some very fine horses were shown in the different classes and the cattle display was also good, especially in Durhams and grades. The poultry exhibition was large, with Geo. Buller of Peterborough heading the field. The local fancier carried off about seventy prizes.

Great interest was taken in the judging of the different carriage and roadster horses which took place during the afternoon.

The speeding in the ring events were the big feature of the afternoon from a spectacular point of view and of course the free-for-all attracted the most attention. There was a splendid field of horses in this event, the entries being Jimmy Direct, F. Montgomery, Peterborough; Dr. Johnston, Ed Jones, Peterborough; Ora Tariff, C. Fife, Keene; Sedelia, R. Elmhirst, Keene; Gilford Boy, G. Barrie; Gilford and Princie, T. Hetherington, Peterborough. The improvements to the track allowed some splendid racing. Although Jimmy Direct won in straight heats he had opposition all the way.

The dog race provided plenty of fun and excitment. Bruce Charlton's "Tige" proved the fastest canine, as well as a master of strategy.

The novelty race, in which the contestants had to hitch up their horses, trot a lap, walk a lap and then unhitch, was another interesting event. Mr. J. Elmhirst carried off first honours in this event.

EXHIBITION NOTICES

There were quite a number of special exhibits displayed at the Lakefield Fair, the more important of which are described below. It was remarked that not a solitary exhibit of agricultural or dairy machinery or farm implements was shown—not even a cream separator which rarely fails to put in an appearance at this and other fairs.

The Lakefield merchants, too, were very shy; one only one of their number having sufficient enterprise to put up a business exhibit, but he was too modest to allow an extended notice to be made of it, although it was a creditable one.

HEINTZMAN & CO. PIANOS.

In the main building the firm of Heintzman and Co., piano manufacturers of Toronto were well represented, and music lovers had a good opportunity of inspecting the "aristocrat among pianos"—the piano that was awarded the gold medal at the Toronto Exhibition. This exhibit was made by Mr. H. B. Britton of Peterborough, the district representative for the Heintzman Company, Limited, who is also in charge of the new Peterborough branch Heintzman warerooms recently opened on George street near the "Examiner" Office.

This exhibit had quite a number of callers and Mr. Britton's assistant gave courteous attention to all and exemplified the numerous claims of the Heintzman piano in a practical manner. The handsome type of upright mahogany piano shown reflected the high artistic skill of the expert piano hulider. These Heintzman pianos have a double-repeating action, and have been the choice of some of the greatest musicians of the world, whose testimonies were given in neatly printed booklets given away at the fair.

A Victor-Victrolia was also shown in a handsome cabinet form, which proved an additional attraction. Owing, however, to the clouds of dust, which were blown into the building the exhibitor was compelled to close his display to protect it from damage.

THE "CHEVROLET" CAR.

All eyes in the main building were attracted to the rising favorite "Chevrolet" motor car, which was exhibited by The Manning Garage, Water street Peterborough. The fine dashing model of the Chevrolet shown was an object of attraction to hundreds of visitors, as it was in splendid view of all who entered the main building.

The Chevrolet models are powerful, easy runnnig machines, and the specifications justify its claims that, for commercial and professional use, or for pleasure, the Chevrolet for 1917 will extend its circle of patrons in this territory. The Manning Garage has been fortunate in securing the agency for the Chevrolet. The members of the firm are capable, hard workers, and expert and reliable in their business dealings.

Over 20,000 Canadians enjoy the pleasures of motoring with the Chevrolet, proving it to be a well equipped automobile, at a price they could afford to pay. The six passenger touring car is priced at $650. Such has been the phenomenal success of this car that modern methods of building and industrial expansion have been taxed to the limit to supply the demand. To-day the Chevrolet is built in the extensive Chevrolet Works at Oshawa —one of the largest and most complete automobile factories in Canada, backed by a million-dollar corporation in which every shareholder is a Canadian.

Mr. Bert Manning of the Manning Garage was personally in charge of the Chevrolet exhibit and as he is well known in Lakefield and vicinity, he was greeted by numerous callers.

GRAFTON & COMPANY'S CLASSY CLOTHING.

The representatives of the well known clothing firm of Grafton & Co., of Peterborough, made another attractive showing of their high-grade clothing for fall. The exhibit occupied a commanding position on the Fair grounds and the brisk September breeze which prevailed stirred up its flags, bunting and other decorations to unusual breeziness. The samples shown of their fall models were such as appealed to the discriminating dresser, for they were looked over and over, not only for their fine proportions and excellent material, but for the moderate cost, as revealed by the price tickets. The oftener that Grafton & Co. make a public display of this clothing, the more widespread does their reputation become as an authority on "what men should wear."

This exhibit was mainly intended to serve as an illustration of the varied styles and prices of men's and boys' fall clothing carried in Grafton & Co.'s large branch store in Peterborough, where under its careful, systematic and methodical management, the business has been growing larger and larger year by year.

The Fair grounds were dotted all over with Grafton & Co. attractive signs and coloured bulletins, and were conspicuous before the eyes of the thousands of visitors. Mr. Hughes, of the Peterborough store, was in charge of the exhibit.

THE FORD CAR THE CAR FOR FARMERS.

The farmers of Smith, Ennismore and Dummer who attended the Lakefield Fair had the opportunity of inspecting the new 1917 Ford Motor Car. It was well demonstrated on the fair grounds by several experts from the Duffus Garage, Simcoe street, Peterborough. Mr. Jos. J. Duffus, the well-known proprietor and Ford enthusiast was also present.

Ford prices have again been reduced. The six passenger Touring Car is now priced at only $495, and the four passenger Runabout, $475. These prices are f.o.b. (free on board) Ford, Ont. where the cars are manufactured. While the prices of other commodities have been going up, prices of Canadian Fords have been reduced $120 since the war began. Sales have doubled and prices reduced. Breaking all records, the Ford Motor Company of Canada shipped 32,645 cars during the fiscal year, which ended July 31st. This means that last year's business nearly doubled. Based on this year's sales the Company has estimated a production of 60,000 cars for this year.

The average farmer is a shrewd buyer. He has it all over the average city man in the care which he selects his motor car. The latter is usually strong on looks and design, but doesn't figure that knowledge of mechanical details is of special value to him, because he is in close touch with repair shops and garages where possible troubles may be promptly remedied. The ruralite, however, is nearly always some miles away from mechanical aid, and his experience with farm machinery in general, has taught him more or less about machinery. He is usually handy with tools and can make ordinary repairs himself. He is familiar with gas engines which are a common item of farm equipment, so in choosing his motor car he takes careful note of its mechanical features. He wants a motor car that is simple in construction but with plenty of power to carry him over the none too good roads. He buys a Ford because he wants a car that is easy on tires and one that will give him twenty miles and over per gallon of gasoline. Economy in upkeep cost is a matter he considers carefully. He works hard for his money and he takes care to spend it where he will get value received.

The majority of farmers to-day are driving the Ford because they say it meets all their requirements. The farmer knows from the experience of thousands of other Ford owners that he gets his money's worth. It is a profitable investment, and can be put to a thousand different uses where time saved means money in the pocket. The farmer, too, finds it keeps the young folks content on the farm, enabling them to still keep in close touch with the towns and cities nearby. Knowing they can get into town easily in the evening, there isn't the temptation to desert the farm for the attractions which appear to exist in town and city life. The Ford is well adapted for the farmer and his family and is just as important a utility on the farm as a mower or any other farm implement.

Leading merchants also have solved the problem how best to deliver their goods. Many have now put in Ford delivery trucks, which have proved very satisfactory. The Ford delivery does its work in winter as well as in summer, and takes the place of two horses and two waggons. The Duffus Garage in Petersborough carries a complete stock of repair parts, and does all kinds of motor repairing, so that in case of emergency immediate service can be given and no long waits.

Three models of the Ford Touring Car and one of the Ford Roadster and a Ford Trailer were shown in a fine marquee in one of the most prominent locations on the grounds.

OAK HALL'S STYLES IN MEN'S CLOTHING.

The representatives of the Oak Hall Clothing store, Peterborough, gave an interesting display of their Sovereign brand suits and overalls for men. There was pictured in their palace fashion marquee examples of their new fall suits and top coats, raincoats, sweaters, hats, and caps. The new overcoat, a loose fitting, swagger garment for fall wear, at $16 and $18, attracted attention.

The biggest difference between a custom 'tailor-made' and a 'Sovereign Brand' garment is the difference in price. Oak Hall suits and overcoats seem so rightly cut, fitted and finished that they actually stand out like made-to-measure garments. The moral is: 'Pay less and dress better,' in Oak Hall clothing.

Oak Hall, George Street, Peterborough, was well represented, and the trim clothing exhibit was favoured with crowds of interested callers. Mr. George Wesley was in charge of the display, in the absence of Mr. Maher, and his assistants were busy giving away cute, illustrated blotting cards, while Oak Hall signs emblazoned every nook and corner of the Fair.

WAR COSTLY TO DENMARK.

Government's Deficit for the Fiscal Year Reaches $12,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The war has hit Denmark hard, although she has not fired a gun. The fiscal year which ended April 1 shows, in reports just made public, according to a dispatch from Consul General Winslow at Copenhagen, that there is a deficit of $12,000,000. The total receipts were $35,000,000 and expenditures $47,000,000.

The extraordinery expenditures for the army and navy caused the excessive outgo, it is explained. If conditions had been normal there would have been a surplus in the Treasury. These figures are exclusive of the item of $25,000,000 which the United States is to pay for the Danish West Indies if the Danish Parliament refuses the treaty. No mention is made in the dispatch from Consul General Winslow of the $23,000,000 which Denmark is alleged to have paid to Germany for violation of neutrality in allowing British war vessels to enter the Baltic through waters within the three mile limit. The expenditures for the mobilization of the army and navy continue, and the payment for the Danish West Indies will, it is believed, hardly prevent a deficit during the coming year.

All members are asked to be present. A few days ago the League forwarded seventy pairs of socks to the boys at the front. d2

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Pearce Walker of the Collingwood Granite Works with Mr. A. Jackel, J.P. of Midland motored through the city to-day on the way to Campbellford where Mr. Jackel is having a large monument erected in memory of his wife.

Mr. H. B. Cowan, of the Farm and Dairy, was the host at a luncheon that was given to-day in the Oriental Hotel, when a number of local people were given an opportunity of meeting Mr. R. MacKenzie, of Winnipeg. Mr. MacKenzie, who for many years has been the secretary of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association, will address a number of meetings throughout the country.

WEDDING BELLS

SMITH—DRYBURGH.

At Annette street Baptist church, Toronto, on Saturday afternoon at 4 p.m., Miss Annie Dryburgh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dryburgh, Toronto, was united in marriage to Mr. Alexander Smith, of this city. The Rev. W. H. Brown officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside in the city.

SIDEWALK WILL LEAD TO BRIDGE

Ald. Edgar's completed footbridge, where the C.P.R. crosses the river, includes, as he hopes to see it, a sidewalk from the east end of the bridge to Maria Street. He informed the Council the other night that Mr. E. A. Peck had practically assured assent to this plan, and the city would be required to pay only a nominal fee. It could obtain a ten-year lease upon condition that the city would remove the walk whenever required. It now remains with the C.P.R. to approve of the city's plan and let the work get under way before winter.

HOW MR. JEWITT WAS INJURED

Mr. Jos. Wearing has returned from Buffalo where he was acting for Mr. Edward D. Jewitt who was run down by a car belonging to the Cole Motor Car Co., of Buffalo while returning to Rochester from Peterborough on a motor cycle, a former report stated that Mr. Jewitt had a lady with him but this was incorrect. There was a lady and two policemen in the Cole Co's car but Mr. Jewitt was alone. He sustained two fractures of the left thigh and a crushed foot and is suffering great pain. His mother, Mrs. Thos. Jewitt will remain in Buffalo until his recovery is assured.

VICTORY AS SURE AS DEATH ON THIS BARREN HILLSIDE

With the Italian Army in the Trentino—Across the valley we could hear the muffled "klutt" of shrapnel. Long before the sound came to our listening ears we had seen the cloud of smoke from the explosion. One side or the other was shelling a bit of thicket that clung about the base of a pinnacle of rock.

"Our shrapnel," said General X. "You can tell by the color."

We were watching a hidden battle from one of Gen. X.'s observation stations. The story is of interest because it illustrates the incredible difficulties of the terrain over which the Italian troops are fighting and winning.

The nature of the ground seems not to be understood and appreciated by those not personally familiar with it. If the progress of the Italians has seemed to be slow since Italy entered the war it is because they have literally won ground inch by inch. They have chiselled it out, blasted it out, torn it from the reluctant hands of a strong enemy. That statement is made advisedly. If the Austrian army suffered by comparison to the German forces at the beginning of the struggle, it has fought itself into a condition of efficiency. In defeating it, the Italians have won honor.

"They have been fighting there for two days," said the general.

The valley was one of the deep, wide clefts common to these Dolomite Alps, a narrow ribbon of meadow land bordering a little river, a somewhat wider bench for pasture land above and on either side of this, and then hills that went straight up to heaven. Always they were crowned with a rim rock from 200 to 300 feet high. The razor slash of a Titan had scored that rock at intervals. Up these thin clefts the Italians were trying to make their way towards the Austrians who always held the summits. The Austrians could do so because they are in retreat and could select their positions. The bases of these rimrocks are usually clothed in dense thickets—half grown woods—standing in a torment of stone as steep as a house roof.

"Do not print the names of these positions," said the general. "You can understand, after seeing this country, that we may fight for a single rock spire for a month before we capture it. Something in your story might give the enemy a hint."

A DESPERATE FIGHT.

Three days before an Italian force had made its careful way up that hill opposite toward the top. Three-fourths of the way it was in shelter from the Austrian guns. There came a shallow trough, down which water mixed with rock poured in the spring thaws. The Italians were caught there in the open by the Austrian guns from the hilltops, and more than half wiped out. The remainder retreated to the shelter it had left. That night that indomitable moiety went forward again, crossed the shallow trap, and hooked itself to the lower edge of the wood that had grown about the foot of the rimrock. That wood was filled with Austrians. The fighting was with knife and bayonet and bomb. A swung gun-butt is no useful weapon in such a tangle.

For two days they had been fighting there, in the shadows of the grove. During that time they had no food and water. A corvee had attempted to make its way up to them but had been caught in that shallow valley and practically wiped out. The few remaining went forward and delivered their burdens to the fighting men. It gave each a mouthful and a swallow, for the men of the corvee carried only what they could upon their backs. That trail was too steep for mules. During this two day fight the Austrians had been driven to the upper part of the narrow woodland where they defended the half chimney, half ladder of rock that led to the height above, on which the guns were stationed.

The fight was a hand to hand contest, in which personal daring counted for most, and which was complicated by the inevitably blind fire of the artillery. The Italians "sniped" from behind rocks, or threw grenades, or crept upon an enemy and knifed him as he looked the other way. This was a fight to the death in which neither side regards death but only victory.

From our observation platform we had an excellent view of the scene, if not of the fight itself. Two days before it had been a trench held by the Austrians, and scooped in this solid rock at the cost of infinite labor. It was in the grove that shrouded the feet of the rimrock on the slope of the valley opposite the one in which the fight we were watching was going on. Two hundred feet immediately overhead the Austrians still held the rimrock. Such a condition is a common one in this mountain warfare.

WATCHING IN SAFETY.

"Why do they not shoot down upon upon us?" I asked, a certain regard for my personal safety manifesting itself.

"They cannot," said the general. "If they come out upon the edge they would be shot by our men who are on the watch for just such things. They cannot even roll rocks down upon us. The slope of the lip of the rimrock is too steep. The rocks miss us."

This fighting with rock batteries is a common thing, it appears, here in the Dolomites. Where an open slope presents itself at a practicable distance from the foot of the rimrock, the Austrians collect batteries of huge stones in their positions on high. If an Italian force is seen in the open the rocks are started down the steep hill. They gather momentum as they roll to the edge, spring into the air for a fall of a sheer 300 feet—sometimes more or less—and then bound drunkenly down the open spaces toward the approaching enemy. They are more feared than the Austrian shells, these rock batteries. One can not dodge a huge rock hurtling down an enormous hill. Even the slightest touch means complete disablement, if not death.

So that we sat somewhat at our ease, within sound of the Austrian voices, if any had cared to call to us, and watched the drama being enacted behind a leafy curtain across the chasm.

Not altogether at our ease. Here and there that trench came out into the open to avoid a jutting shoulder of the overhanging hill, or to circumnavigate one of the gorges that cut the precipitous sides. Here the Austrians could see us easily. If they were sufficiently alert they might roll some great boulders at us, to come leaping insanely through the young trees that clothed the hillside. Or an artilleryman, hidden on a pinnacle perhaps two miles away, might take a pot shot at the next open angle of the trench at the time he judged we would pass that way.

MORE

Across the valley the fight continued. Always the clouds of Italian shrapnel rolled up from the green wood, to blend eventually with the clouds of fleecy white that seemed so near at hand. Between times one could hear the occasional crack of a rifle, or the duller and heavier sound of an exploding hand grenade. We watched with vivid interest through our glasses, although the most minute scrutiny revealed nothing to our eager eyes. We only knew that many men were fighting and dying in that little belt of thicket. There came a pause—a half pause—in the fight. The artillery fire upon the thicket ceased. The reports of the rifles were fewer. Then they ceased altogether. The lines in the face of the general deepened as he watched.

"My boys have won," he said lightheartedly. "They are very gallant men."

It seemed a puzzle. Then I noted that across the valley the shrapnel shells were breaking again. This time there seemed a difference in the little clouds that floated lazily above the tree tops toward a calm heaven overhead. They were a gayer white at the top, shading into a yellowish brown at the bottom. It was Austrian shrapnel being thrown into the woodland. The defenders were dead, or driven out or taken prisoners. The Italians held the wood.

Two days afterwards they were still there. They had not been able to force their way up the half ladder, half chimney, which led to the sheer side of the rimrock to that Austrian gun. The climb itself was enough to test the muscle of a mountain man. But they were working their way up foot by foot, taking shelter behind rocks from hurtling boulders and rifle bullets and exploding grenades—and dying there.

"The fight may take a month," as the general had said, "but in the end my boys will win. They are very gallant men."

LOAD BROKE THROUGH BRIDGE

Repairs Will Have to be Made to the London Street Bridge

While hauling a heavy load over the bridge that crosses the raceway of the Peterborough Hydraulic Company at the east end of London street, a truck belonging to the Canadian General Electric Company, broke through the flooring and narrowly escaped going through the bridge. The matter has been reported to the Engineering Department of the city and temporary repairs will be made.

HUNDREDS OF GERMAN LIVES RECKLESSLY SACRIFICED IN FRUITLESS COUNTER ATTACKS

ON THE SOMME FRONT

PARIS, September 22.—Hundreds of German lives are being recklessly sacrificed in fruitless counter attacks on the Somme front.

As if to disprove the statement that their counter-assaults had lost their force, the Germans are making a desperate effort to regain their hold on the Peronne-Bapaume road. A series of terrific rushes were hurled against the French and the British lines, but they made no headway. The blows began on both sides of the river, but they met with no success. On the French front the Germans penetrated some trenches, but Foch's troops drove them out in short order. This apparently was preliminary work—an attempt to feel out the strength of the new allied positions.

GREATER EFFORTS FOLLOWED.

Subsequently a greater effort was begun. This attack was confined to the French front, in the sector between Rancourt and Cleary. It aimed to regain possession of those parts of the Bapaume-Peronne road won by the French a week ago. Through this gap it is possible for the allied troops to drive a wedge between the two towns.

From 9 o'clock in the morning until nightfall the attack continued with fury along a three-mile front. Moving forward in dense masses—as the Russians assail the Teuton lines in Galicia, the Kaiser's troops threw themselves repeatedly at Foch's positions.

GROUND COVERED WITH CORPSES.

Wave after wave broke under the intense fire of French artillery. As each crest receded it left behind its wreckage of dead and wounded. The ground before the French trenches was covered with corpses. Reports from the front indicate that the determination of the Kaiser's troops seldom has been equalled.

ATTACK AT PRIEZ FARM.

Around Priez farm, where the French position presents an immediate menace to Combles, the battle reached especial fury. Four separate assaults battered at the French line, but each time a curtain of fire was set up, and through this the most desperate charges of the Germans could not crash.

Another fierce struggle centred about Bouchavesnes, on the national highway. Here they succeeded in winning a foothold in the village. Foch's infantry, with bayonets fixed, then sprang to the attack, and after a hand-to-hand combat drove the enemy out again.

HEAVY ENEMY LOSSES.

Each charge was preceded by a heavy bombardment, to which the allied guns responded effectively. The French machine guns and heavy artillery did the major work with their cross fire. Where they failed to stem the German attack the infantry succeeded. By nightfall the counter-blow had been turned. The German losses were undoubtedly heavy.

ALLIES ARE ALMOST UNPROTECTED.

The ability of the allies to hold their gains is extremely encouraging. It must be remembered that the positions won by the allies have almost completely been destroyed by the heavy fire which always procedes the attacks. The allied troops are thus confronted with the task of defending positions almost unprotected by trench lines.

Enemy is Compelled to Fall Back Under Heavy Russo-Roumanian Hammer Blows—Bulgarians Are Burning the Villages and Ravaging the Country As They Fall Back

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

LONDON, Sept. 22.— Mackensen's armies in Dobrudja are in full retreat at all points, burning villages as they go. Roumanians have made further gains in Transylvania, one-fourth of which is in their hands. Under heavy Russo-Roumanian hammer blows the Teutonic forces in Dobrudja have fallen back more than five miles and are still in retreat, said Bucharest despatches to-day. An earlier official statement reported the Bulgarians burning villages and ravaging the country as they fall back. Official statements also reported the capture of Szekely Udvarhely, an industrial town of about 8,000 inhabitants forty-five miles inside the Transylvanian frontier. Sofia despatches to-day admitted that the German-Bulgar attacks against the Russo-Roumanian lines have been unsuccessful and that the Roumanians have gained a little ground at some points. An official statement issued at Sofia made no mention of a Bulgarian retirement, but reported that the Bulgars are consolidating their positions in the Dobrudja.

SITUATION IN GREECE.

The defeat of Field Marshall Mackensen in the Dobrudja invasion, and the check administered to the Austro-Germans on the north-western frontier of Roumania have caused a renewal of the demand here of a settlement of affairs at Athens. It is no longer any secret that the new Greek cabinet is not regarded as favourable to the allies. English correspondents at Athens cabled to-day that it was highly improbable that the allies would be able to enter into cordial relations with the new ministry. Reports have reached here that revolts which have broken out in isolated parts of Greece may mean the beginning of a real revolution, headed by ex-Premier Venizelos to overthrow King Constantine and bring Greece into the war.

Five Thousand Shells Fired For A Single Hit

Bulgar Gunners Show Inaccuracy, Shelling Empty Spaces—Only Half of Their Missiles Explode—Were Taken From Turks—Bulgar Losses Too Heavy For Decent Burial—Bulgarians Desert to the Serbians—No More Air Scouting.

DEAD LEFT TO THE VULTURES

LONDON, September 22.—A London special correspondent with the Serbian army, in a despatch dated Dragomantzi, September 12, describes the culminating operation in Moglena mountain which, during the last few days, led to the capture of Florina and advance on Monastir. Watching the fighting from Prebdiszte, the correspondent writes: One could see shells of the howitzers, mountain guns, and 75s bursting on and around the opposite crests. The answering fire of the Bulgarians was most erratic and haphazard, judging by what we saw around the double battery of 75s about a quarter of a mile from our point of observation.

QUITE HARMLESS.

For perhaps an hour all their shells would land with unvarying precision on an area of about half an acre some 300 yards north of the objective. Then evidently uncertain of what they had been doing, the gunners changed their aim, and for another hour their guns played with equal concentration on a spot 200 yards to the south of our battery, but quite harmlessly.

ONE HIT IN FIVE THOUSAND.

Our colonel told me that over 5,000 shells had been aimed at this same battery during the last month, with only one successful shot, which caused two casualties, and broke three gun carriages. He added that most of the shells were those of the Turkish battery captured by the Bulgarians in the first Balkan war, and that, as was only to be expected from this circumstance, not more than half of them exploded.

NO MORE AIR SCOUTING.

The ridiculous inaccuracy of the enemy's fire is easily accounted for by the fact that the Bulgar-German air scouting service has entirely ceased to operate in this sector since the destruction of two of its machines a few weeks ago, while the Franco-Serbian airmen daily continue to subject the Bulgarian lines to searching inspection giving the allied artillery the exact direction and range for its guns.

LEFT TO VULTURES.

The Bulgarians must have had even greater losses among these mountains than was first supposed, much greater than those the allies have suffered. Several hundreds have been buried by the Serbians, but there is a ravine a little west of Vetrenik at the bottom of which lie 800 dead Bulgarians. Owing to the awful stench that arose from the ghastly heap, the work of disinfection had to be left to the vultures and crows that gathered in thousands, and to the purifying rays of the hot August sun.

WERE AFRAID TO DESERT.

I have spoken of deserters. Six came in here Wednesday and five yesterday. This is the first time Bulgarians have deserted to the Serbians. They imagined they were deserting to the French, and were terribly frightened when they found themselves among their injured kinsfolk, but the kind treatment and generous feeding they received soon re-assured them and our colonel found no difficulty in inducing them to write a collective letter to their comrades on the other side, describing their present happy lot and advising them to surrender to the Serbians without delay.

THE ART OF SNIPING A SNIPER

Described by Rifleman McGill in the Daily Graphic

"It's a blurry rotten way of fightin'", said Bill Teake, as he changed his position by the fraction of an inch without removing his eye from the tip of the rifle foresight. "Gawd," he whispered, "I 'ave 'im now. I saw somethin' move just like a bird. I'll give 'im a round—"

"Don't" muttered Dudley Pryor under his breath, "It's nood good firing if you're not sure of your man. One shot will give us away, and that's the twentieth time you ve seen him; each time in a different spot. He's not like a bird; he can't be in two places at one time. What the hell! Don't move"

"A cramp in my guts," groaned Bill Teake, wriggling a little. "Gawd, it isn't 'arf giving me gyp. Ooh—whooh!"

The youth kicked out with both legs, raised his head an inch or two, then brought it down again to the level of the earth. Pryor swore under his breath and cursed Bill with vehemence.

"I can't 'elp it," said Bill. "I must move. I'd rather 'ave a bullet in the 'ead than a cramp in my belly. Wooh! it'll twist me up like a 'edge'og!"

"Matey", whispered Pryor turning half left and fixing his eyes on Bill.

"Wot?"

"You know that if you're seen moving you'll get a bullet across here—"

"I don't care a damn," said Bill.

"But I do," muttered Pryor. 'Next time I come out sniping I'm going to take a man with me; one that won't give a position away when he has got a sore tummy—"

"I'm not going to moove no more," said Bill. "I'm going to be as quiet as a sandbag. Ooh—wooh!"

Both boys lay close to the crest of a mammoth slag heap which lay between Loos and a little mining village. It was now noon, and they had been out there since three o'clock in the morning;; lying prone on the surface of the mine's off-scouring, their heads close to the rim of the heap, their eyes fixed on the enemy's trench which wound slyly as a snake over the levels some seven hundred yards away. The English line was right in front of the slag-heap and apparently near; "a spit down from us." as Bill Teake, soldier and cockney, remarked. Out between the lines, dozens of bundles bound in the uniform of the British Empire lay limp and lifeless, wasting with the dust from which they sprang.

"There's a 'undered or more out there," said Bill Teake. "Gawd, it's a funny business, killin' an' killin'. One would think that we enjoy it by the fuss the pypers in England makes about it."

"How's your cramp now?" Pryor asked. "Gone, is it?"

"It's 'opped it," said Bill Teake with a laugh. "Blimey".

Both men cowered to earth giggling nervously as the bomb burst, scattering a cloud of dust over them. A second shell burst, and a third.

"They must have spotted us," said Pryor, frowning at the fields.

"If they have it's all up."

But the shelling ceased as suddenly as it had begun, and the youngsters breathed freely again.

"Cleaning out their guns, I suppose," said Pryor. "Lucky they didn't clean us out of existence. I'm tired of waiting here."

"I'm tired an' 'ungry an' 'ot," said Bill. "But we can't get out of this damned place till night. They won't 'arf 'ave the laugh on us when we go back."

"Not half," said Pryor absently.

"And I bet Spud 'Iggles a bob I'd lay the sniper by the 'eels," said Bill. "But it's no go."

"Well, where can the fellow be?" asked Pryor, removing a speck of dust from the backsight of his rifle with a cautious hand. "No man can fire at us from the German trench. It's behind a rise and even if one of the Boches looks over the parapet he can't see our trench. But still the fact remains that no sooner does one of our boys look over than a bullet nipps past his ear. Where does the bullet come from? The sniper must be between the lines. He must, but where?"

Bill Teake shrugged his shoulders helplessly and muttered. "We was fools comin' out 'ere. But 'e 'as done for four of our fellers an' 'e must die. If 'e doesn't—"

He shook a cautious little head and became silent. The sun sank down the sky, and its sight slid down the barrels of the rifles from handguard to muzzle whenever the weapons were moved. Pryor crunched a biscuit with zealous teeth; Bill traced furrows in the ground with his trigger finger, but all the time kept his eyes fixed on the front.

"Our boys are makin' tea now," he said. It's about 4 o'clock, I suppose that damned sun's in no 'urry neither. There!" he ejaculated suddenly. "One of our boys 'as put 'is 'ead over the trench! Wait."

Both men heard it, a smothered shriek like the sound of a drowning puppy.

"'E 'as got in it the 'ead," said Bill in a fierce voice. "The bloody fool! Pryor!"

"What is it, Bill?"

"I saw smoke," said Bill, speaking calmly. "Just look over. See a little holler near the German lines? Yes! Well, there's a dead man there wiv' 'is knees curled up. Got 'im? That's the place. I saw a puff of smoke an' somefing moved. Look, Pryor, see somefing shining?"

"I see it," said Pryor.

"The sun's catchin' the snipers 'ipe."

Both the youngsters drew their weapons taut to their shoulders and adjusted their sights.

"Six-fifty?" inquired Bill, sighting his range at six hundred and fifty yards.

"A little lower, a little lower," said Pryor. "Make it six and you'll not be far out. It'll be hard to judge if we hit the dead man. He'll get raise a dust. You aim first, Bill."

Bill's left cheek twitched, and his eye took in the objective. He pulled the trigger. A spurt of dust flew into the air a little to rear of the dead man.

"Aim low, and we'll get him next time," said Pryor.

Both rifles spoke together. A figure detached itself from the limp lump which lay in the hollow near the enemy's lines, rose to a standing position, and beat the air with agitated arms.

Thus for a moment, then the thing collapsed in an abject heap on the ground.

"That's all," said Bill Teake. "The boys in the trench are firin' now. They'll finish 'im off 'e's not done in already."

The rifles cracked spitefully in the trench which rimmed the base of the slag-heap, the sun sank lower and the shadows lengthened. The two youngsters broke biscuits and gnawed vigorously while they waited for the darkness to fall.

SOLDIERS PREFERRED FOR CIVIL SERVICE.

SASKATOON, Sask., Sept. 21.—Canada will give the preference to returned soldiers for places in the civil service. No civilians who pass examinations will be given permanent places in the service if they are of military age and are able to pass the necessary tests. This statement was made by Dr. Adam Shortt, civil service commissioner of Canada, who arrived here yesterday.

Famine Grips Syria Beirut Devastated

CASES OF CANNIBALISM ARE REPORTED—SYRIANS HANGED BY DOZENS IN THE BEIRUT PUBLIC SQUARES.

The London Times publishes an article by an American woman who recently returned from Beirut, Syria, by way of Turkey, Bulgaria, Austria Hungary, and Germany. She begins:

"The Levant is starving. This is the literal truth. We left the country exactly two months ago, a party of six, five Americans and one Greek. We crossed the whole of Europe at war, visited four countries of the Central Powers, and saw a lot that we would rather forget than remember, but nothing existing in Europe can even compare with present conditions in Asiatic Turkey.

When Cumberbatch, the British Consul General at Beirut, warned all British subjects to leave the country, many laughed at him, thinking that he was an alarmist unnecessarily. "Cumberbatch, however," the writer says, "was advising all families and practically ordering all single women engaged in mission work in Syria, to leave the country. That part of the British Consular archives which Cumberbatch did not destroy before leaving was left at the Consulate under the protection of the United Consul General. American protection, which at first seemed a safeguard, proved of very little value. The United States Consul General sealed up the archives, but as soon as the Turkish officials realized that there was no military backing behind his refusal to give them up, they daily became bolder in their attitude and at last broke the seals and seized them.

POPULATION IN PANIC.

"A great panic among the population followed. Arrests of members of the best Syrian families began to take place in quick succession. All the people arrested belonged to families which had been connected with the French Consulate. It became known that among the French papers a number had been found which proved political sympathies so strong that the Turkish Government termed them high treason. There had been as great a panic among the Syrians with British sympathies, but none of them was touched.

"The arrests were followed by trials by court martial. Men whom we had known personally, with whom we had been on committees, with whom we dined and played tennis, whom we looked upon as the best and the most enlightened of their country, were beaten, tortured, deported and put to death. There were days when a dozen at a time were hanged in the public squares at Beirut at dawn, their dead bodies being left there for some hours.

"The hush of fear hung over the city. No man dared to trust his neighbor. The end of the tragedy only came in the beginning of 1916." The writer then paints a graphic picture of the havoc wrought to the crops by the visitation of swarms of locusts. By the end of July, 1915, the whole olive and grape crop of Lebanon and southern Syria had gone. The wheat the north was damaged, but not ruined.

Syria had been suddenly thrown on its own resources by the strict French blockade enforced shortly after the beginning of the war. After the visitation of the locusts ceased, the Turkish government in the autumn of 1915, as a result of the reported proposed landing of the allies, began to prepare for an invasion.

"The open coast of Syria," the writer continues, "was recognised as untenable, but at any rate it should be as little of a prize as possible, so no stores of food were allowed to be laid up any longer and transportation of food from the north was limited.

FAMINE PRICES FOR FOOD.

"After a few weeks the activities of the Red Cross were stopped entirely by the government. The city's supplies became smaller and smaller. At last all transportation of flour and wheat was taken in hand by the government and as a natural result food prices went higher still. Money was scarcer than ever and misery increased weekly.

"Toward Spring cases of starvation began to be known. The poor were found in the street unconscious and were carried to the hospitals. We passed women and children lying by the roadside with closed eyes and with ghastly pale faces. It was a common thing to find people searching garbage heaps for orange peel or other refuse, and eating it greedily when found. Everywhere the women could be seen seeking edible weeds among the grass along the roads.

"The priest of a mountain village had to come down to another village to beg some men to help him bury the dead that were lying about in the streets. From a very reliable source we heard that in the Kesarman barren district in the Lebanon range, cases had been found of the eating of human flesh."

Fatigue from Poisoned Blood

Sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels leave impurities in the blood which render it poisonous. Poisoned blood is the cause of tired, languid feelings, as well as of headache, backache and bodily pains and aches.

By awakening the action of these filtering and excretory organs, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse the system, purify the blood and cure such ailments as indigestion, biliousness, kidney derangements and constipation. 25 cts.

TELEPHONE COURTESY LIKE OIL ON WHEELS OF BUSINESS
Etiquette That Should Be Observed When Telephoning
Courtesy in Telephoning

Telephone Courtesy is Growing in Favor.

Newspapers and periodicals, which reflect as well the trend of public opinion, are continually urging the practice of telephone courtesy.

Progressive merchants are studying its relation to their sales. Employees are being trained to treat telephone callers with the same degree of courtesy and consideration that obtains in a face-to-face conversation.

And the result for those who practice telephone courtesy faithfully is a constantly growing volume of telephone trade and good-will.

The encouragement you give to your employees in developing pleasing telephone manners will bear fruit in the promotion of good-will amongst your customers.

No More Prisoners To Blackwell's

ISLAND PRISON WILL BE USED ONLY AS A CLEARING HOUSE COMMISSIONER LEWIS ANNOUNCES.

Blackwell's Island will cease this week to be a haven of refuge for New York's underworld. Burdette G. Lewis, Commissioner of Corrections, announced that the famous penitentiary no longer would be used as an institution for the detention of prisoners but would be converted into a clearing house for all the male prisoners committed to the care of the department.

The announcement means merely that hereafter prisoners sent "to the island" will be put to work in the various other penitentiaries and reformatories conducted by the city at New Hampton Farm and on Hart's Island. Instead of being confined all day in cells every prisoner will be compelled to perform eight hours' work for the city in a line of industry for which he is most fitted.

Henry O. Schleth, warden of the Branch Penitentiary on Hart's Island will be placed in charge of the Blackwell's Island clearing house. He will make the classification of the prisoners and to decide to which of the other penal institutions they will be sent. John J. Murtha, the present warden at Blackwell's Island, will be transferred to Hart's Island, which will supplant Blackwell's Island, as the real penitentiary. Patrick J. Hayes, chief warden of the department, will be placed in charge of the general rehabilitation and construction work of the department, but will not have jurisdiction over the prisoners.

Wheat Markets Held Steady

Cash Prices Are Firm—The Cattle Market—Hogs Are Ten Cents Lower

Wheat markets held remarkably steady, again yesterday in pace of a good deal of bulk talk, closing with only fractional changes, but slightly higher. Liverpool cables were unexpectedly lower, as against Broomhall's bull estimates. Cash prices are firm, with a continued good milling demand.

Manitoba wheat, track, bay port: No. 1 northern, $1.67 1-2; No. 2, $1.65; No. 3, $1.63 1-2; No. 4, $1.57 1-2; Old Crop, 2c above new.

Hay—Baled, No. 1, track, Toronto, best grade new hay, car lots, $10 to $12; No. 2, $9 to $9.50; straw, $6 to $7.

Cattle Markets.

Receipts at the Toronto Union Stock Yards yesterday were 57 cars, made up of 322 cattle, 57 calves, 2,128 hogs, 1,103 sheep and lambs.

Trade was moderately active among the cattle, with a fair clean-up of fresh offerings and held-overs, at about steady prices. Choice butcher, firm, and common, not more than holding their own.

A good steady demand for 900 to 1,000-lb. steers for distillery feeding.

Calves; choice veal, steady to firm.

Sheep and lambs weak, the latter off a dollar and a quarter on the week's prices.

Hogs were not quite so firm, most of yesterday's receipts going at 10c below yesterday's quotations:

MANY METHODS FOR USING BREAD CRUMBS

Dice some potatoes, cook until half done, then add an equal quantity of diced stale bread. This is a good plan when you are short on potatoes.

If your bacon is not plentiful you can stretch the dish by dicing stale bread and frying with it. The bread absorbs the fat and acquires a bacon taste.

Either broken bits of bread or bread crumbs may be made into griddle cakes.

You can stretch creamed chicken. Cut off the crusts from a small loaf of stale bread, scoop out the inside until about half an inch of wall is left, butter it all over, set in the oven until a light brown, then fill with the creamed chicken.

Bread crumbs in the proportion of half a cupful to a pound of chopped meat will also help you to make your meat loaf or croquettes go farther.

Fine bread crumbs may be used instead of flour for thickening gravies. They add flavour, and there is no danger of big lumps. They may also be used in thickening all kinds of soups.

Scalloped dishes of fish or vegetables are appetizing, and are a good way to use up bread crumbs.

Bread crumbs may be substituted for flour in bread making. Take some well dried crumbs and soak them until soft. When dry crumble them lightly. They are then ready to be used in place of half the flour in the bread.

Add a little milk to the eggs for scrambling, and as soon as they are set put in finely crumbed bread, excluding crusts. The crumbs add lightness to the dish and are not easily detected.

Left-over muffins, even when quite stale, make nice little baskets in which to serve eggs. Cut them in two, scoop out part of the centres, drop an egg into each half and put them in the oven until the eggs set. A cover may be made to the basket by making a paste of grated cheese and milk and spreading around the top.

Stale brown bread cut into small squares, lightly browned in the oven and eaten with sugar and cream, is a good substitute for a cereal.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Mystery Of Jewels

It Remained a Mystery For Many Years

By F. A. MITCHEL

When I first met Lucy Larraway she was living with her mother, and they were having a hard time to make ends meet. We were both very young then and formed a boy and girl attachment. As we grew older and I reached an age at which I realized that I had a career before me and must be considering how to meet it the fact that neither Lucy nor I had any capital seemed to render a marriage between us undesirable.

I don't remember that I stated this to her in so many words. Indeed, there was no need to do so, for she spoke of it herself. She was a practical girl and looked at things as they were rather than as she would have them. "I would only be a drag on you," she said. "You are capable of taking a good stand in the world provided you don't handicap yourself in the start with a wife who must throw the whole burden upon you."

"Would you have me—that is, considering yourself out of the question—marry a girl with a fortune?"

"No," she replied; "I would not."

"What are your reasons?"

"First, it would deprive you of the stimulus of necessity, which is the foundation of all or nearly all success. Second, I do not believe that any poor man of proper pride can ever feel comfortable if his wife possesses a fortune and he has nothing."

"The deduction being that a poor man had best not marry so long as he is poor?"

"Rather that if he marries a woman who supplies comforts and luxuries he is in an unpleasant position, and if he marries one as poor as himself he is very badly handicapped."

In all this I agreed with Lucy, but I neither admitted nor denied its truth. We being practical young persons, there was never a proposal on my part or an acceptance or refusal on hers. We conferred upon the matter of our marrying much as two persons will talk over the practicability of forming a business partnership. Whatever of love there was underneath this common sense deliberation was unexpressed.

This condition lasted about a year, when Lucy's mother died. It seemed to me then that Lucy might best marry me, for she must live alone. But the conditions were otherwise unchanged, and since her mother had been nonproductive pecuniarily Lucy could provide for her wants more easily than before. I was then struggling to get a start in my profession, and it did not seem wise for me to urge her.

Then followed a period in which Lucy and I saw very little of each other. I was away from home a great deal, and I heard of her being away, too, though where she had gone I did not learn. I wrote her a despondent letter, in which I said that at the rate we were progressing—or, rather, not progressing—financially she would soon be an old maid. I advised her, if she found a suitable opportunity, to marry. She replied that if she found the opportunity she would let me know before engaging herself.

Such was the very practical situation when one morning I received a package by express. Not expecting anything in that way, I looked long at the typewritten address before opening it. There seemed to be a box under the wrapper, and had it not been very light I might have feared an infernal machine. Untying the string and taking off the cover, there, true enough, was a box. Its lid was on hinges and was held shut by a spring, which I pressed and raised the lid.

I recall with the freshness of that moment the dazzling splendor of what lay before me. The box was lined with purple satin, on which rested a heap of diamonds. For a moment I was lost in contemplation of their beauty; then I began to wonder how they could have come into my possession. Again I took up the wrapper and scrutinized the address. There were my name, street and number, plain as the stones in the box. Turning again from the printing to the jewels, I made a rough estimate of their value. Several large stones I believed, if genuine, to be worth between $10,000 and $12,000 each. There were many smaller ones, and when I figured up the value of each I concluded the lot was worth not much less and not much more than $50,000.

After many theories as to why this treasure had been sent me I came to the conclusion that it had been stolen, the thief had feared being caught with it in his possession and had shipped it by express to get it into the hands of some one else. But in doing so he must have given up all claim to the property, for he must have expected that the receiver would report the matter to the police. But why had he chosen me for his purpose? My only theory on this point was that he had taken up a directory to find a name and address and his hitting on mine was a mere coincidence.

Being a methodical sort of person, I thought out what I would do before doing it. I made a list of the stones, giving a description of each, then started for a safety deposit company. On the way I submitted the jewels to a diamond expert, who pronounced them genuine, of excellent quality and offered me $60,000 for the lot. At the deposit company I rented a box, locked the stones in it, then reported the matter to the police.

There had been several jewel robberies reported, but none very lately. I looked over the description in each case, but none of them tallied with the case in hand. Mine were all unset, but this made no difference, for they might easily have been removed from the setting. Mine were all diamonds, while in the other cases the stones consisted of various jewels.

By arrangement with the police I had each stone weighed and described by a diamond expert, and they were authorized if any one described any of the jewels correctly to put him in communication with me, that he might prove property. A number of descriptions of stones or lots of stones came to me, but none tallied with those that had been sent to me. It was impossible that I should be imposed upon in a matter of weight alone.

The theory of the police was that the jewels had been stolen, probably in one lot, from a diamond merchant, who had reasons for not reporting his loss. Sometimes those losing goods, suspecting or not suspecting the thief, put a private detective on the case, who advises keeping the whole matter secret. I showed the gems, the box in which they came, the paper in which they had been wrapped, to a detective, who studied them closely, but without getting a clew. Had the box been a new one he might possibly have traced it from the maker to the person who had bought it, but it was evidently very old, nothing of its kind having been manufactured for many years.

I told no one except officials of my find for several months. Then I informed Lucy Larraway of it. She gave me no assistance in ferreting out the sender. That I had not yet heard from him did not argue that I would not hear at any time, though the longer the delay the less likelihood. The fact of their having been sent to me instead of a confederate tended to indicate that when the thief had shipped them his object was to get rid of them without even calling for them.

Lucy suggested that there was some story in high life connected with them, possibly a tragedy. She fancied, for instance, a profligate son of a wealthy father stealing them from him, then becoming terror stricken at exposure and shipping them at random. A case like this would probably never be exposed.

As time went on this theory or something like it seemed to be gaining ground with Lucy, and I fell in with it myself. I stated it to the police, who told me that not a tithe of the skeletons in family closets ever walked out into the open. Possibly an explanation of this case of mine might come in time, but there was little likelihood of my having been put in possession of the jewels temporarily or I would have been called on for them before now.

At last I came to the conclusion to use the property for my advancement. At a time following a financial panic when securities were much depressed I made a loan on the diamonds and bought productive property. A quick rise followed, and I sold out at a considerable profit.

When I told Lucy of what I had done I expected that she would blame me for jeopardizing property that I might at any time be called upon to return. She did not seem to take this view of it, however, reminding me that I had done all I could to discover the owner, whereupon I told her that I now saw no reason why we should not be married, and she consented.

For years the diamonds remained in the safety deposit company's vault. Children grew up about Lucy and me. But I prospered, and there was enough for all. When sons and daughters were going to college and our expenses were considerable my wife suggested that I sell the jewelry and put the money into interest bearing property. But I declined to do so, intending them for my children after my death.

For thirty years I lived a happy life with my dear wife; then she left me. Some time after her death I devoted myself to the melancholy duty of wading out those numberless effects, consisting of old letters and trinkets, that accumulate during a lifetime. Going over some private papers of hers, I found a list of diamonds, giving their standing as to purity and their accurate weight. I recognized that it comprised the gems which had been sent to me years agone. I could not remember my wife having had a copy of this inventory.

Passing on to other papers in the same receptacle, I came upon a will executed more than thirty years before by one Jane Larraway, bequeathing to her niece, Lucille Larraway, all her property. I opened my eyes at this and pushed on through the bundle of papers among which I had found it and saw at once that they concerned the settling of the estate of Jane Larraway and that Lucy had received an inheritance of $63,000.

If ever man looked back with emotion on a noble deed of one lost I did on seeing the evidence that my beloved Lucy had converted a fortune into diamonds and given them to me, concealing herself as the donor. Oh, that could bring her back for one moment in which to take her in my arms and tell her—or try to tell her—what I felt!

Alas, how many of us realize sacrifices that have been made for us only after the beloved one has passed beyond our gratitude!

I told my children what their mother had done for us all and divided the gems among them, to keep in memory of her.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting health.

Sees Last Leg Cut Off

Dr. James W. Keath, of Philadelphia, with a twisted back, broken two years ago, and a stump where his right leg was amputated a year later, has sacrificed his remaining leg.

The second amputation took place a few days ago, and though his leg came off, Keath's smile did not. He refused to take an anesthetic and smoked a cigarette while he watched the surgeons at the Jefferson Hospital work.

While a student at Jefferson Medical College Keath fell from a window. His back was broken. His leg became infected and was removed. The right leg then became paralyzed. He was graduated in June, 1915, and went to the commencement exercises in a wheel chair.

"You are too pretty to be fined, but the next homely woman who comes before me for the same offence will have to suffer," said Justice Luyster, of Glen Cove, L.I., when Gail Kane, a moving picture actress was brought before him on a charge of speeding.

Miss Kane was arrested by a motorcycle policeman. There is a fine of $10 for first offenders, and when Miss Kane appeared to answer the charge against her she pleaded guilty at once. But her beauty was too much for the judge.

On leaving the court, Miss Kane expressed a desire to be arrested again. "It is certainly a pleasure to be brought here," she remarked.

French Poilu Preaches To Welsh Miners

A Cardiff correspondent of the London Chronicle writes:

A short sturdy figure in the blue overcoat of the French army, with the curious steel helmet which reminds one of the Roundheads. Corduroy breeches of a darker shade of blue, and puttees complete the dress. Just one of the hundreds of thousands of "Poilus" you may see any day along the French front, although perhaps less powdered with the dust and grime of conflict.

It is Private Rene Cabanne, of the 101st Regiment of French Heavy Artillery. A few days ago he was standing behind one of the big guns which was hurling its huge messengers of death into the outskirts of Peronne. Last night he stood on a stone on a Welsh moorland, addresing a crowd of miners; although his tongue was not their's, his fiery words, by the very rush and torrent of their eloquence, seemed to carry conviction.

M. Cabanne's visit is the result of a happy thought on the part of Mr. Adolphe Smith. For a quarter of a century Mr. Smith has been the connecting link between the various organizations of workmen in all the countries of Europe. An excellent linguist, he can talk to most of them in their own tongues. To him came the idea of getting a French soldier from the trenches to come over here for the double purpose of seeing what we are doing in this country, and of telling our workmen what is being done in France.

M. Poincare took up the proposal, and the French Minister of War gave M. Cabanne leave of absence, and sent him to England as a sort of informal industrial ambassador. With M. Cabanne came Lieut. Weill, an Alsatian, but he has returned to his military duties in the French army.

AN EXTRA TURN.

So for the last three weeks, M. Cabanne and his colleague have been visiting the British industrial centres. In none of these was a greater impression made by M. Cabanne than in South Wales, and he was invited to pay another visit to that part of the country before leaving. The beginning of the "extra turn" was made on Thursday night on the celebrated Rocking Stone Hill at Pontypridd, where for years past the Welsh miners have met to discuss their affairs.

It was a remarkable scene. The hill is a flat plateau which stands at the place where the five valleys—under which the wonderful Welsh coal seams lie—meet. Down these valleys came the miners to greet their French comrade. Scattered around were the remains of Druidical worship, which spoke of centuries long past. Anthropologists have a theory that in these Glamorganshire valleys we may find traces of the old Iberian race—akin to the Basques and the Finns—which was driven into remote corners of Europe by the Celts.

Be this as it may, it is curious to note that M. Cabanne comes from the south of France and his face tells of his kinship to the Basques. It may be that last night he was speaking to men of his own kin who have been sundered for long centuries. Anyhow a spark of sympathy was kindled between him and his hearers which no difference of language could quench.

M. Cabanne is full of the verve and fire and energy of the "Sud." A workman himself he has been chosen as the organising secretary of the French Socialist party. His words and sentences have all the perfection of balance and polish to which the French language lends itself so well.

PRUSSIANISM THE CURSE.

Behind this meeting on the bare hillside lay something more than appeared to outward seeming. M. Cabanne showed how that unless Prussian militarism were crushed, all the ideals for which the workers of the world had been fighting for centuries would be buried under one common ruin. Freedom of speech and pen and thought, the right of co-operation to secure a greater share of the good things of life—all would lie crushed and killed if the Prussian jackboot had still the power to crash through the free nations of Europe.

A few thousand of working men, another working man speaking to them. There was none of the outward pomp and circumstance or power. Yet the power was there all the same. You could see it working in the gnarled faces of men whose life is at best a hard one. But the gathering told of the new forces which are stirring all Europe, where men have thrown aside all other consideration to make way for the grim resolve that this hydra-headed monster shall be destroyed once and forever.

M. Cabanne told how all France, from the noble to the Socialist workman, had risen as one man, and with clenched teeth had set himself to this work. "Will you British workers do the same?" he asked, and the answer came: "By God, we will!"

WORKERS TO HAVE A SAY.

As for the coming peace, M. Cabanne made the excellent point that the right of the workers to have a say in the settlement would be the more surely established, the more solidly they strove to help in bringing about the victory.

As the summer twilight fell on the scene, the storm clouds rolled away in slate-colored masses over the Welsh mountains, and bars of delicate orange told of the sunlight behind them. It was an omen that, behind the storm cloud of war and rapine, there lay the promise of a newer and a nobler age.

In eloquent addresses Mr. Ben Davis, the Welsh Miners' leader, and Mr. Watkins, a member of the Commonwealth Parliament, and the Secretary of the Australian Miners' Union, both emphasized the fact that this was a people's war, in which the people must conquer or be for ever undone.

OCTOBER WILL OPEN WITH A WARM WAVE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances to cross continent Sept 16 to 20 and 20 to 24; warm waves 15 to 19 and 19 to 23; cool waves 18 to 22 and 22 to 26. This weather period will start in and end with cool weather, with about a week of unusually warm weather in the middle. The storms will be of more than usual force and more than usual rain, is expected during last days of the period. In southern and eastern sections the rains will be general, or sufficient for all farming purposes.

This storm period will end the rain month that began near Aug. 30, and the rains of the next month will shift a little more to the south and west, and the heaviest rains will be in Central America. This will cause October to average a little colder than usual, but the first ten days of the month will be unusually warm, all the middle part unusually cold, and the last week of the month moderately warm. The great problem now before the farmer relates to the sowing of winter grain.

Next warm wave will reach Vancouver about Sept. 25, and temperatures will rise on all the Pacific slope. It will cross crest of Rockies by close of 26, plain sections 27, great lakes and Ohio Valleys 28, eastern sections 29, reaching Newfoundland about Sept. 30. Storm wave will follow about one day behind warm wave and cool wave one day behind storm ware.

A TROPICAL STORM.

This disturbance will organise a tropical storm that will be discovered in the West Indies during the week following. At the same time a high barometer and cold wave will appear in the middle northwest and will carry frost farther south than usual. Those two disturbances will have much to do with the weather first ten days of October.

We predicted a tropical hurricane for the West Indies and a cool wave for middle northwest with frosts near Sept 3. They both came to time, but at this writing, Sept. 3, we do not know about the frost damage. Our new system of forecasting began with first of September and its bow of promise was favorable.

Mark it. Whoever knows in time and follows our crop weather calculations for 1917 and 1918 will be profited, and the other fellows will be the losers. The crops of no two years of the past will be of more importance than those of the next two years will be.

We are of opinion that the eclipse shadows on the ocean locate, in a general way, the epidemics that afflict man and the lower animals and then the sanitary conditions within the vicinities of the eclipse shadows determine the localities afflicted.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the October instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, or Victoria.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognised bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 23rd September, 1916.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

(By Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D., Sept. 24, 1916.)

(All Rights Reserved.)

REVIEW — The things which are not seen. Reading Lesson 2 Cor. 4: 1-8:4. Golden Tent—We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal. 2 Cor. 4:18.

The questions for this week may be used as an original lesson, or as a review of the twelve preceding weekly lessons. The date and title of each lesson, where found, Golden Text and one question from each lesson follows:

July 2—Paul at Thessalonica and Berea. Acts 17:1-15. Golden Tent: Him did God exalt with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour Acts 5:31.

1. Verse 3—Did Paul mean to say that it was necessary for the Jews to have put Jesus to death, and if not, what did he mean?

July 9—The Thessalonian Christians. Thess. 1:2:17-20; 4:13-18. Golden Text: If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that are fallen asleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. 1 Thess. 4:14.

2. Chap. 1:1-4—The language in Paul's salutation is glowing with love; should all Christians feel the same ardor for their brethren, and would it be wise, or not, and why, to express it in letter and in personal conversation?

July 16—Paul at Athens. Acts. 17: 1-23. Golden Text: Be not afraid, and move, and have our being. Acts 17:28.

3. Verses 16-21—Should we, or not, and why, lend a respectful ear to all new theories of life, and eternity, or reject them without examination?

July 23.—Paul at Corinth. Acts 18: 1-23. Golden Tent: Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace, Acts 18:9.

4. Verse 1—There is no record of a vision, or of any special divine instruction for Paul going to Corinth; but is a good man as much guided by God when he is not conscious of it, as when he is, and why?

July 30—The Word of the Cross. 1 Cor. 1:1-25. Golden Text: Far be it from me to glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. Gal. 6:14.

5. Verses 1-8—If a true Christian is a labourer, or a lawyer, a minister or a miner, or of any other calling, or occupation, can he truthfully say, or not, and why, that he is in his present position by "the will of God?"

Aug. 6—The Greatest Thing in the World. 1 Cor. 13. (Temperance Lesson.) Golden Text: Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love. 1 Cor. 13:13.

6. Verse 1—Why is an eloquent man without love, like a brass band with cymball accompaniments?

Aug. 13—The Grace of Giving. 2 Cor. 9. Golden Text: In all things I give you an example, that so labouring ye ought to help the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that He Himself said, it is more blessed to give than to receive. Acts 20:35.

7. Verses 1, 2—If the faithful member of a Christian Church fails in business, how much financial help may he expect from the Church to put him on his feet again, or failing that, to care for him and his family?

Aug. 20—The Riot at Ephesus. Acts 19:23-41. Golden Text: The love of money is a root of all kinds of evil. 1 Tim. 6:10.

8. Verses 23-27—Why does the successful presentation of truth always mean a war with evil?

Aug 27—Journeying to Jerusalem Acts 20:16-38. Golden Text. I commend you to God and to the word of his grace. Acts 20:32.

9 Verse 22—How much would it help or hurt us, to know in detail, the things that are to happen to us in the future?

Sept. 3—Paul's Sorrows and Comforts. 2 Cor. 11:21—12:10. Golden Text. My grace is sufficient for thee: for my power is made perfect in weakness. 2 Cor. 12:9.

10. Verses 21, 22—If a man calls himself a weak man when he knows himself to be strong, or speaks of the little he has done when he knows he has done much, or, in anyway speaks of himself below what he knows himself to be, why is he not a falsifier the same as if he had testified contrary to the facts in the case of another?

Sept. 10—The Arrest of Paul. Acts 21:17-40. Golden Text: Thou shalt be a witness for him unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard. Acts 22:15.

11. Verses 17-19—What reason is there to believe that there is no other class of people who so love one another, and so rejoice in each other's fellowship as real Christians?

Sept. 17—A Prisoner in the Castle. Acts 22. Golden Text: He is my refuge and my fortress: my God in whom I trust. Ps. 91:2.

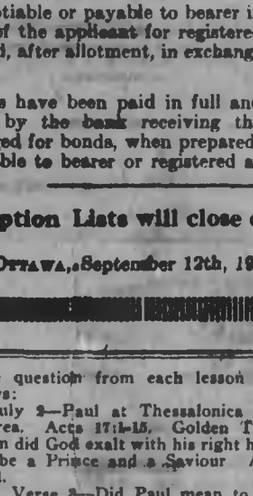
12. Verses 6-9. Saul and Jesus questioned and answered each other: to what extent is it our privilege today, to hold similar conversation with Jesus?

Lesson for Sunday, October 1, 1916. A Plot That Failed. Acts 23.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS

By Anabel Worthington



This little frock is introduced with nothing but fabric combination to emphasize its good lines, but it needs nothing more to win you.

You may suit yourself about making it with or without a belt, which when employed, looks best at a lowered waistline. Buttons have the honor for the convenient front closing. Collar, cuffs and belt in contrasting note tone up the dress.

When made without the belt the waist body is bloused quite full over the skirt, which is in three gores. A deep roll cuff on short sleeve or a band cuff on the long one is a matter of choice. Scalloping, which is always to the taste of the school girl, is particularly appropriate for trimming this dress when all one material is used and the design in the smaller view chosen.

Striped galatea, linen, madras and the like will be desirable for a wash dress, and bengaline, serge and the mixtures for a school frock for the fall.

The pattern of No. 7,866 is cut in sizes 4 to 14 years. To make in size 10 will require 2¼ yards of 36 inch material, 1 yard 27 inch contrasting goods, or, in all one material, 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

You may obtain this pattern by sending to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Avoid Harsh Pills! Doctors Condemn Them

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, so mild, so certain to quickly cure as a 25c box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Plenty of work and plenty of play is the main secret of longevity, for if you want to live beyond the allotted span the first thing is to keep on taking an interest in what surrounds you.

Cadornas Have Been Italy's Big Leaders

Count Luigi Succeeds His Father in Great Effort—Was Promoted Early

The Italian Generalissimo, Count Luigi Cadorna, has not only achieved a brilliant feat of arms, a historical service to his country, but has gratified what must have been the warm wish of his heart. Austria has always been Italy's hereditary enemy. The Cadornas have been for generations ornaments of the Italian armies and among its most trusted military leaders. In the Italian-Austrian war in 1866 Count Raphael Cadorna—father of Luigi—led his army to Gorita when the historical objective was, as it is to-day, the capture of Triest, Austria's sole commercial seaport. Whatever Count Raphael might have done to secure on this side to Italy, Italia Irridenta, will never be known, as the war came to a sudden termination with the signing of peace on the banks of the Isonso, at the edge of the Carso plateau. Count Luigi, therefore, takes up the work on the very spot where his father was forced by the politicians to give it up!

Luigi Cadorna was born at Pallanza on Lago Maggiore, in 1850. In Pallanza the old men still remember his boyish games, always fights against the "Austrians." At ten years of age he entered the military college at Milan, and his capacity and industry enabled him to pass the examinations of the college at fifteen. He remained for three years in the higher military school at Turin, and in 1868, when only 18 years of age, was promoted as Sub-Lieutenant, and was appointed to the staff of his father, who fearing that favoritism might be charged promptly displaced him. His last two years of study were passed in the turmoil of war against Austria and the subsequent peace. Promoted Captain in 1875, he attracted attention by his concise and lucid writings upon the frontiers of Italy; and when in 1883, he became major of infantry, he revolutionised the whole Italian doctrine of infantry tactics. From 1886 onwards, as a staff officer, he gained the confidence of old General Count Pianell and established his reputation as a practical soldier of rare ability. His first notable military exploit was the surrounding by his regiment, the 10th Bersaglieri, of a whole enemy detachment at manoeuvres—an exploit more brilliant, though less solid, than the remarkable retreat which his forces accomplished during the grand manoeuvres of 1911 in Piedmont.

PREFERS OPEN WARFARE.

Simple and modest, quiet and passionless, his features and his uniform alike weatherbeaten, General Count Luigi Cadorna seems to symbolise the character of the hard, undemonstrative warfare which modern conditions compel him to conduct. To his friends he often complains of the "unaesthetic war to which we are condemned," and expresses wonder whether some turn of military fortune will ever permit the employment of cavalry as a decisive arm. Cadorna has never played to the gallery. Eminently prudent and careless of his personal prestige, he has concentrated his attention upon "the thing in itself" rather than upon the production of brilliant effects. In his hands the Italian army has acquired a cohesion and solidity of which the Austrians long feigned to believe it incapable.

LOVES TO STUDY.

One of the greatest characteristics of General Cadorna is his love of study. Not only military art, but branches of ordinary science are familiar to him. It has not in any officer he devoted all his free time to officer he devoted all his free time to studying the topography of the Italian frontier, and there is no man living in Italy who knows it better than Gen. Cadorna. When 33 years of age, being then a major in the Sixyt-second Infantry Regiment, he caused a stir by applying entirely new methods in training his soldiers. The Colonel commanding the regiment opposed them, but the first big manoeuvres proved them so successful that he was left in peace, and became the real commanding officer of his regiment. He succeeded in raising the enthusiasm of some fellow officers, his ideas soon became widely known, and his tactics were adopted throughout the Italian army. He never thought of using his reputation to procure speedy promotion, so he was still a Colonel when some of his comrades had been promoted to General.

In 1907, when the post of Chief of the General Staff became vacant, the whole of Italy demanded the nomination of General Cadorna. It was, however, given to someone else, and the first man to congratulate his new chief was General Cadorna. That was not hypocrisy, for when, three years later, he was given an opportunity of promotion he asked as a favor to be allowed to work under the orders of the man who had been placed above him. During the great manoeuvres of 1911 he was in command of one of the armies. At one moment orders having failed to arrive he found himself in a very difficult position. He was told that, though orders were delayed, the King was expecting him to advance. General Cadorna, however, ordered a retreat. Everybody was dissatisfied. Yet a few hours later it was clear that by retreating he had put the army of his adversary in a desperate position and he was declared the winner of the manoeuvre. How many Generals would run the risk of disappointing their Sovereign? This moral courage was shown again at the beginning of the present war in his rush against Austria with his only half mobilised army. He thus kept the Austrians from invading Italian territory, and gained time to complete his mobilization.

A TRUE DEMOCRAT.

General Cadorna by choice leads a secluded life, but he is a true democrat, and notwithstanding his rank mixes freely with his soldiers. Duty is sacred for him, and he demands the like from his subordinates. Though alert in mind and manner, he is rather slow in making a decision; as the Russians say, he will measure the cloth seven times before cutting it but he never deviates from a decision when once it is arrived at. In private life General Cadorna is chivalrous, and is loved by all who come in close touch with him. He is also very religious—a trait he has in common with General Joffre.

WOMEN'S STOMACH TROUBLES

The Great Woman's Medicine Often Just What Is Needed.

We are so used to thinking of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy exclusively for female ills that we are apt to overlook the fact that it is one of the best remedies for disorders of the stomach.

For stomach trouble of women it is especially adapted, as it works in complete harmony with the female organism, since it contains the extracts of the best tonic roots and herbs. It tones up the digestive system, and increases the appetite and strength. Here is what one woman writes showing what this medicine does:—

Newfield, N. Y.—"I am so pleased to say I can recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as an economical and beneficial remedy in most ailments pertaining to women. At least I found it so by only taking two bottles. I had indigestion in a bad form and I am now feeling in the best of health and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. BURR WILLIAMS, R.D. No. 38, Newfield, N.Y.

Many women suffer from that "all gone feeling," and "feel so faint," while doing their work. Too chances to one their digestive system is all out of order. A tablespoonful of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after each meal should completely remedy this condition in a few days.

EAT ALL THE CRUMBS

The Paris Journal says the following is extracted from a circular intended for distribution among the German troops and found in the possession of a captain taken prisoner on the Somme:

"England and France are making implacable efforts to stop our revictualling from overseas countries and to starve us out. The duty of every military man, officer or soldier, is, consequently, to economize and husband the food and forage. Thus we will counter the enemy's efforts."

"Satisfy your hunger, but no more than the neutral needs. Eat up all the crumbs it is possible to use. You have a right to a generous portion of rations but you are not obliged to eat it all. Therefore, claim all that you are entitled to, and if you receive other food from home, use it to vary your meals. But do not eat for the sake of eating."

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisonous and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Ermine, the Czar's fur, will take precedence over every other kind of fur—which may be a tribute on the part of France to her royal allies in this war.

THE BRITISH CAPTURE TWO LINES OF TRENCHES

The British Push Forward On A Mile Front South of Ancre

Capture Two Lines of Trenches Between Flers and Martinpuich General Haig Announces This Afternoon--Bulgarians Sustain Heavy Defeat at Hands of Serbs and Are Also Pushed Back by the French--German Attack on Somme Stopped By French Curtain of Fire.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON (Bulletin), September 22. — British troops advanced on a mile front south of the Ancre last night, capturing two lines of German trenches between Flers and Martinpuich, General Haig reported this afternoon.

The gain thrust the British line forward in the direction of Hill 182 and drove the Germans still further back toward the Le Sars, Gueudecourt highway, their next strong line of defense before Bapaume. The British line is now approximately directly north of Flers and Martinpuich, General Haig reported. South of Arras British detachments entered German trenches, and north of Neuville St. Vaast other detachments exploded a mine and occupied the crater.

The official admission came from Berlin that the Russians have won a victory in the savage fighting going on around the Smotrec Mountains in the Carpathians. The Czar's troops have occupied the summit of the mountain and also retained their hold on a part of the Austro-German trenches near Kortynica. On both fronts in the Balkans the Czar's soldiers are also vigorously on the offensive.

German Aeroplane Flew Over Dover

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 22.—A German seaplane to-day flew over Dover and dropped three bombs. There were no casualties. The hostile seaplane was chased away by anti-aircraft guns.

No War Elections in Germany Now

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, September 22. — No Reichstag elections will be held in Germany during the war, and the present grouping of political parties therefore will remain unchanged, influential Berlin newspapers asserted to-day. It is likely that Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg will make an address at the opening of the Reichstag session next Thursday, outlining the military and political situation. The above announcement that no Reichstag elections will be held is significant in view of the recent Socialists and anti-war riots in various parts of Germany.

Bulgarians Sustain a Heavy Defeat

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, September 22.—Bulgarians have sustained a heavy defeat at the hands of the Serbians on the Zbrasko, it was officially announced to-day, and have also been pushed back by the French. Pursuing their advance in the Broda River region the Serbs have reached Crbani, north of Florina, after repulsing the Bulgarian attacks. The French troops cleared the entire region northwest of Armensko of the Bulgarians and progressed after heavy fighting to the heights dominating the Florina-Poplin road.

German Attacks On The Somme Fail

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS)French Official Communique), September 22.—A most violent German attack on the new French lines north of the Somme along the Le Pries Rancourt front, was stopped short by French curtain fire last night. The Germans were driven back to their own trenches losing heavily.

Enemy Beaten On All Eastern Fronts

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 22.—A wireless despatch from Rome this afternoon reports that the Russo-Roumanians have won further victories in the Dobrudja and Transylvania, and that the Russians are again advancing in the Carpathians and in Galicia. Berlin says Russian troops are attacking the German-Bulgarian line in the Dobrudja with great vigor, it was officially announced this afternoon. Severe fighting is going on along the whole battle front.

SIX DAYS' FIGHT RESULTS IN BIG ALLIED VICTORY

Great Battle in Dobrudja Has Ended in Withdrawing of Enemy Forces Who Are Now in Full Retreat Burning Villages Behind Them

MACKENSEN BEATEN

LONDON, Sept 22.—The latest official communication from Bucharest confirms the Entente reports that the great battle in Dobrudja has ended in the defeat of the Central Powers after six days' fighting. The battle began last Friday and gradually increased in scope and intensity until Tuesday evening with the result that on Wednesday the Germans, Bulgars and Turks, crushed, were forced to withdraw, burning villages in their line of retreat in an effort to retard their pursuers.

The same communication, referring to the Transylvania theatre, announces that a Roumanian force has entered Orderhei, better known as Szekely Udvarhely, fifty miles northeast of Kronstadt. One-fourth of Transylvania is now in Roumanian hands.

ENEMY IN FULL RETREAT.

The official text of the Roumanian report follows:—

"Dodrudja—The battle which began on the 15th ended Wednesday (20th) with the defeat of the enemy, composed of Germans, Bulgarians and Turkish troops, who hurried southward, burning villages in their retreat.

"On the north and northwest fronts fighting continued on Mounts Caliman (Kelemen) and Ghurgill, where we took 137 prisoners and also machine-guns. A detachment entered Orderhei. In the valley of the Jiu we repulsed an enemy attack.

"Southern front: An artillery duel occurred between the batteries at Zionicea and Sistor.

EARLIER REPORTS

News of the allied success followed announcement from the Bucharest War Office this afternoon that the Russo-Roumanians have repulsed the invaders "in a sanguinary manner" on the whole front.

Sofia officially admits that the Russo-Roumanian troops "maintained themselves in their strongly-fortified position."

The German War Office reports the fighting to have come to a standstill.

TIDE IN ALLIES' FAVOR

On the other Balkan fronts the tide is running in favor of the allies. In southwestern Transylvania the Austrian counter-drive has been checked, and the resumption of Roumanian thrusts in the north can be expected. In Macedonia the allied advance continues to make slow progress.

HEAVY BATTLE BEFORE MONASTIR.

Before Monastir, the first great objective of the Serbs in their efforts to retain their country, the stage is being set for a heavy battle. The Germans and the Bulgarians according to reports from Saloniki, are striving to entrench before the city, while the Serbs harass them constantly, awaiting the arrival of reinforcements.

The Serbs, aided by Russian detachments, are moving forward in hard battling against both flanks of Monastir. They repelled a heavy assault against their positions on the peak of the Kaimmakchalan ridge today, and captured a height on their left wing. Sofia professes satisfaction with the situation at Florina, lying in the path of a frontal attack on Monastir, but the allied reports show that there is no foundation for this optimism.

OF PARAMOUNT IMPORTANCE

The checking of Mackensen's offensive is considered of paramount importance. For one thing, there is the moral effect that comes with the checking of the Field Marshal who led the drive through Serbia. And for a second, the Roumanian-Bus-

Germany Will Make Another Peace Attempt

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, September 22.—Germany will set another peace kite flying about the middle of October, British officialdom both military and civil confidently expects. Recent apparently well authenticated rumours have reached London that Germany, suffering huge losses because of the recent allied offensive, is endeavouring to suggest an armistice through Spain or the United States. It is understood on reliable authority that King Alfonso so far is unresponsive, and is unlikely to act. The Germans it is believed here, hope to tempt President Wilson to start negotiations at a time when any attendant success would be likely to affect favourably his chances of re-election.

Americans conversant with inside British sentiment feel that any such move on the part of Washington would not only be foredoomed to failure, but would arouse the most bitter resentment of the Allies, and also permanently eliminate Washington as a possible mediator. Every indication points not only to the oneness of purpose of all the Allies to continue the war until a decisive peace is obtainable, but to the fact that the army, navy and political leaders ar thoroughly united in the determination to assume responsibility, if necessary, for the war's continuation after Germany is willing to quit. It is no secret that the Anglo-French are prepared both in numbers and muntions to continue the present offensive indefinitely regardless of winter weather.

PTE. JAS. ROBERTSON FOR SECOND TIME IS REPORTED WOUNDED

Peterborough Boy Who Went Overseas With First Contingent and Was Wounded at Langemarck is Again on the Casualty List—Lieut. Meredith Huycke Safe--General Haig Praises Canadians--To-day's General Military News.

Word was received in the city today that Pte. Jas. Robertson, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported admitted to No. 5 Stationary Hospital at Boulogne, on Sept. 13, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the foot. This is the second time that Pte. Robertson has been on the casualty list. He went overseas with Major Bennett's Company in the 2nd Battalion, and was wounded in the famous day-break charge at Langemarck on April 23, 1915. Pte. Robertson's parents formally resided at 1496 Parnell street but are now living on the Chemong Road. Before enlisting Pte. Robertson was employed by Mr. John Hill, grocer. He was a member of the 57th Regiment for several years, and was a Corporal in No. 4 Company of the Rangers. Pte. Robertson was born in Scotland, but had lived in Peterborough since he was thirteen years of age.

Pte Stuart F. Hayes, son of His Honour Judge Hayes of Guelph, formerly of Peterborough, is again officially reported missing. No trace has been found of him since the Battle of Langemarck, in April, 1915.

The Kingston Whig says:
The Whig on a number of occasions has been asked for information as to the date of sailing of Queen's Field Ambulance Corps. The best information obtainable shows that so far nothing has been decided on. If the corps recruits up to strength and carries a sufficient surplus, a draft may be sent which would include some officers. The remainder would be kept in the district until convenient transportation arrangements could be made.

There is also the possibility that it may be used during the winter with the troops in this district.

The official announcement, however, is to the effect that absolutely no decisions have been made, in spite of constant rumours that have been circulated, which indicates that the plans for the corps' life have been already completed.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—Out of the 385,000 men enlisted in Canada since the war commenced there are about 310,000 effectives left at the end of the twenty-fifth month. Of these, about 60,000 men, or four full divisions are at the front, 120,000 are in England, and about 100,000 in Canada.

The remainder of the total enlisted are accounted for as follows: Casu-

TAXATION SUGGESTED FOR PATRIOTIC FUND

Committee Apparently Unanimous in Opinion That Voluntary System of Contributions Will Not Avail For Future Demands

AIM AT EFFICIENCY

The maintenance of the Patriotic Fund by taxation instead of voluntary contributions from the citizens, is the prospect that looms before the ratepayers of the county and city of Peterborough. At a largely attended meeting of the Patriotic Fund committee in the Council chamber last night presided over by ex-Mayor Buller, the consensus of opinion seemed strongly inclined to the proposal that the continuance of the Fund for next year's demands should be secured by a direct tax upon the entire county, including the city and villages. This, of course, was only a preliminary discussion, and Mr. Daniel O'Connell was empowered to select a committee to consider the whole problem and report back in three weeks.

It is generally accepted that $100,000 will be required for the Patriotic Fund in 1917. This sum is suggested as an estimate, but it is regarded as a minimum of the year's support to the dependents of soldiers from the county. The city's assessment is roughly twelve million dollars and the county's nine millions. From this basis the desired amount could be equitably provided by the city raising $53,000 and the county $47,000.

It must be understood that this proposal broached last night is only a tentative one; but it has apparently the full support of the Patriotic Fund committee, whose main hope is that the special committee may be able to prepare a plan that will meet with the approval of the city and county councils at a conference at which both municipalities would be represented, together with a deputation from the Patriotic Fund committee.

A Public Duty.

Mr. O'Connell seemed to reflect and express the entire sentiment of the committee in the general proposition that the day of voluntary contribution to this particular fund was past. Troublesome details present themselves as shown by Chief Howard's reference to the fact that a property tax would place the whole burden on landlords while tenants would escape. He inquired how this obvious injustice could be prevented, and Mr. O'Connell replied that this was one of the considerations that would have to be carefully worked out.

In summarizing the brief and beneficent history of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund committee, Mr. O'Connell said that he took it for granted that the public fully appreciated its duty in assisting the wives and families of the men of this county who have enlisted. Proceeding, he referred to the economic manner in which the Fund had been administered. The time was rapidly approaching when it must be replenished, and from that point Mr. O'Connell discussed the reasons for the proposed change in the method of securing the amount required.

A Fairer Scheme.

The captains and members of the teams that have obtained the contributions in the past have found a growing opposition to this voluntary method, and because of certain experiences have themselves developed a distaste for the work. Gentlemen who have given generously in the past have intimated that on account of the demands of the war tax upon them they could not give as largely as to the two previous collections. Besides, Mr. O'Connell remarked, it was an imposition upon the generous citizens, those who have realized their duty and have done it ungrudgingly, that when their profits are taxed by the government they should be expected to continue their previous donations to the local fund while other citizens who are exceedingly wealthy and who could relieve the burden from the man of moderate means should give next to nothng to the

THE CANADIAN CASUALTIES BIGGER THAN FIRST THOUGHT

Later Reports Received at Ottawa Have Added 400 Killed and 1792 Missing to Yesterday's Total

OVER 4000 ALREADY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—That the Canadian casualties in the fighting at Courcelette Mouquet Farm and Martinpuich will exceed four thousand is indicated in the later reports which add another four hundred killed, 1,792 wounded and a number of missing to yesterday's total. The Department is still without any information as to the brigades or battalions which won so much honour in the fighting.

LIEUT. McTAGGERT KILLED IN ACTION

Popular Young Toronto Business Man Fell on September 15—Had Local Relatives

Lieut. Harry McTaggart, one of the best known of Toronto's younger business men, was killed in action on Sept. 15th, while taking part in the great Somme offensive. Official notification of Lieut. McTaggart's death was received by Mr. J. D. McTaggert, Parkdale, Toronto, father of the fallen officer. No details of how Lieut. McTaggert came by his death have been received.

Lieut. McTaggart was about 25 years of age and a native of Oshawa, Ont. He received his education in Oshawa, and came to Toronto some years ago and joined the staff of Wood, Gundy and Co. in the bond department. He quickly proved his business ability, and when he resigned to go to the front Wood, Gundy and Co. lost a highly-valued employee. In October, 1914, he qualified as a subaltern, and some time later was gazetted to the 35th Battalion. He went overseas in 1915 as one of the subalterns in 'C' Company, and after training in England went to France two months ago.

The late Lieut. McTaggert was a nephew of Mrs. Louis Spry of Peterborough and also a cousin of Mr. Bruce Johnston, Township Clerk of North Monaghan.

THE Y.M.C.A. AND OUR SOLDIERS

The morale of an army is one of its highest equipments. Comfort and entertainment—an even mind, a sense of being appreciated and cared for is an element in contributing to a consequent sense of fitness for fighting and winning, that helps, if it does not constitute, high morale. The Y.M.C.A. in the war zone is a powerful element in contributing to the comfort recreation, entertainment and contentment of the Canadian soldier who values its services, not only as a reminder of home and home interest in his welfare, but for the positive advantages it provides. Apart altogether for its abstract good work at home, the Y.M.C.A. in respect of its work in the field, is deservedly worthy of the local support of all those who take an interest and pride in our soldiers at the front and rejoice in the splendid fighting service they are rendering in a great cause, and the credit they are bringing to Canada.

WAR AND WOMEN.

Max Nordau, in an article in a United States journal, predicts as a result of the war a larger share, if not a controlling influence, of women in human affairs, civil and social. There is no doubt that the war has developed or revealed the new woman, not the new woman of the shrieking sisterhood and bizarre ideals, but the sane, whole-souled, steady woman, whose natural capacity for usefulness will have ebben developed in the field of voluntary work. All over the world, in the British Empire, in all the allied countries and in neutral countries, women have done important and noble service in the cause of humanity; not in promoting belligerent operations, but in caring for the consequences of human, or inhuman, destruction of limb and life. The capacity of women for useful service, their capacity for effective organization and systematic work has come to the world of mankind as a revelation, with a welcome in which is inherent or expressed, the spirit of the highest development of manhood — the sense of justice and equality of right. In general terms women after this war will occupy a new relation to the opposite sex—the heretofore ruling sex—whose monopoly of right to exercise dominance will be silently but not less forcibly challenged. The way will be paved for the admission, or rather the entrance, of women into new spheres of usefulness, where her presence, though a novelty will find ready recognition and be justified by the ability she has shown to satisfactorily perform the functions their occupancy involves. It does not need the fact that 7,000 women, uniformed in khaki are to-day working in one munitions factory in England or doing work in other positions, in both England and France to demonstrate the equality of the sexes and to justify a demand for the removal of the ages-old brand of inferiority. After this war it will be as absurd to deny the demand of women for suffrage rights as was held that demand itself a few years ago. A great many things besides the erstwhile relations of the sexes will be found topsy-turvied after the war.

INSURANCE AND FOREST FIRES.

The loss of life and property by the forest fires of Northern Ontario this summer are bad enough, even if some of the property loss is covered by insurance; but matters become worse if any considerable amount of insurance is uncollectable. It seems that some of the insurance policies will not be paid, of if paid, only in part. A reputable journal, "Canadian Insurance," says that $400,000 is placed with foreign companies not licensed to do business in Canada, and consequently not amenable to government influence. If an outside company repudiates a claim the insured has no redress except through the courts of a foreign country, a proceeding which would bar the ordinary insurer, who would not have the means to prosecute his claim in the courts. If a Canadian insurance company issues a policy, and it becomes a claim, such claim is perfectly valid and recoverable because either the Dominion or the Ontario government is behind the policy, every licensed company having to make a government deposit. It is therefore the part of wisdom to patronize home companies; not only is it the fair thing to do to give home capital and enterprise the preference, but it is in accordance with the proper and patriotic policy that involves the motto, "Canada for Canadians." Neglect of this is adverse to national interest, and not only that, but in the case of insurance, the individual is penalized by suffering the loss of the premium amount paid for protection, and in addition the loss, or partial loss, of the amount for which he was insured. It is palpably wise, in the case of insurance, to patronize home institutions or companies licensed to do business in this province; preferably the former.

In regard to forest fires, the Ontario government does not show more interest in prevention that it does in the safety of insurance. The best protection is to prevent forest fires, and in that our government is behind other provinces. Every forest province in Canada—Nova Scotia, Quebec, British Columbia — except Ontario, has, by law, close seasons for putting out fires. It is unlawful for a settler or other person to set fires, between certain fixed dates, without having government permission. In Nova Scotia the close season is from April 15th to December 1st; in British Columbia, from May 1st to October 1st, and in Quebec from April 1st to November 15th. In Ontario the most the law requires of settlers in putting out clearing fires between April 1st and November 1st, is that he "shall exercise and observe every due care and precaution," a proviso that in dry weather, sudden gales springing up will neutralize, and we have such catastrophies as the recent forest fires in Northern Ontario, in which 250 human lives were horribly lost, and millions of dollars of property damage done, much of which is a total loss through the placing of insurance with unlicensed or "outlaw" companies. It is given as the opinion of those who know that the recent forest fires were caused from settlers' clearing fires. The government has sent an official to the north country to investigate the recent fires and to report the best means of prevention. Expert forestry authorities declare that adequate fire ranging provision, and the permit system of placing clearing fires, are the best means; and as to the latter the experience of the other forest provinces is ample proof of its efficiency. The government must promptly provide adequate fire protection measures for the "clay belt" if its settlement is to be promoted and intending settlers are not to be deterred, by fear of incurring the risk to life and property present conditions seem to create and perpetuate.

THE WOMEN VOTE.

Four million women will have the right to exercise the franchise in the United States presidential elections this fall. The equal suffrage states are Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming. Wilson carried all these states four years ago except California and Washington, but he is not likely to be so successful this year, for the simple reason that he is now up against an entirely different sort of proposition.—Brantford Expositor.

PATRIOTIC GENIUS AND BUREAUCRATIC STUPIDITY

A United States army officer, who also was an inventor, offered seven years ago to make a present to the United States Government of a design for a machine-gun. Rather a queer fellow, this officer. He has invented several things, and everything he invented which might be useful in public service he had a habit of offering to the United States Government free—and the United States Government wouldn't take anything from the crank. He had been educated for the army at the great American Military Academy at West Point, and evidently considered himself to owe his country something. His funny doings began in 1896, when he wrote to Washington to the army authorities offering the Government a dial telegraph, in the following terms:—

"In case you accept it, it becomes the property of the War Department absolutely, and without condition so far as every military use is concerned, and the same is true, not only of this, but of every instrument or device that I may at any time submit to you."

He doesn't seem to have received even the courtesy of an answer. In 1900 he tried again to give something away. This time, it was a design for a new field gun. Again, no answer. The inventor bobbed up serenely with another effort soon after. A range-finder was his new toy. The United States Government didn't think it wanted a new range-finder, or at least the government did. The queer crank of an officer-inventor tried once more. He advanced upon the government with a machine-gun in 1910. The ordnance department at Washington got so far as to give the gun a trial, and turned it down. The officer-inventor got disgusted at last. He resigned from the United States army, went to England, and sold his machine-gun to the British Government.

To-day, more than 30,000 Lewis machine guns are in service in the British army. It is the only machine-gun used in the British first line. An American factory is making hundreds of these guns for the Canadian army. Lord Hugh Cecil, speaking in the House of Commons recently, referred to it as "a weapon that is the envy of all Europe." This opinion is indorsed by General von Donop, the British Chief of Ordnance, and by the supreme field commanders of the allied forces in France. Col Isaac Newton Lewis, U.S.A., retired is drawing a large profit from his inventions, a millionaire. Incidentally, the United States Government has within the past three months bagged and got 200 Lewis guns from the American factory making them for Canada. Also the United States artillery service uses the Lewis range-finder and pays a royalty on it—the same range-finder which Col. Lewis tried in vain to make a free gift to the United States in 1900, just as he did of the machine gun in 1910.

It's a curious story, this, of the patriotism and unselfishness of a citizen, and the indifference or stupidity sometimes of a bureaucracy.—Ottawa Journal.

THE BRITISH WAY

Sadly, grimly, the British are going now about their work. There is no hymn of hate in their resources; they have no "Marsellaise"; theirs will be a slow, silent but relentless action. What you have to feel and see is millions of men who are at last awake to the fact that all that life means to them nationally, morally, spiritually, has been threatened. After the tradition of his race and the fashion of his nation the Englishman, millions of him, has now gone out to kill and be killed until the work that is to be done is done. Once that spirit was clear in England, then those of us who believe that all that America as well as all that democracy held best in the world was at stake in this war could afford to roll up the war maps and put aside the battle reports. The incidental changes would mean nothing and they will mean nothing. "They come so slowly," the Frenchman told you of his allies six months ago, but in saying this he added, out of his race consciousness of half a thousand years of Anglo-French conflict, "but when they do come they will never stop."—New York Tribune.

THE LAURIER POLICY VINDICATED.

Replying to an address presented to him by Hon. George E. Foster, on behalf of the Empire Parliamentary Association in England the other day, expressing the appreciation of the members of that association for the opportunities afforded them of seeing Great Britain's preparations for war, after speaking of the British Army, Mr. Balfour said:

"The navy was, no doubt, of all the preparations for war, that which was in the most satisfactory condition. But the navy, when we started, was really quite inadequately supplied with the smaller lighter craft whose necessity has been made increasingly manifest all through this war, and, as I think I stated to some of you when you were kind enough to visit me at the Admiralty, the growth in our navy which has gone on, and which at this moment is still going on, is something of which I do not believe the general public has the slightest conception."

The "smaller light craft" were just what Sir Wilfrid Laurier proposed that this Dominion should supply. "Smaller lighter craft" would have been ready at the outbreak of the war, had not Sir Robert Borden gone back on his adherence to that policy to please his Nationalist friends of Quebec and made the whole Naval question one of party politics. Upon Sir Robert then must fall the blame for Canada's failure in this regard.—Halifax Chronicle.

CANADIAN LABOUR.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada meets in Toronto next Monday. Safe to say, it meets with the respect and good will of the great majority of the Canadian people. Canadian unions, while alert enough and resolute enough in the promotion of labour interests, have in the main been reasonable and fair. Partly owing to this, partly owing to the Lemieux Act, which requires an attempt at conciliation before a strike or lock out can be legal in connection with public-service corporations, Canada has been more free from industrial strife than any other English-speaking country.

The Trades and Labour Congress has had in its chief office this year, the presidency, an Ottawa man, Mr. T. J. Watters. Another Ottawa man, Mr. P. M. Draper, has been secretary of the Congress for many years. Beyond doubt, Mr. Draper has been a strength to the Congress and to the cause of union labour in Canada. His ability and courage, which are widely recognized, are combined with both unusual force on the platform and tact in handling union interests. The temper in Canadian labour which is represented by officers of the stamp of Mr. Draper is responsible for the fact that the Trades and Labour Congress, which has safeguarded labour interests steadily with little tolerant expression or action, carries greater weight with the general public than is probably the case in many countries.—Ottawa Journal.

NO PLACE IN SERMONS FOR SENSATIONALISM

Dr. Thomas Eakin Urges Sunday Lectures on Theological Difficulties

Toronto, September 22.—"The war has had practically no influence upon our national temper. As a people our ideals have not changed," said Dr. Thomas Eakin of St. Andrew's church in the course of an address on "The Art of Preaching," at Knox College Alumni yesterday morning. "The duty of the preacher is to bring God back into human life by the upholding of spiritual idealism."

"We are passing through a period of reconstruction in belief, and this is the cause of the intellectual unrest that is prevalent. Preachers must deal with fundamentals and not be led into the side paths of sensationalism. There should be a place in the Church for the clearing away of the intellectual difficulties which are keeping many men out of organized Christianity. Preachers have been excessively shy about meeting the honest doubts of men." Dr. Eakin recommended the devoting of one of the services on Sunday to lectures on Scriptural and theological difficulties.

$1,500,000 Wharves For Vancouver

The Canadian Pacific has plans for wharves at Vancouver which will cost $1,500,000. These plans will dove-tail into those which the city contemplates to carry out at the port. The latter is growing in value and bigness all the time. There is great complaint from shippers of congestion, for Vancouver is becoming a great port. The city is going to spend $5,000,000 on wharf extension in the immediate future, and the railway company, on its own account, has plans for a further extension of the wharves which it will use for its own business. Both east and west the Canadian Pacific Railway has now for its shipping interests, facilities which render it absolutely independent — this independence making for better and more efficient service in the ocean carrying business which the company has notably extended during the past few years. The fleet of the company now numbers, all told, over 100 vessels; but it has especia[illegible] on its Atlantic and Tran[illegible] latter years — recognizing, as it did, the possibilities of increased exchange between this intimacy and largeness of communication which, somewhat hurt by the war, are resuming their urgency and importance from day to day.

BAKERS CONSPIRE LONDONER CLAIMS

First-class Bread Made at Asylum For Two and Third Cents a Pound

London, Ont., September 22.—The claim that the bakers of London, Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Winnipeg, and other leading cities in Canada, are in league to institute an era of higher bread prices, was made by a Londoner who claims to be in touch with the conditions. His allegation is that the bakers are working in union in the matter of increases in the belief that government investigators shall not be able to produce any record of embarrassingly low quotations.

It is stated on seemingly good authority that the bakers who raised the price of the 24-ounce unwrapped loaf from seven to eight cents on Monday, contemplate a further advance of a cent in order that the cry of the grocers for a wider margin of profit may be satisfied. Dr. W. J. Robinson, the superintendent of the London Asylum, stated that bread is made at his institution for 2 1-3 cents a pound of the finest ingredients bought in the open market. As experience there shows that 100 pounds of flour make 127 pounds of bread, it is contended that an advance in the cost of flour from $5.75 per barrel to $8.60, justified only an increase of a cent and a tenth in a pound of bread. Therefore it is contended that the bakers in Toronto particularly are charging extortionate and unjust prices.

C. P. R. Operates 20,000 Miles of Track

If all the trackage over which the Canadian Pacific has control—that is all the leased lines, or lines taken bodily over, or with runrang rights—be included in a grand total, the company operates to-day 20,000 miles of tracks. This fact alone would tell of the biggness of the corporation which, thirty years ago, issued its first annual statement on a sheet of note paper. The company owns 100,000 miles of telegraph; 10,000,000 acres of unsold lands, worth $200,000,000; and controls shipping to the extent of 400,000 tons. One of the notable features of the great corporation is, that it takes account of so many things, which, at the first blush, might not seem to be related to railway transportation. The comfort of the inner man on the trains is, of course, of prime moment; but note how the Canadian Pacific Railway went out of its way to provide dietetic gastronomy. The railway company milks its own cows, and makes its own soap. It bakes its own bread; and it bores a tunnel through the mountains above the clouds. It grows its own potatoes, and its policies are of world-wide import and significance.

Rev. Dr. Norton Dead Prominent in Missions

HELD LEADING POSITION IN BAPTIST DENOMINATION—HOME MISSION SUPERINTENDENT.

Toronto, September 21.—The death took place in Toronto, of the Rev. Dr. William E. Norton, Superintendent of Baptist Home Missions, for Ontario and Quebec. Deceased was born in Arkona, in the County of Lambton, 65 years ago. As a young man he left the teaching profession to go into the ministry. He graduated from McMaster University, and then held pastorates at Stayner, Georgetown and Owen Sound.

Dr. Norton came to Toronto fifteen years ago, and in his late position proved a force in the Baptist denomination. He had been ill for about a year. Deceased is survived by his widow and one daughter. The funeral service takes place at Walmer Road Baptist Church on Saturday afternoon, and the place of interment is Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Tirpitz Accused of Cooking Report

GERMAN ADMIRAL ANGRY AT CHARGE MADE AGAINST HIM.

Berlin, Sept. 22.—Admiral von Tirpitz has been aroused by the charges brought against him by Professor Valentin that he furnished incorrect information to the Reichstag during the submarine controversy. Prof. Valentin is employed in the foreign office, and the papers print letters which passed between Admiral von Tirpitz and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg in regard to the affairs.

From the letters it appears that in a private conversation, Prof. Valentin asserted that Admiral von Tirpitz had misled the Reichstag, in regard to the number of available submarines, and the possibility of a submarine campaign. The Admiral demanded that the Chancellor discipline Prof. Valentin. Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, in his reply, frees von Tirpitz from Valentin's charges, but decides that the professor is not subject to his disciplinary powers.

WINFIELD SHEEHAN SUED FOR $75,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Winfield R. Sheehan, formerly secretary to Waldo Rhinelander when he was Police Commissioner, and well known in political circles, was made defendant in an action for alleged breach of promise, started by Miss Julian Baubien. She demanded $75,000 'heart balm'.

The papers in the case state that the alleged affair was a romance of Long Beach. There, in 1913, the defendant alleges, the Commissioner's secretary won her heart. He not only promised to marry her, but went so far as actually to set the date, according to her complaint. When the time approached he postponed it, and then kept postponing it until his wedding last May, she asserts. Then Sheehan married Kay Laurell, an actress.

Miss Boubien also sets forth that Mr. Sheehan promised her, pending the wedding ceremony, a life of comfort and ease, and that she gave up employment at a lucrative salary at the request of the defendant. She alleges that, added to the monetary loss thus incurred, Mr. Sheehan has greatly humiliated her by giving his heart and hand to some one else. All told, it is worth just $75,000 to her, the complaint sets forth.

Mr. Sheehan was married to Miss Laurell in London last May. He is in the motion picture business.

"Y" Campaign Is Extended

Workers Will Try to Reach Desired Amount By To-morrow Night

The Y.M.C.A. campaign for $5,000 has been extended and will continue to-day and to-morrow. The total reached last night was $3,900, $1,100 short of the goal. It is hoped to reach the desired amount with the two extra days' effort. The workers will meet for tea at the Y.M.C.A. to-night.

Taxation Suggested For Patriotic Fund

Fund. Then there were a number of individuals who had given nothing at all.

Those Who Have Escaped.

Mr. O'Connell hoped that a plan could be evolved by which the property owner would not be unduly burdened. The special committee, he said, should endeavour to reach tenants, and also young men in munition factories who have been receiving big wages. These, and other anomalous cases, he said, should be included if possible in a proposal that would aim to spread the burden fairly and proportionately over all the people.

The question of the rural community was briefly touched upon, and it is likely that the special committee will include representatives from the county.

It might be repeated that this suggestion may not yet take effect, that the plans in any event, are indefinite, and that the object of the committee is not to evade their former self-imposed duties and drop the fund on to the shoulders of the property owners, but to arrive at an equitable and efficient system of maitaining the Patriotic Fund in Peterborough.

Body of Unknown Found In Whirlpool

Niagara Falls, September 22.—The body of a man was recovered from the whirlpool that had been in the water for over a week. It was 5 feet 9 inches, weighs 160 pounds, and is that of a man about 40 years of age. A set of rosary beads was found in his coat pocket, and there was a C.M.B.A. receipt book. Dues had been paid up to August, and the name of the financial secretary looks like J. D. Sullivan. The body is now at Russell's undertaking rooms, awaiting identification.

Police After The Traffic Outlaws

Since the drunks have disappeared from the police court, Chief Thompson's men have been collecting a little revenue from the reckless automobile drivers. It is not suggested that Chief Thompson called his staff together and told them to exercise greater vigilance in enforcing the Traffic By-law in order that the deficiency expected as the result of the Temperance Act might be covered. It is more likely that some of the automobile owners have become so indifferent to the regulations that one carelessness leads to another then the police apprehend them in a flagrant violation, and Magistrate Dumble does the rest. A word to the wise autoist should be sufficient.

AUTOMOBILE FOUND NEAR BETHANY

Lindsay, Sept. 22. — On Tuesday evening, Chief Short received a message from Dr. Hamilton of Bethany, notifying him that an automobile was standing on the roadside about 4 miles from the village.

The Chief requested the doctor to ascertain the number of the car, which he promptly did. The car was none other than the one stolen from in front of the Butler House on Saturday night, and which belonged to W. B. Graham of Oakwood. It was not damaged in the slightest. Chief Short notified Mr. Graham, who was naturally well pleased that the automobile had been found.

HARD TO GET GAS IN BRITAIN NOW

London, September 21.—If American motorists feel troubled over the cost of gas for their buss carts, let them listen to the Britishers troubles and rejoice at their own good fortune.

The British private motor car owner is unable to get the gas he wants at any price. When German submarines began torpedoing the oil tank ships from the United States, the American oil men quit shipping it. Consequently gasoline is so scarce in England that it is given out by card to car owners in very limited quantities.

Not only is the private motor car owner compelled to present his oil card when he is compelled to run his machine for a few miles, but the little gas he gets is begrudged to him. Many a motor car is in its garage until after the war on this acount.

The government has allowed 60 per cent. of the amount of gas demanded by the commercial car owners, 50 per cent. of that asked for taxis, 25 per cent. of the private motor owners' demand, and 2 gallons a month for motorcycles.

All the evidences point to the doom of private motoring until after the war. And the private motor car owner blames the submarines and the American oil shipper.

Japanese Soldier Killed Missionaries

Tokio, Sept. 22.—Hitomi Kawakami, a former soldier, has been arrested on a charge of murdering the Rev. W. A. Campbell and his wife, Canadian missionaries, in July last. The police allege that the man has confessed.

The Rev. Mr. Campbell and his wife (both formerly of Toronto) were stabbed to death July 16 in their summer cottage at Karuizawa, an American missionary summer resort. The murderer, after forcing the Japanese maid to disclose the whereabouts of the cash box in the house, robbed it of $10.50, and then escaped.

Six Days' Fight Results In, Etc.

sian success prepares the way for the drive into Bulgaria from the north. The thrust depends on the strength of the Russian forces and the numbers Mackensen can gather to withstand it.

ROUMANIANS STOP COUNTER-ATTACK.

In Transylvania the Roumanians have stopped the counter-attack of the Austrians in the south, after retiring toward the border. The heights flanking the Vulcan Pass are now in possession of the Teutons, but the Roumanians are firmly entrenched in the second beyond.

In northern Transylvania there has come up word of a Roumanian advance. Apparently some of King Ferdinand's troops have been withdrawn to aid in halting Mackensen, while others were withdrawn to the southern front. It is hardly likely that the Austrian Advance in the south will endanger the Roumanian hold on Hermannstadt and Kronstadt but until this position is regained the clearing of Transylvania will be difficult.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MAYOR AND COUNCIL

To the Mayor and Council of Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—I am obliged to the Council for taking the necessary action to prevent all danger of the part of Rubidge Street in possession of the R. C. Church from becoming lost to the people as a public street by length of possession.

I observe by the newspaper reports that I, for doing my duty in respect of this road, am to be notified to remove my fence from a part of London street which I erected to keep people from falling into my back yard. It will be remembered that a deep ravine extended across London street which the Council filled in, first building cedar crib work to hold up the earth. The fence has become old and shaky. I am not obliged by law to keep up that fence as I did not make any excavation here, the danger was made by the City and I now draw your attention to it as a dangerous place. If any accident occurs there by reason of an unprotected drop of twelve feet the City will be liable as it was created by the City. Always watchful of the City's interests I once more suggest the necessity of protecting the people from accidents and you from damages that may be sought against you if injury is suffered by any one by reason of your neglect.

I am Sirs,
Your old servant.

$4,000 Is Missing From Pay Satchel

SARNIA POLICE HELPING THE IMPERIAL REFINERY TO SOLVE MYSTERY.

Sarnia, Sept. 22.—Four thousand dollars is missing from the pay rolls of the Imperial Refinery Company here, and the officials and the police have as yet failed to locate it. The money to the extent of $45,000, was taken from the bank by three clerks of the company, and was counted before being signed for. When the satchel was opened at the plant by five paymasters, it was found to be short. The matter has been kept quiet by the police and the officials and details are lacking. No arrests have been made.

LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR DEPARTMENT

¶ An impression appears to have gained credence in some quarters that this department only carries the Higher Grade Garments in SUITS, COATS, DRESSES, WAISTS and SKIRTS, and while this may be and as a matter of fact is actually true in a general sense, on the other hand the BARRIE policy is to cater for all tastes and pockets, exactly the same care being exercised in the selection of the more reasonably priced garments as in the case with the more expensive ones.

¶ Further, a lady desiring, say for example a suit at $15.00, $20.00 or $25.00 is absolutely certain of receiving just the same measure of courtesy and attention as a lady buying one at $60.00 or $70.00.

¶ Several ladies visiting the store for the first time have commented on this fact remarking also that Barrie's Limited is one of the prettiest and best equipped stores in Canada while the attention and service given is beyond question.

MRS. MARY LOWRY OF CAVAN TOWNSHIP IS A NONOGENARIAN

Relatives and Friends Assemble to Observe the Occasion—Mrs. Lowry Was the Recipient of Many Presents on the Anniversary of Her 90th Birthday

THE GUESTS

Millbrook, September 21. — On Thursday last a large gathering assembled at the residence of Mr. Jas. D. Armstrong, Maplehurst, to do honors to Mrs. Armstrong's mother, Mrs. Mary Lowry, who had that day reached the great age of 90 years, in the full enjoyment of health and strength, with all her faculties unimpaired. Surrounded by a numerous and happy company of guests, including her children, many grandchildren, also several great grandchildren, Mrs. Lowry was greatly cheered by their presence and by the gifts presented in token of their good wishes and affectionate regard. A bountiful dinner was served to between 20 and 30 guests, after which appropriate words of congratulations and greetings were spoken by Mr. James D. Armstrong and Rev. J. W. Lowry, sons-in-law, Mr. Isaac Larmer, brother, and Messrs. W. J. McLean, Toronto, and John McLean, Palmerston, grandsons, Miss Mary Lowry of Franktown, gave two humorous recitations. The company joined in singing the old-time doxology, "Praise God from whom all Blessings Flow."

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Larmer, Cavan; Mr. and Mrs W. J. McLean, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. John McLean and four children, of Palmerston; Rev. J. W. and Mrs. Lowry, and three children, of Franktowns, Ont.; Mrs. Effie Vester and little daughter, of Blenheim; besides Mr. and Mrs. James Armstrong. It was regrettable that Mrs. Lowry's two sons, James D. Lowry, of Montreal, and Rev. C. H. Lowry of Bridgeburgh, Ont., were both unable to be present, owing to illness. The latter accompanied by his son, Ariel, had quite recently visited his venerable mother, and a letter arrived from him during the festivities of Thursday, extending his greetings and good wishes.

Mrs. Lowry is the widow of the late Robert P. Lowry of Newcastle, who has been dead for upwards of forty years. Mrs. Lowry makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. J. D. Armstrong. There are twelve grandchildren and fifteen great grandchildren of Mrs. Lowry, residing in Ontario, besides her two sons and two daughters.

Mother Called Away Leaving Six Children

FATHER ON ACTIVE SERVICE AT THE FRONT—A GUELPH HOME STRICKEN.

Guelph, Sept. 22.—The death took place here under exceptionally sad circumstances, of Mrs. Albert Clark, at her home on Jessie street. She had just gone upstairs for the night and was seized with a fainting spell. She did not rally, and passed away in a very short time, heart failure being given as the cause. Her husband enlisted here with the 71st Battalion, and is now with the 75th at the front. She leaves six small children, the eldest being only ten years, and the youngest a babe of three months.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of the Examiner:

Mr. Editor,—Hope you will have space in your Voice of the People column for this, I wish to say a few words in connection with the scavenger work.

When we managed it ourselves, the man would come around regular and we would pay him, the Board put a tax on us and paid the men by the day with the result that the men never come near us since the first of April. In the meantime I told one of the men in the Health Office, but nothing was done until they raised the price to the enormous sum of 40c a month then I got a call for 40c.

Now sir, the people should get after the men who appoint such men, they should let us handle that ourselves, and fine those who left it so long with out cleaning. Hope you will print this Mr. Editor, as it is a sore thing on the people.

A RATEPAYER.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I would feel greatly obliged to you if you would allow me a small space in your paper to speak regarding the new scavenging rules, which do not seem to be quite fair or just to a good many people; for instance, is it necessary for a small family like myself, with one little child, and with limited means, to pay 40 cents a month to a scavenger. Last Dominion Day two men, well known in the Police Courts, called at most of the houses in East City. Both appeared to be the worse for liquor at the time, and they told the householders that they had orders to do the night work for East City, and they were to be paid 40 cents a month. Several tenants asked them to show papers giving them the authority, but they had none to show, so with one or two exeptions, no one engaged them for the work. The indents referred to happened before any notice was given in the papers regarding scavenger work, so it was no wonder that the people kicked against these men. One lady on Hazlett street paid her 40 cents to one man before the work was done, as she told the men she would not be at home that night when he came to do the work. On her return the next day the work had not been done. The man returned a few days after and told her he was sorry he had not done the work, but not to let the other man know about it, and he would give her back her money. She waited for a while, but no man returned with the money or to do the work. At last she telephoned to Inspector Cooper and stated her case, and he promised to see it was done, but up to now neither Inspector or scavenger has been near to do anything. The same lady met the man on the street a week or two ago, and asked him about the 40 cents she paid him to do the work, and he told her to go to h—. These same men are now engaged to be the people's scavengers.

In these times, when so many women are obliged to live alone, with no protection, on account of their husbands being at the war or having died, it is not pleasant to have the likes of such men around your house. I am sure most of the neighbours around where I live would be glad to have a different arrangement made regarding the night work.

I hope the Council will be able to do something to remedy people being exposed to such unpleasantness.

Thanking you for taking up so much space in your valuable paper.

I remain,

FAIR PLAY.

Lindsay Water Requires Boiling

Lindsay, Sept. 22.—It was brought to the attention of the Board of Health that a sample of Lindsay water had been sent by the Medical Health Officer, Dr. McAlpine, to the Provincial Analyst, and it had been declared unsafe in its present state. The analyst recommended the boiling of town water.

Our Fall Waists Are Winning New Friends Every Day

YOU'LL not wonder why when you see the waists And since one can't have too many waists to wear with their suits or with the new separate skirts, it is only natural that selections are being made early and women are buying two and three waists at a time.

$3.75 For Beautiful New Silk Waists

We hardly need mention that silk is one of the favoured waist materials for Fall. As a matter of fact, the soft, filmy effects in the Fall waists can only be gained with such material as Jap Silk. These waists at $3.75 are in the very newest modes with square or pointed collars. Some hand embroidered, others trimmed in fine lace, while others rely on the attractive arrangement of the material and large pearl buttons.

New Frill and Jabot Waists $1.98

A very superior fine quality of Jap Silk made in an attractive jabot style of different lengths. Waists of this type are particularly desirable for wearing with the new fall suits. Our Saturday leader.

The Millinery Dept. is constantly showing newer styles.

Child Knocked Down By A Motor Truck

Daughter of Ex-Alderman John Anderson Was the Victim of An Accident at Noon To-day

Gwendolyn Anderson, the eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson, 156 Douro street, was run down by a motor truck to-day at noon, sustaining injuries that necessitated medical attention. The accident took place at the corner of Roger and Douro streets. According to eye-witnesses the child stepped from behind a milk wagon directly in front of the approaching truck. No blame is attached to the driver, who stopped and left his name and address with the child's mother. During the excitement following the accident, Mrs. Anderson failed to remember the name. A couple of milk vendors who witnessed the accident say that no blame could be attached to anybody.

Doctors Moir and J. V. Gallivan, who were summoned, rendered aid to the injured child, who was found to have sustained severe bruises. No bones were broken.

Ex-Alderman John Anderson, father of the child, is in St. Joseph's hospital and is in a serious condition, due to heart trouble.

The Gault Divorce Case Is Up Again

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—The Gault divorce case is to come up again before Parliament. This time, however, the legal relations of the parties are reversed. Last session Major Hamilton Gault applied for a divorce from his wife and failed. Next session Mrs. Gault will be the applicant and Major Gault the respondent. Major Gault, who was instrumental in raising the Princess Patricias, has been thrice wounded, on the last occasion losing a leg. He is still convalescing. Mrs. Gault is a daughter of G. W. Stephenson of Montreal. Both families are wealthy.

Six Months For John Coyle

John Coyle, a resident of the county was this morning given six months in gaol on a charge of vagrancy. It is alleged that Coyle has not been known to do a day's work in three years. He was brought to the city by County Constable Dickson.

OVERDRAFTS HAVE SOURED COUNCILS AGAINST HYDRO

When the Provincial Government purchased the Seymour Power properties they were forthwith lost to the Trent municipalities as taxable material. Thus Peterborough was deprived of $8,000, as a result of local companies passing into the Government's hands. But the local Council forwarned of the prospect prepared to meet it, but other municipalities face overdrafts as the result of their losses. This condition was largely responsible for the meeting in Port Hope yesterday of representatives of the counties of Victoria, Peterborough, Ontario, Durham and Northumberland at which a resolution was passed, on motion of Mayor Conant of Oshawa, seconded by Mayor Kylie of Lindsay, protesting against the action of the Hydro-Electric Commission in wiping out the taxes on the property purchased by the Government, and appointing a strong deputation to wait upon the Commission with a view to having the 1916 taxes paid. Mayor Duffus, Mr. Robt. Hicks and City Clerk Armstrong attended the meeting as local representatives.

To the Examiner this morning, Mayor Duffus stated that in his remarks at the meeting he had offered caution regarding the manner in which the Commission might be approached if the municipalities so decided. While Port Hope was deprived of $1,900 taxes, Peterborough had lost $8,000, but the general feeling here was that this had been amply covered by securing power at cost. Mayor Duffus considered that the municipalities should not strive to handicap the Commission in its work, but rather facilitate it. He replied to complaints that the association of Ontario municipalities was controlled by those in the west end by stating that the east had been asleep, had not attended the meetings nor borne any cost of the work. When a separate Trent Valley association was suggested letters were sent from Peterborough to all the municipalities in this district but only one sent in the application fee, and that was some township. Mayor Duffus felt that the power question was a big one and that it should be regarded in a broad manner.

WASHINGTON, D.C.—No ground for complaint to the Central Powers was found by state department officials in a summary received from the consul at Barcelona of affidavits made by two American sailors of the Italian bark Stella del Mare, sank off the Spanish coast and believed to have been torpedoed. The statements of the American seamen are regarded as too inconclusive to furnish the basis for diplomatic inquiries.

PROPOSED TO CLOSE MILL STREET

Matter May Be Considered This Evening at a Meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council

A meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council will be held this evening when matters relating to the proposal to close Mill street and a part of Murray street may come up for discussion. Both the City Council and the Quaker Oats Company are anxious to have the matter settled. The closing of Mill street will enable the Company to proceed with the proposed additions to the present plant. The additions will take the form of a new warehouse and office building.

SERVES NOTICE ON MONTREAL POLICE HE OWNS OCEANS!

Ownership of the earth has been claimed by more than one person since the world began, but it remained for a man in Singapore to come forward and produce what he pretends is a prior claim on the oceans of this much-owned sphere. This man, who only wants his rights to the five oceans, evidently has great respect for the judgment of the Montreal police force, as he has taken the matter up with that body. The post card is postmarked "Singapore," and a blue circle on the face of it shows that it passed the censors at Madras on August 10 last. It is addressed "The Stock Exchange, or the Chamber of Commerce, or the Chief of Police, Montreal, Canada.

NOTICE.

"My rights of the oceans, being first claimant there, in respect of planting islands on mid-North Atlantic and on other oceans to serve as cities or otherwise to the world by my patent or by other manner, have been proclaimed by Heavenly Spirits throughout the world in June, 1916. Confirmation thereof could be given. Offers are invited.

"Tang Hong Poh, 57 Hill street, Singapore, S.S."

As the writer said nothing about tearing down the stars, or drinking the ocean, the police department are not worrying over the outcome of his claim.

"He's going to have one glorious time collecting," remarked one of the officials.

Infantile Paralysis Claims Young Merchant

FRED MITCHELL, PORT STANLEY, CONTRACTED DISEASE IN NEW YORK STATE.

London, Ont., September 22—Infantile paralysis, contracted on a recent trip through New York State, has claimed a victim in this city, Mr. Fred Mitchell, of Port Stanley, dying within 60 hours of taking it. He was 22 years of age and had been married less than a year. While he was absent from home his wife visited with relatives in London. When Mr. Mitchell arrived here on Sunday evening he was not feeling well, but it was not until Tuesday that the paralysis appeared, after which he sank rapidly. Besides his young bride he is survived by his mother. The Medical Health Officer ordered the body to be embalmed and every precaution taken against the spread of the disease. The house has been fumigated and the few people who had been exposed have been quarantined.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BROOKLYN AND BOSTON LOOK LIKE WINNERS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

Results yesterday practically assure baseball fans that the world's series will be fought out this fall between the Brooklyn Nationals and the Boston Americans. The former won yesterday, while its nearest rivals, Philadelphians and Boston, lost. The Philadelphians are now two and a half games behind, and Boston four and one-half in the rear of the leaders. Brooklyn still has fourteen games to play all at home; one against St. Louis, six against Chicago, three against Philadelphia and four against New York. Philadelphia has remaining one game against Pittsburg, four against Cincinnati and three against Boston, a total of 14. The standing:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Brooklyn	85	56	.60714
Philadelphia	83	55	.58993
Boston	78	57	.57777

In making it three straight over Detroit yesterday, Boston pushed Jennings' men another full game behind, now leading them by three contests. Chicago held second place, though it lost to Philadelphia, but dropped to two and a half games behind Boston.

Boston has eleven games yet to play. Four are with Cleveland, four with New York and three with Philadelphia. Chicago will be playing four with New York and four with Cleveland, and Detroit still has to meet Washington in four games and St. Louis in three. The standing:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Boston	84	59	.58741
Chicago	83	63	.56940
Detroit	83	64	.56463

LACROSSE IN EUROPE BY CANADIAN TEAMS

Con. Jones would Send Sport to the Countries Ridden by War.

MONTREAL, Sept. 19.—It comes out that when Con. Jones, the Pacific Coast lacrosse magnate, visited Montreal about two weeks ago, one of his reasons was to arrange, if possible, the preliminaries for a patriotic tour of the world with a series of games between a French-Canadian team and a first-class Canadian team.

He had conferences with W. J. Foran, Trustee of the Minto and Stanley Cups, and in charge of the last European tour of Canadian lacrosse teams, as well as with Joe Lally and A. L. Caron, President of the National A.A.A. The latter met Jones again in New York last week, when they had another long talk, and it looks now as if the plan might mature.

The plan is to play a twenty-four game series through Canada and Europe, the net profits to go entirely to the patriotic fund. This means that no salaries would be paid. Both Caron and Jones believe that they could get the very best players in Canada to give their services. If the preliminary plans properly mature the organization of the trip will be pushed to a finish early next spring.

M'AULIFFE RETIRED WITH BOXING CROWN

Thirty-two years ago Jack McAuliffe, the former lightweight champ, defeated three men in a single session at New York. Jack was then just starting his professional career, and having defeated several young hopefuls of New York and Brooklyn fistic circles without raising a perspiration, he decided to tackle them in lots instead of singly. Jack disposed of Patsy Hogan, Bill Whitney and Geo Klino in less than one round each.

Having been victorious in several of the lightweight tournaments McAuliffe challenged Jimmy Mitchell to battle for the championship and claimed the lightweight title when Jimmy refused. In 1887 McAuliffe fought Jim Carney, the English lightweight champion, for the world's title at Revere, Mass. It was a fierce and bloody bout, and in the 74th round the ring was broken into and the fight was called a draw. McAuliffe was the only lightweight champion who ever retired while the retiring was good.

LONDON.—The loss of the steamships Dewa and Lord Tredegar is announced by Lloyds. The Lord Tredegar, a freighter, was bound to Port Said from New York, where she was cleared by Funch, Edye & Co., and was under the British flag.

1,000 On Deck See 2 Vessels Sunk By A Submarine

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. — How the steamship Patria, of the Fabre line, escaped being torpedoed although two other vessels which had preceded her to sea by only a few minutes were sunk, was told by her passengers and crew when she arrived here yesterday from Naples.

Carrying five cabin and more than a thousand steerage passengers, nearly all of the latter being women and children, the Patria steamed from Oran, Algiers, on the night of September 7 last, bound for New York. A British steamship and one flying the Norwegian flag got ready to steam at the same time. Owing to the much larger bulk of the Patria, however, the other vessels got away from their piers several minutes earlier.

It was a bright moonlit night, and the five cabin passengers were on the deck, as were practically all of the women and children of the steerage. All the cabin passengers were Americans. They were Miss Agnes Schickel, Mrs. Caroline Mitchell, Robert Lowell Moore, of Cambridge, Mass., returning home from ambulance service at Verdun; Professor Philip J. Gentner, director of the Museum of Natural History, at Worcester, Mass., and Louis C. Baldwin, a medical student.

The bay at Oran has a peculiar formation, making it necessary for all craft of any considerable depth to make a detour around a long crescent shaped jetty. When the British and the Norwegian vessels, both freighters, reached the outlet of the bay and were rounding the end of the jetty to turn into the open sea, the Patria was more than a mile and a half behind them.

"Just after the British ship got outside the sea wall," said one of the officers of the Patria yesterday, "we heard a loud report. Everybody naturally looked in the direction whence it had sounded, but for more than a couple of minutes nothing unusual was observed. Then, suddenly, the British ship made a lurch forward, and in less time than it takes to describe it she sank, her bow going down first and her stern almost vertically upright. Many of the women aboard the Patria fainted; others shrieked.

"The Norwegian ship was making frantic efforts to turn about, but before she could do so there was another report and in less than ten minutes she, too, sank.

"The moment it had become apparent that the two vessels had been to all haste to port. We had too many all haste to port. eW had too many lives on board to take any chances with the submarine, even though we do carry cannon for defensive purposes. We did put out lifeboats, however, hoping to rescue the crews of the two stricken ships. Before our lifeboats could reach them the crews had managed to get into several of the boats which had been lowered by the Norwegian steamer as soon as it was realized that the British vessel had been struck. Everything could be seen distinctly, as the moon was particularly bright.

"We remained at Oran over night. The following morning, after we had ascertained, as well as such things can be, that the submarine was no longer visible outside the bar, we steamed. The bravest of us no doubt felt peculiar sensations until we reached a place on the high seas when we could be quite sure that no periscope could show itself without being a target for our gun."

PRISONER FREE FOR LACK OF $185

NEW YORK, Sept 22.—Because Harper county, Kansas, would not or could not raise the $185 needed for his extradition, Peter Jenson accused of forgery, is to-day a free man.

Ten months ago Jenson, it is alleged, forged the name "O. W. Wilson" to a cheque for $20 and passed it for payment in Sedgwick, Kan. A bankers' association hired a detective agency to trace him. R. N. Smith delegated clue and finally located Jenson in Patterson, N.J., two weeks ago. He had him arrested and soon after, the 'posed to the task, followed clue after Howard Gall, Deputy Chief of Police assert, Jenson confessed.

wick authorities of the arrest and told them that Jenson awaited extradition. Yesterday he received a telegram from Sheriff J.N. Smith, of Harper county, Kansas, stating that the County Commissioners had refused to appropriate the $185 needed to bring Jenson back to Kansas, and that the decision therefore has been reached to drop the complaint.

The telegram was turned over to William H. Young, recorder of the Paterson Police Court who signed the order for Jenson's release.

MILITARY NEWS

alties have totalled about 40,000. On August 31 the total was 37,861, which included 5,978 killed in action, 2,248 died of wounds, and 398 died of sickness, making a total of 8,644 died; 724 presumed died; 27,212 wounded; and 1,282 missing. Since then Canadian forces have sustained a loss of several thousand. In the fighting on the Somme the Canadian lost 400 killed ,1,200 wounded, and 300 missing.

In addition to the casualties enumerated above, there are about 12,000 men employed in garrison and guard duty, who cannot be classed as effective, while of the total enlisted from two to three thousand have been turned down at the second medical inspection or have deserted.

London, Sept. 21—General Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia, has received a letter from Sir Douglas Haig, of which the following is an extract: "I desire to express my sincere appreciation of the generous terms in which you refer to the achievements of the army in France. It must be a source of pride and gratification to you to know that the gallant officers and men who come from Canada to fight for the King and the common cause of our Empire invariably do their duty in a way that reflects the greatest possible credit on themselves and their Dominion."

Honour For The 80th Band.

Word has just been received in Canada that the band of the 80th was chosen to proceed to the front to play to the men in the trenches. The band was selected as a representative one of Canada. No further particulars than these were given. It is satisfactory to find that the bands of Canada are evidently appreciated on the other side.

His Honour Judge Huycke has received a cablegram from his son, Lieut. Meredith Huycke of the Canadian Field Artillery.

"Safe through this show. On leave in England".

Lieut. Huycke who is the well-known City League pitcher, evidently refers in his cable to the recent offensive by the Canadians on the Somme front. He went overseas with the 33rd Battery a year ago and has been at the front for some time.

Mrs. Waddell has received an interesting letter from Rev. J. G. Potter, former pastor of St. Andrew's in which reference is made to the wounding of Mr. Potter's son, Lance-Corp. Grant Potter. The letter states that his injury was not unexpected as he had been engaged in some particularly dangerous work recently. A cable has been received to the effect that his condition shows an improvement.

Mrs. J. Knox, President of the Canadian Kitchener League, has received the following letter:

Dear Madam,—I wish to thank you for the socks and tobacco which have been handed to me by Gunner Nicol of this battery. I might say that the socks arrived just in time as I had only one pair left, and they were more than ready for the washtub.

Driver S. Johnston,

5th Battery, C.F.A., 1st Canadian Division, France.

Dear Madam,—We received a parcel of socks and things enclosed today from the ladies of Peterborough, and am sorry your boys weren't lucky enough to receive it, but assure you it was much appreciated by us just the same. Anything from Canada is a welcome gift to us.

I hardly know what we would have done for socks last winter if it had not been for what you have done for us. I am a corporal in the 8th Canadian Battery from New Brunswick. We have been out here since February, 1915, and played our part in the big fight here a year ago.

We were in action here for some time, but are out now for a rest, so are enjoying life under the circumstances.

With best wishes.

Corp. A. W. Starratt,

1st Canadian Division, 2nd Brigade, C. F. A.

Corporal Saddler Jack Ridyard, late with the 8th C.M.R., now with the C.A.S.C., writing to his parents from "Somewhere in France," wishes them to thank the ladies of the Trinity Methodist church for parcel which he received on August 4th, 1916, which should have reached him for Christmas, 1915, and hopes that the time will not be long before he has a chance to thank them himself.

George Edward Heath is the latest addition to the ranks of the 247th Battalion. He passed the examination yesterday. Lieut.-Col. Johnston, of the 247th, is in Havelock to-day on business in connection with the battalion. It is expected that the Havelock district will endeavour to recruit a platoon for the 247th.

The Kingston Standard says: There is some talk of making the band of the 155th battalion a District band, and keeping the organization in the Third Military District instead of sending it overseas. If this was done it would be necessary to give the 155th an equal number of men to take the place of the bandsmen, and also to purchase the instruments which belong to the 155th battalion. As bands are of little use overseas, even while the units are in England, such a change might be made with some benefit, providing it could be done without robbing an overseas unit of forty men, and appropriating their instruments for which a battalion had to pay.

FREE LONDON FROM SIN

Bishop Ingram Declares a Moral Change is Needed in the City.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A crowd which filled the churchyard of St. James' in Piccadilly was addressed yesterday by the Bishop of London from an outdoor pulpit, his topic being "A moral change required in London." The Bishop wore a khaki uniform as chaplain of the forces, and carried his pastoral staff.

He denounced the white slavers who "walk up and down this very Piccadilly night by night," and told his audience that shooting was too good for them. He also attacked immoral plays and continued:

"For the sake of the boys who fight for us, the boys who have died for us, for the sake of the children of the future, let us free London from the curse of lust and sin and make it the antechamber of the city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God."

WEDDING BELLS

TODD—McDONALD.

Yesterday the marriage took place in Toronto of Isabelle Catharine, daughter of Mrs. Catharine McDonald to Robert S. Todd, son of Mr. R J. Todd of Peterborough. Mr. and Mrs. Todd will reside in Montreal.

ALLEN—FLANNERY.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mrs. John Flannery, 210 Auburn street, on Wednesday, Sept. 20, at 2 o'clock, when her daughter, Eva May, was united in marriage to Herbert Allen of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Cruikshanks. Mr. and Mrs. Allen left on the 5.30 train on a honeymoon trip. They will reside in Peterborough.

McEACHREN—FLAVELLE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Flavelle in Queen's Park, Toronto formed a beautiful setting yesterday afternoon for the wedding of their youngest daughter, Clara Ellsworth, to Capt. Frank Yeigh McEachren, 198th Battalion, C.E.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. McEachren.

The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. R. P. Bowles, assisted by the Rev. P. G. Brown, was opened with the singing of the hymn, "O Father all Creating" and during the signing of the register Mrs. Wallace Barrett sang Alliston's Song of Thanksgiving.

Later Capt. and Mrs. McEachren left for a motor trip through the Berkshire Hills, the bride traveling in a smartly tailored suit of fawn cloth with hat of tete de negre and blue fox furs. On their return Capt. McEachren will be with his battalion at Camp Borden. Capt. McEachren's gift to the bridesmaid and matron of honour were silver card cases, and the best man and usher, cigarette cases.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A new mark of 110 1-8 was set by United States steel common this morning. General lists showed gains ranging up to a full point at the opening.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Optimism regarding the outlook in steel industry was registered in Wall street today when the traders sent U. S. Steel Common climbing 2 3-8 points, to a new high record of 112 1-4 during the thirteenth consecutive million share day of the present bull market. The advance was made on the sale of nearly 200,000 shares of Steel, much of it to meet the demand from outside buyers. The street was full of bull tips on steel. Steel's record shortly after 2 o'clock was 112 1-4, up 2 3-8 for the day on sale of 172,000 shares.

German Sub. Sank Transport

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, Sept. 22.— German submarine sank enemy transport completely filled with troops in the Mediterranean on Sept. 17. The transport sank with all hands in forty-three seconds. It is thought that none were saved.

"ZIGAR FOR YOU, ZIR?"

The Waiterlike Instinct of a Surrendering German.

Among the officers who have just arrived in England from the Somme battlefield, Catapin H —— told the following story:

"German morale? Well, I don't know. There's a captain of the S——'s aboard this ship, who told me a thing that happened to him alongside us, at Posieres. He was working along a communication trench with a party of bombers, when he met a regular procession of Boches, and led by one who carried an enormous cigar box over his head.

"The English officer suspected some sort of foul play, of course. The Boches have played so many dirty tricks. But the fellow whipped open the big box, and showed it had nothing in it but cigars, and explained as well as he could that it was by way of being sort of propitiatory offering, you know.

"He wound up by saying: 'This war no good; no good at all, sir. Piccadilly again soon, now, sir!' Of course, they're fed up; but they've got a big machine behind 'em yet."

Germans Work Tunnel Trick On Canadians

Let Them Pass Over and Then Attack Them From Both Front and Rear —A New Canadian Army in Somme—Eager to Set a New Record and Anticipate a Share in a General Advance—Fighting Brings Cheerfulness.

STORIES BY THE SOLDIERS

GLASGOW, Sept. 23.—Canada may well be proud of her sons. Chosen to occupy oe of the most difficult and glorious portions on the somme front, her troops plunged into a wholly different kind of warfare from that which they hitherto were used to. They liked the change. After five days' marching our troops arrived September 2, and rested.

On Sunday the Australians moved out to take a wood farm they wanted for a good finish up before handing the ground over. After a tremendous artillery fire they captured the farm and wood, and we sent out two companies to relieve them.

FIGHTING IN OPEN COUNTRY.

Thus began the Canadians' new chapter of the war. Already it has been a very glorious one. Our lads, rejoicing in the changed conditions from the Ypres salient, are almost impossible to keep back. Here we have open country, long stretches where, thanks to our occupation of commanding ridges and our air supremacy, the men can move freely. Trenches play comparatively little part. When taking over the new line we found trenches had been practically eliminated by shells. Both sides were holding on, mainly in shell holes.

HUNS' HIDDEN TUNNEL TRICK.

We were fighting on the enemy's own ground, where he had made innumerable preparations to meet us. One trick was hidden tunnels, to which the Huns retired after slight opposition before the British advance, then emerged behind our men, thus fighting them from both sides.

The fighting around Moquettin was desperate and costly, but successful. Then, with other sections of the Canadian army arrived, came the further great Courcelette advance, when we swept line after line upon the Germans, gaining much ground and making great captures.

FIGHTING BRINGS CHEERFULNESS.

While the fighting has been hard and costly and our casualty lists are necessarily considerable, everyone is delighted with the change to a new field. "We are a hundred per cent. more cheerful than a year ago," said one officer. "Everything is better. We have Fritz beaten. Our guns are better and heavier, more of them. Our men are stronger. Every day brings us more evidence of victory, fresh ground gained, and big hauls of prisoners. Tell Canada to be of good cheer."

SURRENDERS BY WHOLESALE.

"The most amazing thing to me is the wholesale surrenders of the Boches," says one colonel. "They came by hundreds at a time, big batches, holding up hands, throwing down weapons, calling 'Kamerad.' They seem suddenly, many of them, to have lost all spirit, all stomach for a fight. These general surrenders are so extraordinary one can only explain them on the ground that our artillery fire has broken their spirit."

STORIES BY SOLDIERS.

Pte. Daly, 18th Battalion, who was struck down in the first fight with a shoulder shattered and face injured, says: "Ypres was heavier fighting than this. Our fellows ar advancing a very long way. I saw lots of prisoners and don't think much of them. They're more like labourers than soldiers. At first I didn't know I was wounded. I heard 'sizz" and went down, and afterwards found two men on either side of me had been killed."

LIKE TO FIGHT IN OPEN.

Pte. Wass, 4th Battalion, says: "We like the Somme fighting better than Ypres. You could be at Ypres for a month and never see a German. You daren't make a noise, and a man will almost be shot if he lights a match at night. It is open on the Somme. You have a chance of getting your own back. You can move freely. We are always advancing and always fighting. That's what the boys like. There's some life here. You can walk round in the daytime looking for souvenirs."

Wass was with a working party when a sniper hit him in the right thigh.

GERMANS HAVE LOTS OF MEN.

Hancock, 1st Battalion, says: "The Somme bombardment is much more continuous and much heavier than Ypres. It is a much better fighting country. Our only trenches are a newly-dug-up one and trenches captured from the Germans. The enemy is behind a slight rising, so we walk about, do pretty well what we like. The only way they could see what we are doing would be by aeroplanes, and our aircraft prevent that.

"Germans seem plentiful as ever. They say they don't count their men individually now, but by army corps.

"The prisoners are well equipped, well fed. Their knives and forks are of aluminum, their packs about half as light as ours."

ALWAYS FIGHTING.

William Black, Royal Highlanders, says: "On the Somme it is fighting the whole time from morning to night. The country is much more open than Ypres. It is much better to fight in. There is no trench work on the Somme, practically no trenches. You dig yourself in at night and advance in the morning."

Corporal Gavel, 2nd Machine Gun Company, said: "The Somme reminds me of Salisbury Plain. One grumbles at Salisbury Plain when there, but would be quite pleased to have six months of it now."

NEW DIVISION SEEKS A RECORD.

I hear amazingly good accounts of the work of a division which occupies a different part of the line. These newest Canadians are out to beat all records. I'm told there is no keeping them back. They maintain sustained activity against the enemy. Heavy artillery bombardments and raids are following one another continually.

TWO OFFICERS SHOT IN STORMING.

They are keenly waiting the day when news comes for a big simultaneous advance all along the western front. They were repulsed in one raid. The Germans were awaiting them and prepared by shooting down two officers who led a storming party. Our boys had to retire after throwing their bombs into the enemy's line, leaving the officers' bodies behind. Next day in broad daylight a party of stretcher-bearers went out into No Man's Land unsuccessfully seeking the officers' bodies. The gallantry of this party which penetrated almost into the Hun lines won the admiration of all divisions.

CANADIANS WIPED OUT A BAVARIAN REGIMENT AND ATE A GERMAN SUPPER

Caught Them in a Sunken Road—Swept Round Corners of Buildings —An Officer Finds Refreshment in a Dugout—Canadians Found an Assortment of Powder Puffs, Rouge and a Feminine Switch.

IMPERIAL OFFICERS' TRIBUTE

LONDON, September 23.—It is not a military secret now that with the assistance of that tamed lizard-like gladiator "creme de menthe," of which British correspondents have written so much, the Canadians took Courcelette, a village larger and stronger, according to official reports, than Pozieres. At daylight—to be more correct—shortly after 6 o'clock—on Sunday, they followed up the attack and reached the village. Terrific hand-to-hand fighting took place before dark.

WIPED OUT BAVARIANS.

The Canadians "battled like men possessed," according to one officer of another battalion who went forward on artillery observation work. They sandwiched a Bavarian regiment in what was called a sunken road and literally wiped it out of existence. They swirled around corners of battered houses and slaughtered every Hun that showed fight, passed scores of prisoners back through the lines of the support, consolidated their advanced position on the other side of the village, guarded it with part of the battalion, then went into German dugouts and helped themselves to supper at the Kaiser's expense. They they started another fight.

IMPERIAL OFFICERS' TRIBUTE.

British correspondents will say many fine things about these men, but ungrudgingly relate they were the greatest thing in this greatest battle of the ungrudgingly relate they wer the greatest thing in this greatest battle of the war. With them others did splendid work in protecting the right of Courcelette after they had gained the objective.

When the full story of the battle is written, there will be some softening for those who have lost husbands, fathers, sons or brothers. "They were heroes all," said an Imperial officer who has not a little to do with offensive strategy. "They did all we asked them and more, and we asked them a lot."

SO EASY, THEY WENT ON.

Another officer who watched the Canadians sail through the obstacles of Courcelette following their beloved Creme de Menthe, said: "Never in my military career have I seen anything to equal them. My men followed them over, bearing to the right where there was a sunken road leading into Courcelette. It was so easy—only rifle and machine gun fire from the Thiepval redoubt—that we consolidated and asked permission to advance further. We went almost a thousand yards, bearing to the right of the village, and found touch with the Canadians.

AN OFFICER'S MEAL.

Says a Montreal officer: "We sat down in craters and cheered like—— and the dazed German prisoners sat in the same holes looking as if the end of the world had come. We had the honour of taking the famous sugar refinery which turned out to be a novel experience. It was a heavily fortified pile of broken bricks, but with the aid of a land monitor we managed to rush it."

A popular colonel who has been before mentioned in despatches, was missing and thought to have been killed, but a young sub found him in the largest German officers' dugouts where he had fought with a Hun officer he caught at supper, and put him out of business. He was having lager beer and sausage. Then he joined the fray again.

The refinery had evidently been used by Hun officers for their wives. We found lingerie, powder puffs, rouge, and a feminine switch of hair which a German woman had evidently left behind in hasty evacuation.

TANKS WELL SUPPLIED.

The Canadians did good work in taking a sugar trench to the left of the refinery, and it was in this section that battalions of a certain regiment showed to splendid advantage. Further to the left again, Mouquet Farm, as was cabled in previous messages, fell to another battalion following in close support. The Mouquet Farm attack is an epic in itself, and into it again enters the tanks. They barged into machine gun emplacements, had everything that was needed, and did everything that could be wanted.

One artillery officer tells me how it was just runing short of wire to connect up with his forward observation post, when a tank lumbered up. The officer hailed him, asked what he wanted.

"Wire," was the request the Canadian shouted over.

"Here you are. Take your pick of what kind you want," said the captain of the land cruiser, and he did.

The same thing happened when a certain machine gun was put out of business. Up came a tank with a spare one and lent it to the Canadians.

The Enemy Is Preparing To Make a Stand

Large Bodies of Turkish Troops Are Hastening to Join the Bulgars and Germans Now Engaged in Heavy Fighting With the Russians and Roumanians in Dobrudja

FIERCE FIGHTING

BUCHAREST, Sept. 23.—The retreat of Mackensen's army in Dobrudja has been halted and they are preparing to make a stand. Large bodies of Turkish troops are moving northward through Bulgaria to join the Bulgars and Germans now engaged in heavy fighting with the Russians and Roumanians in Dobrudja. After several days of fierce fighting, much of which occurred in the open, the Dobrudja battle has settled down to trench warfare with first one side and then the other attempting to breach the enemy's line. A Bucharest despatch to-day reported that the retreating Teutons made an unsuccessful effort to draw the Roumanians into a trap, but that the German flanking operations were defeated.

WHEAT JUMPS THREE CENTS

Grain Dealers' Quotations—The Cattle Markets—Hogs Again Strong

Wheat Market took another long stride yesterday towards the high levels some speculators are predicting, Chicago and Winnipeg both being 2 1-2c to 3c higher at the close than Thursday's close. Cash wheat situation is particularly strong, and 3c higher at bay ports. Ontario wheat also moved up 2c. Manitoba receipts of inspected wheat are less than half of a year ago, and are being taken up as fast as available.

CATTLE MARKETS

Cattle prices have varied but slightly during the week, holding steady but firm at the advance scored in the previous week's trading. Choice butcher cattle then went up 25c to 30c over the week before, and at that level have held good and steady all this week. A good demand has sprung up in the meantime for good quality, 900 to 1,00 pound steers for distillery feeding. The requirements of one Canadian firm alone are about 4,000 head for distilling purposes. There is also a fair enquiry for feeders and stockers for United States points.

Lambs were steady in the early markets yesterday but a heavy run in the middle of the week brought a sharp decline of about $1.25 in the closing markets.

Hogs again made a somewhat spectacular advance, reaching the great high level of $13 off cars, but losing about 10c of this one the closing market for the week.

CATTLE RECEIPTS.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts for this week 620 cars, with 7,501 cattle, 852 calves, 10,943 hogs, 8,998 sheep and lambs, and 1,117 horses.

City Cattle Market—Receipts 84 cars with 1,069 cattle, 1,800 sheep and lambs, 1,145 hogs, 149 calves and 151 horses.

HOUSEKEEPERS' MODEL KITCHEN IS DESCRIBED

An Article Which Every Toiler in the Kitchen Should Clip and Consult to Minimize Labour and Get the Best Results

The following description of a model kitchen will be found well worth every housekeeper's careful consideration. It is from an article by Miss A. E. Hill, of Macdonald College for the teaching of domestic science, and this could be given by no one more competent to advise. It appears in a recent number of the Agriculture Gazette of Canada.

In any work or profession in which practical work is entailed the worker has to have, to carry out his, or her work successfully, a work place or a work shop. The scientist has a laboratory; the carpenter his bench; the artist his studio. To do good work this workshop must be carefully planned, allowing the worker good light and plenty of fresh air; also, the equipment used must be arranged in a way that is most convenient for the worker and will save time, steps and energy.

In an attempt to save the worker, so that she will not be tired out at the end of the day, and, furthermore, worn out at the end of years as a result of misspending time, the following suggestions have been made:

1. Have windows arranged to admit plenty of light and air. These are both necessary for the health of the worker and for accomplishing good work.

2. Have the finish of the room one that is easy to clean, keep clean and is bright and attractive. Any woodwork should be as plain as possible, and there should be an absence of corners and right angles. Food is kept and prepared in the kitchen, and consequently the room should be made sanitary.

3. Have the large equipment so placed that in carrying out of a task, in going from one fixture to the other retracing of steps is done away with and actual progress is made.

4. Have the small equipment and materials grouped around the fixture where they are used. This does away with useless steps and extra handling of equipment.

In short, have the kitchen a well-planned, well-arranged laboratory, where the mental and not the physical work of the worker is at a premium.

ARRANGEMENT OF LARGE EQUIPMENT.

These should be arranged so that those fixtures which are most closely related should be next to one another, or near one another. Thus steps may be saved and retracing of steps done away with, and the idea of progress actually carried out in performance of a task. For example the dish cupboard should be near the sink so that there will not be time wasted in carrying dishes some distance to be put away after they are washed. The larder, or pantry is a good point from which to start in arranging fixtures, as it is where food is kept:

1. Pantry or larder.

2. Table—This should be next in order; food is taken from the larder to the table for preparation this table should be placed in a good light—in front of the window excellent light is obtained, or if the light falls on the table from the left.

3. The stove—This naturally comes next in order, as food is taken from the preparation table and next cooked.

4. Small table—To the right of the stove a small table is convenient. Food may be dished here and save retracing steps to the preparation table. The food, as a result, has gone in a continuous line from larder to dishing-up table, and is ready for the dining-room.

5. Cupboard for dishes—Unless there is a pantry between kitchen and dining-room, with cupboards for dishes, there must be a cupboard in the kitchen for some of these. This should be near the dining-room door so as to save steps in setting the table for the meal.

The sink should be nearby, as dishes when washed should be near the place where they are kept. The sink should have two drain boards—one at the right for dirty dishes, one at the left arm on which washed dishes are drained. A small table at the right, or a hinged shelf, will do excellently, as there is no draining here.

It is often difficult to keep the wall below the drain board clean, also the end of the sink over which the board fits, on account of the stationary board. This is easily overcome by having the drain board placed on four supports, at the end of which castors are placed; in this way the drain board can be easily cleaned. Further, it may be used as a wheel tray on which to move a number of things in the kitchen, thus doing away with carrying and extra walking. One-inch iron piping makes good supports for this. Care must be taken to have the board fit over the sink properly.

SMALL EQUIPMENT AND MATERIAL

These should be arranged around the fixtures where they are used. The following suggestions may prove helpful.

1. On the shelves to right of table—Flour, sugar, oatmeal and other cereals, rice, other materials used frequently.

2. On shelf above table—Baking powder, flavoring, etc., soda, cream of tartar.

3. Cup hooks on shelf—on which hang: Egg beaters, measuring cup, can opener, cookie cutter, scissors, etc.

4. A shelf underneath table for bowls and other utensils used daily is good.

5. Table with pastry board fitted into table is good.

Note.—A kitchen cabinet carries out these ideas, having compartments for flour, sugar, jars for baking powder, etc., and a pastry board fitted into the table.

Precautions Against Infantile Paralysis: The plague of Infantile paralysis that is spreading terror into the terrible because it is so little understood. The unknown is always much more terrible than the known. Dr. Tilten states emphatically that the condition known as anti-intoxication is much more frequently caused by fear than by bad food. Fear and worry have killed more people than have starvation. Chiefly the first precaution is to quit worrying about the matter, dismiss fear and do something sensible.

One of the conditions upon which the doctors that have most frequently come in contact with the disease are agreed upon is that if the nose, mouth and throat are in good health and kept sterile there is but little if any danger of contracting the disease. Another thing that we all know is that the disease in no respector of persons, but is as liable to enter the homes of the rich as of the poor. In fact, it is said that some of the poorest districts in New York have developed few if any cases. Others claim that if the comparison is made according to population it will be found that the disease is more prevalent in the country than in the city.

This leads me to believe that previous ideas indicating the stable fly as one of the carriers or sources of infection was correct. The fly cannot be blamed in all cases, however, because if it was the only cause the measures for defense that seem to be effective would be useless. It is not necessary, however, to be bitten by a fly in order to become infected through it. The insect spreads filth wherever it flies or alights so remember the slogan "Swat the Fly", but much more important don't let the fly find a breeding place near your home nor in your neighborhood. As a direct means of protection every home in which there are children or grownups under 30 years of age, there should be careful and thorough examination of the teeth, nose and throat. If not found in perfect health the services of a specialist should be secured and the condition thoroughly treated. In all cases, whether in good or bad condition the teeth should be thoroughly cleaned and brushed night and morning, both children and adults. The nose and throat should also be sprayed morning, noon and night with a reliable antiseptic solution. Any reliable physician will tell you what to use. An honest druggist can supply you. Liquor antisepticus is excellent. This is made by druggists from a formula given in the official dispensatory.

See that the bowels are active, keep as cool as possible, bathe or swim frequently, eat good wholesome food but not too much of it.

RECIPES WORTH KEEPING AT HAND

FISH WITH PEPPERS.

Remove the seeds from half a green pepper and boil it for fifteen minutes. Make a white sauce from one cupful milk, two tablespoonsful butter, two tablespoonsful flour, salt and pepper and a sprig of parsley.

Chop an onion up fine and cook in butter for three minutes. Add the white sauce and when the last named thickens add cold cooked fish (well shredded) and the green pepper, cut into narrow strips. Serve hot.

FISH SALAD WITH RUSSIAN DRESSING.

Freshen anchovies in cold water and shred them thoroughly. Hard boil four eggs. Add the yolks of these and a tablespoonful of mustard to the shredded anchovies, pounding well. Mix a cupful and a half of mayonnaise dressing and add these to the anchovites. If you have any smoked salmon, a half cupful of this cut in small squares will lend flavor to the dressing.

Arrange lettuce leaves on a salad dish. Place your cold cooked shredded fish on these, prinkle a little lemon juice over the fish and add some of the above dressing.

PRUNE DESERT.

Soak one-half cupful of rice over night. In the morning drain and let boil with a cup of water, to this add one pound of prunes. Boil until tender and when quite soft and not too thick add one-half cupful of sugar and the juice of a lemon. Boil again for about one-half hour and then serve hot or cold. If preferred cold, and whipped cream.

Flowers for Winter

Now is the time to sow cyclamen seeds. They are quite slow in germinating.

Plenty of water and a light top dressing or rich soil over aster beds will greatly improve the quality and increase the quantity of the flowers. Dwarf asters make good pot plants for the winter window garden and conservatory. Pot up young plants at once or sow seeds for later plants.

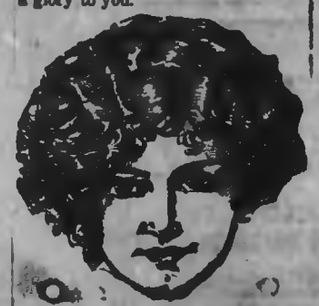
Annual phlox also makes good pot plants for winter flowering.

Cuttings of petunias and heliotropes made now and inserted in a box or bed of soil, kept moist and shaded, will form root, making good pot plants for winter use.

Most of the hardy annuals can be sown this autumn where the plants are to grow next year and will be ready to make an early start, which wil cause them to flower early next season.

The Crown of Womanhood

"Uncared for hair cannot be beautiful. There is no part of the human makeup so revengeful as the hair. It cries out: Look at me, care for me, or I will disgrace you! Treat me with consideration and I will be a glory to you."



With the above words, Lillian Russell, an unquestioned authority on feminine attractiveness, places no uncertain value on nice hair as a beauty asset. Unkempt, uncared for hair not only cannot be attractive but is actually a disgrace.

But why have ill-kept, untidy hair? By devoting a few moments regularly to brushing and intelligent application of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE, the hair may be made to yield wonderful returns in increased personal charm.

Dandruff is the direct cause of more hair trouble than anything else. The hair becomes thin, harsh, uneven and falls out in quantities. It looks dead and lifeless; there is no luster. The scalp itches.

HERPICIDE will remove the dandruff which is causing all the trouble, clean the scalp, give the hair life, snap and luxuriance. The hair stops coming out, the itching ceases almost at once and withal there is a most gratifying sense of cleanliness.

To the woman who wishes to make the most of nature's gifts by having fluffy, beautiful hair, NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE is a toilet necessity. It is exquisitely perfumed and is a delightful hair dressing.

In 50c and $1.00 sizes. At drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere. Guaranteed by The Herpicide Co.

ENCOURAGEMENT IN RIGHT DOING.

We often wonder why it is that people, if they know any good of their neighbor, seem to think it their duty to keep the fact a secret never to be divulged until their neighbor has passed away and laid in his grave, and then to be brought to light when it can be of no earthly benefit to him. It is not so with their faults, which all take more or less pleasure in magnifying before the public. Many a man has been driven to the dogs for the want of a little encouragement and a just recognition of his honest efforts to do right, that are not appreciated by his fellowmen. If people would take one half the trouble to encourage others in well doing that they do to circulate everything they hear derogatory of them the world would be much better and many a man saved from becoming a criminal. Men whose good deeds are ignored by society and whose slightest fault is continually harped upon and magnified, soon lose all self respect and care nothing for society, because society cares nothing for them. They may know they do wrong; but if it is no credit to do right what encouragement have they to do better? One half of the criminals in our jails and penitentiaries have been made such, in all probability, by the unkindness of their fellowmen, who have always stood ready to condemn every little offence without stopping to enquire into the circumstances that may have caused the party to do wrong. We should put ourselves in our neighbor's place, surrounded by the same circumstances, then we would be better able to judge and not have to wait until they were dead before we could say something good about them.

SUCCESS.

There is one way out of poverty for the generality of mankind, and that is downright hard work, economy and self denial. Young man, draw your coat, roll up your sleeves and wade in. This everlastingly waiting for something to turn up—waiting to step into dead men's shoes, will terminate your career as a mere groveling, dependent, subsisting and only existing and filling space without a real or single purpose in life. Wake up! Stir around and send the life blood coursing through your veins. Hold up your head, clean your face, put on a smile, and cast that woebegone look in the rubbish by the wayside where it belongs. Move forward, clear the tracks and the grandest opportunities of life will open up, which you want to seize with a tenacious grip and they will unfold to you all the hidden treasures you ever imagined or conceived. Young man, this is no imaginative drawing, a delusive sketch, a fantasy, and if you possess enough grit and stamina you can make it a picture true to life. Thousands have done it and you have an equal footing to-day. Few rich men owe their possessions to accident; few great men owe their distinction to luck and chance. Thus far greater numbers have won by perseverance, push and pluck, diligence in business, spending less than their earnings, surmounting obstacles, overcoming difficulties, with a will invincible.

* * *

This is a beautiful world and a happy place, a jolly good place, only as we mar it by inconsiderate behaviour, and by forgetting that it was made for others as well as ourselves. Who will dispute the wisdom of the plan for human beings to be divided into families? Who that remembers the paternal roof, the gentle mother, the merry brothers and sisters, the good things to eat, and the general protection and comfort therein, would have it otherwise. Yea, the plan is right; it was the invention of a higher than mortal wisdom and wherever an unhappy home exists, somebody is at fault; somebody is undermining this excellent contrivance for the benefit of all: and could we get the beam out of our own eye, we might discover that the evil was within.

* * *

Children must be taught what the parents wish them to know. Teach them truthful, gentle ways, and they will be true and gentle. If a boy hears bad language from his father, he will repeat it just as certainly as he has a tongue in his mouth; and if a little girl hears her mother gossip, she will gossip the moment she meets a playmate. People who devour their food like cattle need not expect to have nice table manners. Gentlemen and good women are home made. There is nothing on earth for which one ought to be more thankful for than for having been brought up in the atmosphere of a good home.

* * *

Fathers, give the boy a chance if he is wide-awake and progressive he must have new ideas: let him try his way; the old way is not always the best.

* * *

A woman's bureau drawer will hold
half a ton of clothes,
A parasol, some handbooze, and goodness only knows
How many scores of other things
within it she may store,
And yet there's always lots of room for twice as many more.

But give a man that self same drawer and just one pair of socks,
And undershirt, some dirty cuffs, an empty collar box,
And when he's put them in, its capacity he'll glut,
And fill it up so awful full, he'll never get it shut.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To clarify frying fat, drop some slices of raw potato into it.

An ironing board should be very well padded and very steady.

Put cranberries in a keg of water and they will keep all winter.

Cooks as well as other workmen should have good tools to work with if they expect to realise success. There are standard spoons and measuring cups on the market that are full measure, and there are those which lack from one to two tablespoonfuls in a cup. Be sure that those you buy are full half pint cups and spoons the standard size. Sixteen tablespoonfuls of material will be found in the standard measuring cup, sixty drops are in a teaspoon and three teaspoonfuls fill a standard tablespoon.

The best shoes for furniture, if the furniture stands on rugs or waxed floors are made of galss.

When a plant is dying put a dessert spoonful of castor oil about the roots. This will sometimes revive it.

Blueberry cake out in squares when hot and served with a strongly flavored thin sauce makes a delicious pudding.

If you have a small portion of string beans and a small portion of beets, put them together and dress with butter.

A good dressing for fruit salad is made of a cup of whipped cream with two teaspoonfuls of French dressing added to it.

It is a wise precaution to put a quantity of sand in the bottom of a very tall vase. This will prevent its toppling over.

Preserve jars should always be kept from direct contact with the bottom of the preserving kettle, otherwise they may break.

When making jellied soup from broth, remember that the broth should be strong, well seasoned and cleared with white of egg.

Whenever the rubbers on cans of fruit "bulge" they should be removed, the jar of fruit resterilised and fresh rubbers put on.

All suet puddings should be cooked a long time to make them digestible.

It is wise to put a little salt in the water in which the vegetables are washed. It will destroy the insects.

Allow two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder to each cup of flour when no eggs are used.

PRESERVING FRUIT WITHOUT SUGAR

THE RECIPE.

The fruit is prepared in the ordinary way, the jars are cleaned and scalded while the rubbers and tops are boiling. The fruit is then placed in the jars, in which COLD water is placed. When the jars have been sealed air-tight they are placed in a boiler filled with cold water and brought to the boiling point. Berries will do if removed when the boiling point is reached, while large fruits, such as peaches, cherries, plums and apricots, should get 20 to 30 minutes boiling. Keep cover of wash boiler on tight.

BAKED PEARS.

Pare and core the pears without dividing; place them in a pan and fill up the orifice with brown sugar; add a little water and let them bake until perfectly tender. Nice with sweet cream or boiled custard.

PEAR PUDDING.

Pare some nice ripe pears (to weigh about three-fourths of a pound) Put them in a sauce pan with a few cloves, some lemon or orange peel and stew about a quarter of an hour in two cupfuls of water; put them in your pudding dish, and having made the following custard—one pint of cream or milk, four eggs, sugar to taste, a pinch of salt, and a tablespoonful of flour, beat eggs and sugar well add the flour, grate the nutmeg, add the cream by degrees, stirring all the time—pour this over the pears and bake in a quick oven. Serve cold with sweetened cream.

PEAR—PICKLE.

Select small round pears, remove the blossom end, stick them with a fork, allow to each quart of pears one pint of cidar vinegar and one cup of sugar, put in a teaspoonful of allspice, cinnamon and cloves to boil with the vinegar, then add the pears and boil and seal in jars.

STEWED PEARS.

With thick syrup to be eaten with cake.

Peel and cut them in halves, leaving the stems on and scoop out the cores. Put them into a sauce pan, placing them close together with the stems uppermost. Put over sufficient water, a cup of sugar, a few whole cloves and some sticks of cinnamon, a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Cover the stew pan closely, to stew gently until the fruit is done, which will depend on the quality of the fruit. Then take out the fruit carefully and arrange it on a dish for serving. Boil down the syrup until quite thick; strain it and allow it to cool enough to set it; then pour it over the fruit. Serve with cream or boiled custard.

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP.

Put one quart of ripe or canned tomatoes through a vegetable press, add one heaping tablespoonful butter, a little salt and pepper and allow to simmer. Heat one quart of rich milk and thicken with a heaping tablespoonful of flour stirred smooth in a little cold milk.

When ready to serve, add a half level teaspoonful of soda to the tomatoes and when they stop foaming, add to the thickened milk. Serve with wafer crackers.

SPARE RIBS WITH SAUERKRAUT

Trim off the rough edges of 2 sets of ribs, break the bone across the middle, rub inside with salt, sprinkle with black pepper and dredge with flour. Fill with sauerkraut which has been par-boiled 20 minutes, save the water in which the kraut has cooked, sew ribs tightly, place on rack in roaster then pour the kraut liquor around it. Cook slowly. Turn once, when tender, brown thoroughly, serve with mashed potatoes.

Paris Favours the Dress of Two Materials

Combinations of Velvet and Cloth or Satin and Serge Are Considered Very Smart

The Handbag An Important Dress Accessory

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.— Women of fashion are, to-day, greatly interested in the "two material" dresses. Has not Paris sanctioned them and put forth some of her best efforts in the fashioning of new versions of them for the coming season? No, it is not only the economical woman with an eye to making over her last winter's dress who looks with approval on this style. To be sure, she may take advantage of it, for this fashion holds great possibilities for her; but, needless to say, it was not originally planned for her.

Combinations of materials are used in dresses of widely different character; quite as often in the one-piece frock for street as in the dress required for more formal wear. Of the first type in the smart dress of cloth and satin illustrated here. There is a suggestion of the military influence in this dress, too, which accounts for a part of its charm, as things military are still a source of inspiration to fashion designers. Perhaps it is the orderly row of buttons placed straight down the front, perhaps it is the four pockets with rounded laps, or yet it may be the shoulder cape, or all of these together, that give the soldierly tinge to this dress. One can readily imagine the design developed in satin and serge, velvet and cloth, velvet and satin, or any one of these materials in two tones. A light and a dark shade of gray silk have been used very successfully by Parisian designers in such dress at this. They have even combined two different colours such as tan and brown, dark green and gray, mahogany and gray. But the amateur should beware of combining two colours unless they are in perfect harmony, for the result may be vastly different from what the hands of an experienced combiner of colours would produce.

Fancy Handbags.

A fashionable woman does not consider her costume complete to-day without a dainty fancy handbag, which she dangles from a long ribbon or cord. Sometimes it takes the form of the old-fashioned reticule. Grandmother used to wear hanging from her belt. In this instance the bag is almost always made from the same material as the dress. But there are numerous other forms and shapes of this important accessory, which, if it does not exactly match the costume should, in any event, harmonize with it. Some very attractive ones are of black velvet with steel beads or of moire with coloured beads, and some fluffy little creations are entirely of ruffles of ribbon.

To make cottage cheese of fine texture have the water with which you scald the clabber merely hot. If it is boiling the curd will be very hard and lumpy.

If there is a stubborn spot on white paint, that can not be removed with soap and water, dip a wet cloth in whiting and rub the spot. It will come off with ease.

Fresh fruits and green vegetables supply the iron and mineral matter necessary to the general well-being of the system.

Brussels sprouts will not develop properly unless the lower leaves of the plant are broken off just when the sprouts are forming.

The bones left from roast beef or lamb can be put into a pot with potatoes and boiled. They will give the potatoes a rich flavor.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington

7902

We have just as many different materials for making aprons to-day as we have different styles in which to make them up. All work requiring an apron is not really hard, and so light weight and light color goods are oftener than not desirable for such garment.

In the design illustrated we have one that will serve as a dress and apron; the progressive housekeeper, who may have no scruples at all about giving this kind of a garment credit due a house dress, will decide on it for warm weather use. It is made in one piece and slips on over the head; a smart pocket continues to form itself from a strap that it stitched to either side of the belt, which divides the waist and skirt sections and which buttons in front.

The round neck has a low, flat collar that may have a touch of color or not, just as you like. The bell shaped sleeve is just finished with a hem. The whole thing can be made up while resting after the noonday meal or in an hour's time during an evening.

The pattern of No. 7,902 is cut in one size only. To make up as pictured will require 4¾ yards 36 inch material.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

NOTED MUSICIAN OF MONTREAL

Advises The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES", The Famous Fruit Medicine.

MR. ROSENBURG
589 Casgrain St., Montreal.

April 20th, 1915.

"In my opinion, no other medicine in the world is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as "Fruit-a-tives". I was a sufferer from these complaints for five years, and my sedentary occupation, Music, brought about a kind of Intestinal Paralysis—with nasty Headaches, belching gas, drowsiness after eating, and Pain in the Back. I tried pills and medicines of physicians, but nothing helped me. Then I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives", and now for six months I have been entirely well.

I advise any one who suffers from that horrible trouble—Chronic Constipation with the resultant indigestion, to try "Fruit-a-tives", and you will be agreeably surprised at the great benefit you will receive". A. ROSENBURG.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CAFETERIA FOR THE EMPLOYEES

For the convenience of the employees, of whom there are nearly 2,000 in the Windsor Station buildings, The Canadian Pacific Railway has recently set up a cafeteria lunch-room at 15 cents in a large apartment which will accommodate 251 persons at a sitting. Judging by the attendances, it is bound to be one of the most popular features the company has put its hand to. There are hundreds of girls, especially who have no time to go home, or who if they do go home, are greatly pressed for time. With this service at their disposal they will save car fare; they will get a thoroughly satisfying luncheon; and they can have the comfort of the lounge room in connection on wet or cold days—a lounge room which contains a piano, magazines and papers and in which the employees can rest for the balance of their lunch hour. The arrangement is four to a table all the appointments are harmonious; there is an air of quiet dignity about the place. Mr. W. A. Cooper, manager of the sleeping and dining car department, said that this was in accordance with the well-known policy of the Canadian Pacific of taking care of its employees. The people in the offices constituted quite a little city in themselves. Many could not go home with convenience. This lunch room would meet the wants of many. Of course, there would still be the 30-cent luncheon upstairs, and the regular dining room in which you could have what you wanted and pay for the same as much as you liked; but this was strictly for the employees, male and female who would prefer to have their luncheon inside the building to going to restaurants—those of them who were in the habit of going to restaurants.

Constant Headaches
When the nervous system gets run down one of the most persistent symptoms is headache. Nervous headache has been described as the cry of the starved brain for more blood.
Because of its remarkable blood-forming and blood-enriching qualities, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food ranks first as a means of overcoming nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, headaches, indigestion, sleeplessness, irritability and all the annoying symptoms of nervous breakdown.
It is not a mere relief, but thorough cure; for it rebuilds and reconstructs the wasted and depleted nerve cells.

EX-CONVICT LIED HIS WAY TO THE FRONT AND DIED

London, Sept. 19, by mail.—An ex-convict, a veteran inmate of British prisons, to-day is mourned by his regiment and Scotland Yard alike as one of England's war heroes. With a whole list of convictions behind his name he lied his way into the army, won the Victoria Cross, and finally made the greatest atonement during the Big Push. The story was told here to-day.

As a tribute to the burglar hero, the war office is shielding his name, but Scotland Yard remembers him of old. His bunkies in France recall him as a hollow cheeked man, slightly stooped, who took life and death as lightly as he took the prison sentences imposed from time to time by glowering judges. He had no relatives; his only friends, who took part in his forays against the law, are still in the game of cracking safes and evading arrest. Therefore his medal will become one of the treasures of a crack regiment of fighters.

RELEASED FROM PRISON.

The dead Tommy had just been released from prison when the war broke out.

"Shaving water at nine," he said with a grin as the turnkey slammed the door behind him the night before his release. "I'm leaving early for the front!"

"You'll be back again in a month," growled the case hardened warden as he switched off the lights in his tier.

But the convict shed his name and police record with the prison greys, and eased by a lax recruiting officer.

In a few months he was ankle deep in the icy slush of the trenches, sniping through a loop hole and running in with the officers for taking chances too rashly. He was used to taking chances and could not see why they didn't go over the parapet, and mix it with the Germans.

At last his opportunity came. The battalion went over with a howl and the burglar-Tommy yelled with glee as he ran firing his rifle from the hip. In the excitement of the fight he became separated from the battalion. A few yards away a German machine gun crew in a pit was pouring death into the charging ranks. Tommy ran to the brink of the pit and killed the crew.

DISOBEYED ORDERS.

When the lines were reformed he was first disciplined for disobeying orders — he should not have gone astray—and then commended for his daring. Tommy merely smiled. Shortly afterwards he received the V. C., and a furlough. The London police shook hands with him, and bought him cigarettes.

Tommy went back to France and went over the parapet again in the Big Push. A big shell killed him.

"He was a real enthusiast," said a detective who used to round up the dead hero in the old days. "He never went after a little job when we had dealings with him, and he played the game to a finish in war."

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

CANNED TOMATOES CHEAPER IN THE U.S.

The following letter from a prominent wholesale grocer, appeared recently in the Montreal Herald:

Sir,—Regarding food for the poor Canadians for the coming winter.

A first class article is good canned tomatoes, but apparently they are to be out of the reach of ordinary people this winter.

On the 13th of Sept. the price here for 3 lb. tins was $1.30 per dozen, wholesale. On the same date the highest authorties in the States stated that 2 1-2 lb. tins, which are to be the new standard size, were sold both spot and future at 75 cents a dozen at factory and 3 lb. tins at 90 cents a dozen at factory, both spot and future.

Under these circumstances should not the Government suspend the duty and allow the labouring classes to be fed as a patriotic move?

SAM. J. MATHEWSON.

Mr. Mathewson gives a concrete instance of what the tariff is costing the Canadian consumer. The soaring cost of the necessaries of life makes it imperative that something should be done. Will the Government do something to help the common people?—Editor, The Herald.)

The new type of fruit jar, with very large neck, is best for canning whole fruits like peaches and plums.

Before frying food, first roll it in bread or cracker crumbs to dry it; then dip in egg and roll in crumbs a second time.

DECREASED SCANDINAVIAN IMPORTS SHOW THE BRITISH BLOCKADE IS EFFECTIVE

LONDON, Sept. 5.—That statistics of exports from New York to Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland, published in certain sections of the English press, are utterly misleading is abundantly demonstrated in a memorandum just issued by the War Trade Statistical Department.

Comments on the published figures were drawn in such a way as to imply that the British blockade is ineffective. In the first place, it is declared that exports were taken for single weeks from a single port in the United States. Even these figures are not official.

Taking the official figures of values of goods exported from America during the months January to May, 1915 to 1916, it is seen that instead of increases there have, with one exception, been large decreases. The figures are:

Exports to—
Denmark ...	$41,188,000	$23,469,000
Holland ...	89,732,000	44,002,000
Norway ...	22,478,000	25,704,000
Sweden ...	52,216,000	17,495,000
Totals	205,614,000	$110,670,000

The all round decrease is fifty per cent. What, then, becomes of the argument that the Scandinavian countries are sending supplies into Prussia in increasing quantities?

SOME INCREASES ALLOWED

It is asserted that an increase in American exports to neutral countries contiguous to Prussia need, not in itself necessarily imply that the imports of those countries from all sources have increased, since many commodities which were formerly obtained from the belligerent countries have now to be procured from America. Thus an increase in the exports is more than accounted for by the fact that whereas until the latter part of 1915 Norway continued to obtain sugar from Prussia she can no longer get it from that source, since—owing to the operation of the blockade—Prussia is so hard pressed for fodder that she is now forced to use her surplus supplies of sugar for feeding cattle.

In consequence of the inability of Prussia to continue the export of sugar, Norway has had to look to America for supplies since the early part of 1916, and the value of the United States exports of sugar to Norway during the period January to May, 1916, was $5,000,000. In this case, therefore, the increase in the amount of exports, far from demonstrating the inefficiency of the blockade, is direct testimony to its efficiency.

The commodities which are mentioned in certain sections of the press as having been exported in large quantities from Holland to Prussia are butter, cheese, eggs, meat, potato flour, fish, tea, coffee, and cocoa. With the exception of the three last named commodities all the articles are of Dutch production, and no imports of these commodities into Holland are allowed unless ther are special circumstances.

As regards Dutch imports of meat from England, it is shown that all supplies for the Commission for the Relief of Belgium are consigned to Holland for distribution and that, with the exception of one ton, the whole of the 8,038 tons of meat imported into Holland from England during the first seven months of the present year were destined for the relief of Belgium and northern France.

BUTTER AND LARD

As regards butter and lard, it is true that large supplies continue to be sent from England to Holland. These exports have all been allowed, however, for one of two purposes, namely, either they are going to Holland for the relief of Belgium or they are to be utilised in the manufacture of margarine and butter mixtures for England. In this the following figures from the Dutch official returns show the exports of margarine from Holland:—

	To Prussit	To England
January-July,	1916..1,510	83,502
January-July,	1914..1,116	37,686
Increase	394	45,876

It may seem curious that while supplies of Dutch butter have been diverted from England to Prussia the same process has not been followed in the case of margarine. The reason is this:—The butter is manufactured in Holland from materials produced within the country. The margarine, on the other hand, is manufactured almost entirely from imported raw materials.

It follows that while it is in the power of the British government to impose conditions regarding the importation of foreign materials, no such power comes into play in connection with butter.

The consequence of these Dutch native products, such as butter, eggs, meat and potato flour, being free from British control is that the producers sell them in the highest market.

Although these Dutch produced goods do not come within the scope of the blockade measures of a somewhat different character have been taken, with a view to increasing the supplies to England and diminishing those to Germany, and these measures have already effected a decided improvement in the position.

In regard to tea, coffee, and cocoa which are imported from overseas special difficulties have been experienced, as they consist largely of goods produced in Dutch colonies. A satisfactory arrangement for Great Britain, however, has recently been brought about, and if the Dutch figures for the early months of this year are separated from those for the later months, the improvement which already has been effected by this arrangement is clearly manifested.

These figures show that of the 2,007 tons of tea exported from Holland to Prussia during January to July, 1,927 tons went forward in the first three months of the year and only eighty tons in the succeeding four months; that during January and February the average monthly export of coffee to Germany amounted to 17,328 tons, as against a monthly average of 3,253 tons from March to July, and that the whole of the cocoa exports took place in the first four months of the year, since when no exports whatever have been made to Prussia.

CLOTHING CHILDREN FOR COLD WEATHER

Little girls coats for autumn and winter are made of silk in sage green, dull blue, old rose or tan. These coats are made very warm by a peddled lining and they are extensively trimmed with fur.

Many of the most expensive suits for little boys this autumn are of the middy order. Sometimes the short trousers are of navy blue serge, while the blouse, that hangs loose at the hips, is of white serge with the usual applique insignia on the arm.

One of the most attractive hats sold for little boys is a tam-o'shanter suggestive of the artists' caps of Paris. It is of soft white plush or corduroy, with a rosette of silk or fur. It is faced with colored plush or corduroy. Little girls wear the same sort of hats, with the addition of streamers and a band of picot edged with ribbon.

The shops are showing white corduroy hats with crowns that button around the rim exactly like the pique hats worn formerly for summer. The advantage of this button-on arrangement is that the hat may be taken apart for washing and put together again with perfect ease. Hats of this sort are sold for children from one up.

Little girls will dress more like their mothers this autumn and winter than ever. Coats show elaborate fur trimming, patch pockets and much trimming are quite as attractive as that of the silk coats are smocked attractively.

Little girls' hats match their coats and are trimmed at the side with a quaint little bunch of French flowers or ostrich tips.

Many mothers are buying expensive untrimmed undergarments for their little girls and boys, adding the trimming themselves. The inexpensive garments are made well and are as durable, and with a little home trimming are quite as attractive, as the more expensive sort.

Inexpensive white rompers and jumpers can often be given an attractive touch with a little cross-stitch work or embroidered in blue or pink cotton. Sometimes a couple of rows of fine featherstitching about the edge of the sleeves and neckband gives the air of hand work so desirable in children's clothes.

Some mothers who are at a loss to know how to dress their little boys of three and four years of age have solved the difficulty by putting them into little trousers made with shoulder straps. These garments, for which they are many good paper patterns, may be made of some durable colored kindergarten cloth or galatea. The shirts worn with them may be of white with a simple band at the end of the sleeve and a turn down collar.

ENJOIN GERMAN ARMY TO FURTHER ECONOMY

Official German orders captured by the British in France two weeks ago, a translation of which has just been received here, says a New York paper, point out that a victorious termination of the present war for Germany, depends upon the strictest economy in all matters pertaining to "those things which are necessary for carrying on the war." Another order captured at the same time, tells the German soldiers that "the less we use the less the war will cost." Copies of these two orders, translated by the British Intelligence Office, came to New York from official sources recently.

The first order, which is undated, says:

"The victorious termination of the war, depends in no small degree upon our economy in those things which are necessary for carrying on the war, so that in the course of time we may not be hampered by the shortage of some important war material.

"The necessity for care in the use of food has been dealt with several times lately.

"Equally important, though in many cases less heeded, is the careful use of our stocks of war supplies and raw material of all sorts because even if we have no shortage at present the supplies and the money are limited whereas the length of the war cannot yet be foreseen.

"If we wish to insure that the stocks and supplies are used to the greatest advantage, every one in his own sphere must help to see that all stocks of clothing, equipment, and all war material of every sort is spared as far as exigencies of war allow and that new orders are sent in only for that which is absolutely lacking or entirely unfit for use.

"From to-day, in order to insure that all unserviceable articles are sent back, so that they may be put to some use, a new issue will not be made from the office concerned until the worn out articles have been returned. If this is impossible for any reason, such as fire or destruction by bombardment, such reason must be stated on the indent."

The second order, which is addressed to enlisted soldiers, gives these instructions:

"While our enemies obtain their food, clothing and material from all countries, our own untiring industry has succeeded unaided in supplying from Germany the enormous needs of our army.

"It is our duty to be economical, not only with food but also with all those things which are used in war fare. Take care of your clothing.

"A well patched tunic or pair of boots becomes a soldier because it shows that in small matters he is helping to accomplish great things. Just as the small savers contributes to the great success of our war loans, so the soldier in the trenches contributes towards the economic victory by taking care of things that are entrusted to him.

"Take care of your arms. Be economical with all material and tools that are issued. The less we use the less the war will cost and the easier it will be for our fighters at home to supply us out here with everything that we require for the final victory."

CRISP $1,000 BILL IS CONDITION OF MATCH

Three years ago when Kid Williams was attempting to get Johnny Coulon to sign a set of articles of agreement, the Baltimorean finally blurted out that he would put a nice, crisp $1,000 bill in Coulon's hand the instant he put his signature to articles. Coulon accepted the offer and Wiliams handed out the $1,000 according to agreement. In addition to the $1,000 and his share of the purse Coulon got a knockout in the third round.

Coulon has done practically no boxing since the said event, devoting all his attention to profitable real estate deals. Recently Coulon got the fighting fever and has had a few unimportant bouts to test his condition. Apparently the trials have been satisfactory, for Coulon announces that he is ready to return to the ring, and that nothing would be more gratifying to him that a chance to snatch the bantam crown from Williams. This makes it evident that Coulon does not attach much importance to the championship claims of Ertle.

Coulon's talk about a match with Williams gave the champion the opportunity he desired, and he replied that he would be more than pleased to meet the Chicagoan again in the ring, but that as a preliminary Coulon would have to return the $1,000 bill that was handed to him when he entered the ring of the Vernon Club.

It remains to be seen how badly Coulon wants a match with Williams.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

...A... KIDNAPING

It Was Not For Ransom, but For a Benefit to the Kidnaped

By MARTHA V. MONROE

Rudolf Kenyon at sixteen graduated from the high school of the town in which he lived. He was a bright boy and would have been glad to go to college, but his mother had done all she could for him, and it was time he began to do for her. Consequently he must go to work.

The graduating exercises were over, the pupils had been handed their diplomas, and Rudolf started for his home to tell his mother all about it. Leaving the main thoroughfare, he entered the quiet street in which he lived, having still half a dozen blocks to go to reach his home, when an automobile that was being driven in the direction he was walking stopped at the curb a few yards ahead of him, a man alighted, took him by the arm and forced him into the car. Rudolf was physically no match for the man and offered little resistance. Once in the car he was powerless to call assistance, for it was a closed vehicle, and his captor at once drew down the curtains.

That he was kidnaped to be held for ransom did not occur to the boy for several reasons. In the first place, the man who had taken him was a mild mannered person, with no resemblance to the class of common kidnapers. In the second place, kidnaping was associated in Rudolf's mind with little children, too young to serve as effective witnesses against their captors. Thirdly, the man told him in a reassuring voice that he would be at no discomfort whatever. As they drove along he asked Rudolf a few questions.

"Do you remember your father?"

"No; he died when I was a little child."

"Has your mother ever spoken to you of him?"

"I don't remember that she has."

"And you have never had the curiosity to ask about him?"

"Indeed, I have, but have not done so because to mention him always gives my mother pain."

The man paused in his questions and seemed to be thinking. Then he asked another:

"Have you ever gathered from your mother or any one else that your father while living acted in a reprehensible manner?"

"No one has ever talked to me about him. The impression that I have received from my mother is that she mourned him as any widow would mourn her husband."

This seemed to produce a decided effect on the man sitting beside Rudolf. Again there was a pause, at the end of which came another question.

"Then you have never heard your mother say that your father was a bad man?"

"Certainly not."

The man seemed to be profoundly moved. He attempted to take the boy's hand in his, but Rudolf drew away, and his captor did not renew the attempt. They were some time in the car, at the end of which they turned into the grounds of a handsome house, and the car drew up under a porte-cochere at the end of the porch. The man got out and beckoned Rudolf to follow him

"Come into the house with me," he said to the boy. "I have something to tell you. If after you have had plenty of time to consider what I shall say to you you wish to go home you will be sent there."

This not only caused Rudolf to feel easy, but by this time his curiosity was excited to learn something about this man who had asked him questions about his father and had kidnaped him on the very day he had been graduated from the high school. On entering the house a maid appeared, and the man told her to show the boy to a room and he was to come down to luncheon in half an hour. The maid did as required, speaking kindly to her charge and showing him every attention. The time did not seem long before she informed him that luncheon was ready. On going down stairs he found his captor in the library. Rudolf, so far as he had noticed the man's appearance, had done so regarding him as an enemy. Now that this feeling had worn off he was surprised to see a gentleman who gave evidence of refinement. He led the boy into the dining room, luxuriously furnished, and a butler stood ready to serve the luncheon.

"I shall not eat anything," said Rudolf, "till I have had an opportunity to send my mother a message."

"That you may do. Has your mother a telephone?"

"No, but our next door neighbor has one, and we are permitted to use it."

"Show him the telephone booth," said the host to the butler.

Rudolf went to the booth, called for his mother and found her much worried at his failure to return to her after the school exercises. He gave her an account of what had happened, adding her an excellent listener, but when he asked her for his views as to who his captor might be and what were his intentions he found her uncommunicative. As soon as he told her he had been promised that after he had listened to what the stranger had to say and had time to consider it he might go home she seemed much relieved and told him not to try to escape, but await further developments.

On leaving the telephone Rudolf found his captor-host waiting for him in the dining room, and the two sat down to such a luncheon as the boy had never tasted before. While they were eating the gentleman talked, but not about what Rudolf wished to hear—an explanation of this strange captivity. He asked Rudolf what he proposed to do now that he had left school, and when Rudolf told him that he was going to hunt for a position in business the other shook his head.

"You will never succeed in business," he said.

"Why do you say that?"

"By the shape of your head and the expression of your face I judge that you were born for an intellectual career. How would you like to go to college?"

"Oh, I should like that above all things. But I can't. Mother has done everything for me up to this time, and now that I am nearly a man I must begin the work of taking care of her."

The host seemed to wince at this and remained quiet for a time. Then he continued:

"If certain arrangements can be made which I shall propose to you, will you go to college?"

This quite took Rudolf's breath away. For one year during which his mother was ill she had been obliged to put him in a store as errand boy. This had given the natural distaste there was in him for business an opportunity to crop out. The bare idea of going to college filled him with delight.

"Where will the money come from?" he asked.

"I will furnish that."

Rudolf, though intent upon knowing more, thrust back the next question that was on his tongue and applied himself to a delicacy which the butler served him.

When the luncheon was finished his host led him to the library, pointed to an easy chair, then, seating himself in another, said:

"Rudolf, your father is not dead; he is very much alive."

The boy started, then sat looking at the speaker, waiting hungrily for more.

"He came to America from England about twenty years ago. He was the son of a nobleman, and in that country they have what they call a law of entail, which settles the family estate on the oldest son. Your father was the second son. He came to America, met your mother, who was then a beautiful girl, fell in love with her and married her. After you were born his father in England sent for him to come back—without his wife—and a proposition would be made to him. He accepted the invitation. His father told him that his older brother had received an injury while hunting from which he would never recover if your father would remain in England, divorce his American wife and marry among his peers in England he should be put in possession of the title and estates. Your father after much persuasion wrote your mother of this proposition. She consented to it and obtained a divorce on the ground of desertion. Your father married again and his wife died childless a year ago.

"These are the bare facts. I shall neither try to excuse your father nor to condemn him. That I leave for your mother to do. I will say, however, that he condemns himself bitterly."

"Where is my father now?" asked Rudolf, wondering.

"Here; I am your father."

There was a pause, after which the boy asked why he had been kidnaped.

"I came to America to make amends for what I have done. Your mother can best be made to forgive me through the one she loves best—her son. I desired to tell you the story in my own way and send my supplications for forgiveness to her through you. You are free to go back to her this afternoon and ask her if she will receive a visit from me."

Rudolf sprang to his feet. "I will go now; I am sure she will do as I wish and I wish that she shall forgive you."

The car was ordered, and the two went hand in hand to the porte-cochere there Rudolf threw his arms about his father's neck, kissed him and was carried away.

When Rudolf reached home his mother asked him to give her a couple of hours of quiet thought in her room and then she would give him her decision. For awhile she found it hard to conquer rebellious feelings against the husband who had deserted her, but memories of her early happy married life softened her heart.

Rudolf went back with a favorable reply. He remained at the house his father had temporarily taken during his stay in America while his father went for an interview which the boy hoped and prayed might bring family reunion. During the time that he was left alone he was treated with every attention by the servants, and so great was his impatience to learn what might be the result of the interview between his parents that he found enjoyment in the luxury in which he was surrounded. On the third day after his father's departure the car pulled up under the porte-cochere. Rudolf ran out eagerly. His father alighted, then heaven be praised, handed out his mother. Rudolf ran to her, and he caught him in her arms.

What further explanation the boy received was given by his mother. The pair had just been married a second time and were to live together. The husband and father was now Earl of Edgerton and the son was heir to the title and estates.

PEACE IS DOUBTFUL SAYS FORD AGENT

New York, September 21.—Frederick F. Holt, of the Ford peace movement, who together with Gaston Plantiff, Henry Ford's manager abroad, arrived here on board the steamship Oscar II., of the Scandinavian-American line, said that there is no hope for an early peace.

"Two months ago there seemed to be hope that the war would soon cease," he said, "but that hope has disappeared. This changed situation is due to the entry of the Roumanians into the fight, and also to the success of the Allies."

"The American people," said Mr. Holt, "are a little too callous in regard to the tragedy in Europe. Many of the American consuls have witnessed the exchange of milions of prisoners between Russia, Germany, Austria and Bulgaria, and they know that 25 per cent of this vast number are in the last stages of consumption and the remainder are so badly used up that scarcely one of them has a sound limb.

"If the American people could actually witness this they would insist upon our government acting more firmly. While the belligerents will not tolerate interference by neutrals, nevertheless it is generally agreed that an official conference called by the neutral governments would be welcomed by the belligerents, and would undoubtedly result in the establishment of a world parliament.

"Whatever might have been said about the personnel of the early period of our peace movement, they can be no doubt that as reorganised the conference now consists of many of the brainiest men in Europe. It now sits daily in three cities—The Hague, which remains the headquarters; Stockholm, which takes in all the Scandinavian countries, and Berne, Switzerland, which reaches out to all the warring countries."

"What's your favourite study?" "Botany, replied the indifferent student. "But they don't teach botany in your school." "No. If they did they'd probably turn me against it, as they have with most of the others." —Washington Star.

ISSUE PRICE 97½

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st APRIL, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above named Bonds for subscription at 97½, payable as follows:—

10 per cent on application;
30 " " 16th October, 1916;
30 " " 15th November, 1916;
27½ " " 15th December, 1916.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred million dollars exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of October, 1916, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the October instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, or Victoria.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 23rd September, 1916.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA, September 12th, 1916.

A Cool Consideration of the Heat Question

The Matter of the Prices and Future of Anthracite Coal Discussed

With anthracite coal ranging in price from $8.50 to $9 per ton for domestic sizes in Eastern Canada, and with a prospect of it going still higher before the winter is over there has been much discussion in centres of population regarding the establishment of municipal coal yards for the benefit of the poorer class, who of necessity buy at the most expensive period and in small quantities and pay the highest price. With the advance from $8 to $8.50 per ton in Toronto came the demand for municipal yards. However, the committee appointed to look into the question reported unfavorably, taking the ground that while the price $8.50 was, in their opinion, excessive, it was not sufficiently so to make the establishment of municipal yards advantageous. The committee figured that domestic sizes of anthracite coal cost, landed in Toronto $7.05 per ton, made up of the following items: Cost of coal at mine mouth, $3.66; freight, $2.39; delivery, $1 per ton. With the exception of what may be scaled off of the $1 cost for delivery nothing is taken into consideration for waste, overhead, administration expenses, insurance, etc. So it can be seen that the large consumers of coal who made their contracts during the spring and early summer, when coal was selling at $8 per ton, did not pay much, if any more, than it was worth under existing conditions.

The present difficulty is chiefly the question of labour, both at the mines in Pennsylvania and here in Canada, combined with the fact that anthracite coal must become dearer as time goes on owing to the depletion of the mines and the lack of new discoveries of anthracite. The day is not far distant when a substitute for hard coal must be found, for the known fields of Pennsylvania are fast coming to the end of their tether. There will always be a little anthracite, but it will eventually become too expensive for general consumption. The time was, and that not long since, when anthracite at the mine could be bought for $2.50 per ton, and it is now to be noted that it is selling at $1.16 in excess of that figure. Then, again, there is the question of freight rates, it seems high, $2.39 per ton from the mine to Toronto, but I would hesitate to state that it afforded more than a legitimate profit, at least at Canada's end of the haul, and we have no control over the other, which is presided over by a gang of bandits, known as the Coal Roads.

It is clearly evident that we must look elsewhere for a fuel. Electricity or oil, or both, may solve our problems, for the coal situation will get worse instead of better. The old days of $5.50 and $6 are gone forever.

The August number of the "Labor Gazette" furnishes some interesting statistics regarding the retail price of anthracite in the various Provinces, the figures having been compiled before the recent advance. The average price in Ontario is $7.80, Toronto figures being $8 and Ottawa's $7.75. In Montreal the figure is $8.50, and in Quebec City $7.50, the average for the Province being $8. Whether this takes in the expense of bagging coal or not the statistics do not state. Probably not, in which event there would be an extra charge for bagging, not figured in Toronto, where bagging is general and quoted prices include it. In the Maritime Provinces the price continues to advance. In Nova Scotia the average is $8.60 per ton, and in New Brunswick $9.80. Naturally as one goes west the prices advance owing to freight rates, until in centres such as Winnipeg the summer price was $11.25 per ton, Saskatchewan $13.06, and British Columbia $12. However, the Canadian West is not dependent upon the Pennsylvania coal fields. They have lots of their own, some good, some bad and some indifferent, and then there is the natural gas as well, so that those west of Manitoba are not expected to feel sorry for themselves in respect to the anthracite coal question.—Toronto Saturday Night.

5 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

SHIPS FOR ALLIES.

The Italian Government has decided to confiscate all German ships interned in Italian ports.

The latest information shows that thirty-six German vessels of 153,688 tons were interned in Italian ports. It will be recalled that Portugal commandeered sixty-three German vessels, and that some of these have lately been chartered by the British Government.

The total number of enemy ships detained in Allied ports, captured in German colonial ports, or seized, is:

German	554
Austrian	73
Turkish	58

These 685 ships represent a tonnage of more than 1,500,000, and they are to a large extent being used by the Allies.

CHINESE TO GET A TYPEWRITER

Machine Invented by Young Oriental Has 4,000 Characters.

To make it possible to print an ideographic language like Chinese or Japanese, with their multiplicity of characters, on the typewriter, has been much desired, says the East and West News. The Pekin Daily News reports that a young inventor H. K. Chow, exhibited a model of one at Shanghai lately. He said that it was made possible by an impression he received at an exhibition in Boston, Mass. The machine was about 2 feet by 2 1-2 and weighs 40 pounds.

The machine has an indicator, upon which are written 4,000 characters, each occupying predetermined positions. One is able to locate anything on the cylinder, which is the main part of the machine, while he is locating counterparts on the flat surface. This is the whole secret of the invention in so far as the mechanical development is concerned. The indicator is printed with 4,000 characters. Its arrangement corresponds to that in a Chinese dictionary. A character is found through its radicals. The types are of zinc and rest on the surface of the cylinder. They are exact reproductions of the characters on the indicator, but in reversed positions. The carriage which holds the paper upon which the hammer strikes moves transversley on the cylinder, thus giving the other coordinate motion. A long rack turns the cylinder and at the same time moves the carriage. This is the most essential part of the whole machine.

MOST RUTHLESS METHODS

Advocated by Leader of German National Liberal Party.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Major Ernst Bassermann, leader of the National Liberal party, in a keynote speech delivered on Monday before his constituents in the Saarbruecken district, declared that the submarine campaign had been postponed and not abandoned. He advocated the widest possible use of both submarines and Zeppelins, and the most ruthless methods of warfare, and asserted that his views were shared by Admiral von Tirpitz, Admiral von Koester, Prince von Buelow and Count Zeppelin.

He said it would be a delusion to believe that there was any immediate prospect of an end to the war. On the contrary, he said, Germany was facing a more difficult war than had at first appeared possible.

In a private conversation, Professor Valentin, an employee of the Foreign Office, asserted that Admiral von Tirpitz had misled the Reichstag in regard to the number of available submarines and the possibility of a submarine campaign. The Admiral demanded that the Chancellor discipline Valentin. Chancellor von Tirpitz from Valentin's charges, but decides that the professor is not subject to his disciplinary powers.

LOSE 41,014 OFFICERS.

British Casualty List Adds 606 More Dead in Latter Half of August

LONDON, Sept. 8. (Mail).—Officers' casualty lists for the last fortnight of August contain the names of 303 officers killed, 1,306 wounded, and 94 missing, a total of 2,093. This brings the losses of officers in the British Army since the commencement of hostilities to 41,014, of which 12,045 have been killed or have died of wounds, 26,076 were wounded, and 2,893 are missing.

During the fortnight Brig. Gen. Potter was wounded, Brig. Gen. Buckle killed, and five lieutenant colonels were killed.

CORE OF THE EARTH

Its Form a Mystery, but the Globe as a Whole is Rigid.

The theory that the crust of the earth is only a few miles in thickness and rests upon an intensely heated molten interior is no longer tenable, says the St. Louis Despatch. It is now known that the earth, as a whole, possesses a high degree of effective rigidity, as great as if it were composed throughout of steel. It is no doubt true that the interior of the earth is in an intensely heated condition and that it appears to possess some of the qualities of a fluid. At the same time it behaves in many respects as a solid.

Professor Milne concludes from the velocities of seimic waves at different depths that the materials and general character of the crust of the earth that are found at the surface may extend to a depth of about thirty miles, but beyond that the material seems to merge into a fairly homogenous nucleus. This state probably extends to a depth of six-tenths of the radius, but the remaining four tenths form a core which differs in its physical and possibly its chemical constitution from the outer portion. What the state of this nucleus is must be a matter largely of conjecture until we have a fuller knowledge of the state of matter when subjected to the vast pressure such as exists within the earth's interior. Additional evidence that the earth as a whole is at least as rigid as steel is furnished by a study of tidal phenomena and also by the variation of latitude.

BRITISH DRIVE FORWARD TOWARDS BAPAUME

MANY AIR BATTLES RECORDED YESTERDAY

The British Smash Forward Again On The Somme Front

General Haig's Troops Drive Along the Highway Leading to Bapaume Capturing Strongly Fortified System of German Trenches East of Courcelette--New Positions Are Linked Up With Those Captured Thursday---French Flying Men Win Many Air Battles Bringing Down Ten Enemy Flyers.

LITTLE ACTIVITY ON MACEDONIAN FRONT

LONDON, September 23. — British drove forward along the highway leading to Bapaume last night, General Haig reported this afternoon. East of Courcelette a strongly fortified system of German trenches was captured on half a mile front. The newly captured positions are linked up with those captured between Flers and Martinpuich in the previous night's assault.

In two night's fighting the British line was pushed forward on a front of a mile and a half in the direction of Bapaume. The Germans emerged from their trenches near Thiepval and made a violent attack west of Mouquet Farm. They were driven back with heavy losses.

French Bring Down The Enemy Machines

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), September 23.—French aviators took part in 56 air battles yesterday bringing down ten enemy flyers, it was officially announced to-day. On perhaps no other day of the war has there been such great aerial activity. Sergeant Baron dropped three shells on military works at Ludwigshafen and three others on munition works at Mannheim, causing a bad fire.

On the Somme front French patrols which reached the southern edge of the town of Combles in yesterday's fighting found numerous German corpses and took fifteen prisoners. The Germans defended themselves desperately in strongly fortified houses on the outskirts of the town and from strong underground defenses. There was lively cannonading on the Somme front last night, but south of the river there were no infantry activities.

Bad weather hindered operations on all fronts in Macedonia yesterday, it was officially announced to-day. There were no infantry actions excepting patrol fights in the region of Lake Doiran.

Bulgarians Getting Ready To Retreat

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ATHENS, September 23.—Allied troops are with an hour's march of the Serbian town of Genali just across the Greek frontier on the Florina-Monastir railway. It is believed the position will be taken at the first assault. The Bulgars have partially evacuated Monastir and are removing some guns from the Babouna Pass defenses. Belgian cavalry is now here assisting the Allies, and also the Greek revolutionists.

Enemy Retreating From Roumania

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 23.—An unconfirmed wireles despatch from Rome this p.m. said that the German-Bulgarian forces are retreating from Roumania, and that the Roumanian fortress of Silistra, occupied two weeks ago by Mackensen, has been abandoned.

Australian Senate Favours Referendum

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

MELBOURNE, Australia, September 23.—The Australian Senate to-day passed by a vote of 17 to 9 the bill calling for a referendum on the question of conscription, which had already passed the House of Representatives. The women will vote at election.

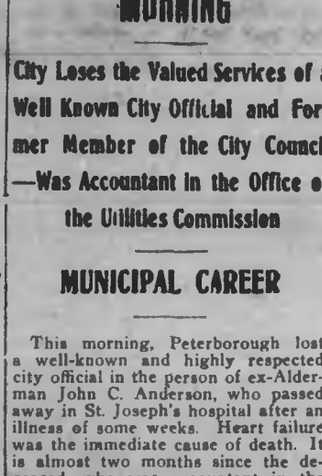
City Loses the Valued Services of a Well Known City Official and Former Member of the City Council —Was Accountant in the Office of the Utilities Commission

MUNICIPAL CAREER

This morning, Peterborough lost a well-known and highly respected city official in the person of ex-Alderman John C. Anderson, who passed away in St. Joseph's hospital after an illness of some weeks. Heart failure was the immediate cause of death. It is almost two months since the deceased, who was accountant in the office of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, received three months' leave of absence. Since that he has been under the care of a physician. One week ago he was removed to St. Joseph's hospital where he gradually became weaker until death took place this morning shortly after seven o'clock. The late ex-Alderman Anderson was forty-five years of age. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow and three children, namely, Mrs. Gillespie Stewart Gwendoline and one son, Kenneth. Two brothers and three sisters also survive. The brothers are Bruce of Richmond, Saskatchewan, and Charles E. Anderson of Oshawa. The sisters are Mrs. W. G. Robertson, Mrs. B. Becker and Miss S. Anderson, all of this city.



EX-ALD. J. C. ANDERSON

The deceased was born in Peterborough and has resided here all his life. He was a son of the late John Anderson. Prior to entering the office of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, the late ex-Alderman Anderson was identified with the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company, where he remained for upwards of twenty-three years. He was an un-

PTE. THOMAS FROST OF 93rd BATTALION DEAD IN ENGLAND

First Death in the Ranks of Peterboro' Unit Since It Went Overseas--Pte. Preston Armstrong of Indian River Is Wounded---21st Battalion Lost Heavily in Recent Fighting---To-day's General Military News.

News of the first death in the ranks of the 93rd Battalion since the Peterborough unit went overseas arrived today, when Mrs. Mary Frost, 513 Albert street, received official word that her husband, Pte. Thomas Frost, of No. 5 platoon, B company, 93rd Battalion, had passed away at Moore Barracks Hospital, Shorncliffe, Eng., on Thursday, Sept. 21, from cerebro spinal meningitis. The news will cause deep regret throughout the city, as Pte. Frost was well known and popular, his many genial qualities endearing him to all who knew him.

Pte. Frost was born in Canada and was a son of Mr. John Frost, of Albert street. Two other brothers are overseas, one enlisting in the west, while a younger brother, Pte. Arthur Frost, is with the 93rd Battalion.

A week ago to-day Pte. Frost was reported seriously ill and admitted to Moore Barracks, Hospital suffering from the dread complaint, cerebro spinal meningitis, the attack culminating fatally two days ago. He was a favourite with officers and men alike, a stalwart, genial soldier who took conditions philosophically. Among the men of No. 5 platoon Pte. Frost will be especially mourned. His many local friends will share in the grief of his comrades overseas.

Pte. Frost is survived by his wife and four small children, two boys and two girls, by his father, Mr. Albert Frost, Albert street, one sister residing in Rochester, and three brothers, John and Arthur with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces and Elton at home. Sympathy will be extended to the bereaved relatives.

Mr. Samuel Armstrong, Indian River, received word this morning that No. 166283, his son Pioneer Preston Porter Armstrong, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported admitted to the Norfolk War Hospital, Norwich, on Sept. 10, suffering from a gunshot wound in the shoulder.

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—Any man who wants to join the 242nd non-combatant Forestry Battalion will need to hurry about it. According to a message received early this week from Lieut. Col. J. B. White, commanding officer, the 242nd is so nearly filled that recruiting will close within ten days or two weeks. Owing to the fact that the Forestry unit will be divided up into six companies instead of the regular four, the 242nd are now asking for only 150 men from Ontario instead of the 250 that were first counted upon. As there are already over one hundred signed on at the local headquarters, 55 Queen St. West, this means that there is room for only fifty more men from the province. In other words this is practically the last chance that Ontario men will have to catch a place on a non-fighting unit which carries with it at the same time all the honours of active service.

The message from Col. White further stated that the fine work done in the west is responsible for fewer men being asked for the Ontario company. British Columbia surprised him with a quota of 183 men who are now on their way east. Already there are over 700 men in barracks at the Montreal headquarters, and these, taken with those already known to be at various outside points in Ontario, and the West, practically bring the 242nd up to strength. The recruiting, however, will be carried on in this province for another ten days or two weeks, until the extra fifty men have signed on.

Some Ontario centres seem to be appreciating the opportunity for service offered by the Foresters. Owen Sound, for example, has already sent thirteen men to the Toronto depot, while St. Catharines has sent eight. This is a result of the fine work of Sgt.-Major C. S. Lewis, who has been in charge of the recruiting of the Ontario company. Sgt. Major Lewis originated the idea of taking a recruiting staff to various centres outside Toronto, particularly to rural fall fairs, and the wisdom of the policy has already been demonstrated. A final suggestion to men who want overseas service without the dangers of fighting is that they get busy and sign on with the 242nd, without further delay, as the last chance has come.

The following letter has been received by the ladies of the West End Knitting Club:

Somewhere in France, Aug. 17, '16.

Mrs. J. J. Lynch,
Peterborough, Canada.

Dear Mrs. Lynch, —Received a box from home last week and was very pleased to find enclosed a parcel of socks from the ladies of the West End Knitting Club. Wish to convey to these kind ladies m ywarm appreciation of their good wishes and kind remembrance.

I can assure you that such gifts as these are much appreciated out here, and we cannot speak too highly of the able way in which our kind friends at home are looking after our welfare and supplying us with these many comforts.

Again thanking you, and wishing you every success in carrying on the good work.

Sincerely,
Spr. Len Dobson,
Can. Engineers, B.E.F., France.

DAY AND NIGHT.

Have you ever noticed that you can't see so well at night as you can in the day time. That is a sure sign your eyes are not strong enough to stand the strain. You should have it attended to right away, before they become worse. See Dr. Lacey about it. He understands the eyes and what they need. 410 George street.

GLORY FOR EASTERN ONTARIO BATTALIONS

PTE. THOMAS FROST, well known Peterborough member of the 93rd Battalion, who died in Moore Barracks Hospital, Shorncliffe, England, on Thursday, from cerebro spinal meningitis.

Units in Which Peterboro' Boys Are Serving Officially Praised For Part in Great Offensive in Which Canadians Took Mouquet Farm, Courcelette, 1209 Prisoners, Two Cannon and Many Machine Guns.

A THRILLING STORY

A number of units in which Peterborough people are vitally interested by reason of the number of local boys in their ranks, are referred to in the official report of the Canadian representative at the front, published today. It is certain that both the 2nd and 21st Eastern Ontario battalions were engaged while the Mounted Rifles are also referred to in the report. So far only two or three Peterborough casualties have been announced since the big offensive. The report follows:

Canadian Corps Headquarters in France, Sept. 21.—The Canadian troops have been actively participating in the great Battle of the Somme. Already, in a series of brilliant attacks they have forced the Germans back for over a mile beyond their original line. They have captured Mouquet Farm, having finally overcome a desperate resistance; they have attacked and carried the sugar refinery and its lines of connecting trenches, and then, following up this success with a boldness of plan and action of execution not excelled in this war, they have on the same day organized and delivered fresh attacks which made them masters of the whole village of Courcelette.

Over 1,200 Prisoners.

The Canadians have taken over 1,200 prisoners, including 32 officers, together with two guns, a large number of machine guns and several heavy minenwerfers, or trench mortars, and in the course of the heavy and sustained fighting they have inflicted very serious losses upon the enemy.

A Montreal battalion was the first to enter the battle, coming up through a hostile barrage to the assistance of hard-pressed troops practically in the middle of an attack. They were closely followed by the Canadian Scottish from Vancouver, and by a Toronto battalion. These battalions, although they delivered no assault, were given a very difficult and trying task to perform. They were heavily shelled in trenches newly dug or recently captured from the enemy, and the exact location of which it was almost impossible to determine. Despite very adverse conditions they consolidated their trenches and repelled several hostile bombing attacks.

At one time there was considerable movement remarked near Mouquet Farm. Men were seen jumping from shell-hole to shell-hole, and finally a large party in full marching order attempted t- -h the farm. Our men opened fire and dispersed them 200 Against 24.

In this locality at 6.10 the next morning about two hundred Germans attacked a trench held by Lieut. G. B. Murray and Lieut. B. L. Cook, with 24 men of another Montreal battalion. The enemy used their bayonets freely at the first rush and succeeded in entering the trench. A counter-attack was however, promptly organized, and succeeded in expelling the Germans from the greater part of the captured position.

But these activities, important and commendable though they were, were only preparatory to the great offensive that was to follow. The first as-

BRITISH AVIATORS SUCCESSFULLY RAID ENEMY AERODROME

For Third Time Within Fortnight British Birdmen Drop Bombs on St. Denis Westrom, Causing Heavy German Casualties

"HIGHLY SATISFACTORY"

LONDON, Sept. 23.—For the third time within a fortnight British aviators made a raid this morning on the German aerodrome at St. Denis Westrem in Belgium. An official statement from the Admiralty indicated that the raid was the most effective yet made. Considerable damage was done and there were heavy German Casualties, the Admiralty stated in describing the operation as "highly satisfactory." Before raiding St. Denis Westrem, aerodromes at Ghistelles and Handzame were heavily bombarded.

$4,085.50 For Y.M.C.A. Fund

Lists Will Be Held Open For the Present

The total standing of the Y.M.C.A. canvass up to Friday evening was $4,085.50 subscribed. There have been very few workers engaged in the canvass and these men have given four full days to the work, but have failed to cover their lists, as many people are out of the city. It is proposed to hold the subscription lists open for the present, trusting that the full amount, $5,000 will be reached as soon as the workers can complete their calls.

Quite a number of citizens have responded to the appeal by sending their subscriptions directly to the Association's office. It would be a great help if others who have as yet not been called on would do the same.

The responses in the canvass have been as good as in any previous year, in fact it seems there have been fewer refusals to contribute than ever before. So the Association workers are much encouraged. The main problem that the Association is facing in its efforts to reach this $5,000 goal is to complete the work with the very few canvassers available.

The Directors wish to thank every citizen who has contributed to the support of the Association work this year, as this is a critical year in the history of the Association. Work for young men has never been more needed than at the present time.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 23, 1916

PROHIBITION.

Prohibition prohibits in Peterborough, anyway. The first week of prohibition has passed here without the arrest of a single drunk, except one case that came in from Lindsay on the train. It is a pity that with the prospect of so much improvement from banishing the bar, the Legislature should have left open the bars wide enough to let through a brewer's dray instead of the proverbial coach and four. It is authoritatively stated that the law can be so interpreted as to permit brewers and distillers to add a retail department to their business—to deliver liquors held in bond by them subject to the orders of citizens through a dealer in another province. If that is the law it must be amended or the evil of home drinking will be developed, and an unfair treatment meted out to retail dealers who have been compelled to close their bars while their business is transferred to the wholesalers. Prohibition promises to be of too much real benefit to have its working impaired by a defect like this.

ENCOURAGING.

We have good reason to be encouraged—not that we have ever been discouraged—with the progress of the war. The sun is shining strong on our side of the hedge. If Germany is not getting the place in the sun she set herself out to gain, she is getting the benefit of hot conditions. For a couple of months the Allies have been gaining steadily, and the push-back of the Teutons gains in force every day, and we have now in reality what we have had long in hope, assurance that we are going to win. A United States university professor, back from a visit to England, tells of the wonderful things Britain is doing in manufacturing war munitions, that would "turn the Krupps green with envy." All the Allies are making mountains of munitions and using them with deadly effect on the enemy. Britain is up to the highest point of productive efficiency in all lines of war supplies. Such a pitch has been reached that permission is given leading shipyards to turn aside from a warship building to building mercantile vessels, the government feeling that it can safely do this, so excellent is the shape of things all round. It is encouraging to know that in the progress of the victorious push on the west front our gallant Canadian lads are taking so splendid a part. The outlook all round is most encouraging and we are well on to getting pay for all the sacrifices we have made.

PATRIOTISM AND TAXATION.

Taxation is the medium through which we should meet our duty in regard to national interests. Governments are supposed to find the means for financing the war; and, logically, governments should finance the results arising from the war. The government pays little if anything for Red Cross work or to Patriotic Funds. The result is that in these things the burden of doing something, if anything is to be done, falls upon private persons, and generally upon persons who have made other sacrifices—given sons or relatives or friends to the war, for as a rule people who avoid the duty of enlisting or helping enlistment, are those who dodge the patriotic contribution box. The contributors to these funds have been pretty well identified and if anything is to be got they will have to be appealed to again, which becomes a little hard because there is a bottom to every pocket; and at the same time those who have refused to contribute, though it is as much their duty, still refuse. In a case where all are interested, the burden should be distributed over all. That is only reasonable and fair. Taxation is therefore fair, if it can be made a generally equitable way of distributing the duty of supporting Red Cross and Patriotic Funds, insuring contribution according to ability. The solution of the question now before the Patriotic Fund committee, will be helped by a sympathetic attitude on the part of the public, and the responsible authorities.

PREACHING.

As the layman is theoretically assumed to be the object, if not beneficiary, of pulpit oratory, he may lay some claim to be interested and have opinions and feelings on the subject. A Toronto minister has been preaching on "The Art of Preaching." His own definition of preaching—"to bring back God into human life"—religion—agrees with the definition of St. Paul and defines the only object of preaching. But so full agreement cannot be made with conclusion from another statement — "we are passing through a period of reconstruction in belief." Why is there necessity for reconstructing the "faith once delivered to the saints?" That delivery is the chief function of true preaching and "meeting the honest doubts of men" is subordinate. Are there "honest doubts among men who have had the Gospel preached to them from their infancy? The multitude of "honest doubts" regarding religion are dishonest delusions; doubts that the doubters do not believe in, themselves; voluntary assumption of doubt, to justify to themselves and others the excuses for neglecting the duties of religion. The best way of combatting "intellectual unrest" in religion is the antidote of the stright, plain Gospel. And if there is "doubt" and "intellectual unrest" who is to blame for that except the preachers and theologians? The poor old Gospel is placed on the dissecting table of exegetical surgery, and the process of dissection is carried to absurd extremes and intellectual heresies are read into the plain Gospel story—in itself, so plain a way that "wayfaring men, though fools, need not err therein." As St. Paul enjoins "women professing godliness" against "broided hair," or "costly array" so preachers are enjoined against befrilling the Gospel of Truth with the sophistical tinsel of the "higher criticism." The "honest doubts," the "intellectual unrest" are the ruinous spawn of the mishandling of the divine truths of the Bible; the fruit of intellectual pride, that seeks to violate the ark of the divine mysteries and reduce revelation and religion to shreds. Study of the Scriptures is a good and wholesome thing, but obviously only to be done in the light of the Gospel lamp; not in the betraying blaze of the ignus fatuis of intellectual self-sufficiency. The Gospel concerns itself with the human mind only as the medium, the window, through which enters to the human soul "the Light that lighteneth the world." Such homely truths may be scoffed at, mutilated by men of the mind of those who have made mockery and myths of the truths of the Bible that godly men have accepted and lived by and gone to heaven in the beliefs that "intellectual unrest" has labelled delusions.

DISLOYALTY TO HOME, AT HOME.

How can the Borden government have the "cheek" to make appeal to the loyalty of patriotism of the Canadian people when it sets the example of outraging both. The people of Canada are shedding their own blood and spending their own money in the interests of the country and Empire. At the same time the government has turned over the designing and construction of a Dominion arsenal at Lindsay to the engineers and industries of a foreign country, which is making millions out of the empire without one iota of sacrifice.

In another column is found an article from "Construction," a class journal, devoted to the various interests of the building industry, and without politics except loyalty to the home interests of the country, strongly condemning the action of the government:

"From the method pursued in placing the arsenal contract in Lndsay the Canadian government proves itself guilty of stupendous ignorance and lack of loyalty and patriotism, intolerable at any time, but under existing conditions and circumstances little short of criminal. Its ignorance of the fact that there is hardly a building in the United States, either public or private, that could not have been as well designed by Canadian architects, and erected by Canadian contractors, might be excused, but its disloyalty to the men who have been affected by the war more than any other group, is unpardonable."

When a non-political and non-partisan journal thus speaks the straight truth, the government organs that condemn criticism of the government as disloyalty, might more consistently condemn real disloyalty in the government. Of course, unfair criticism tends to hamper the government, in its management of the war but such criticism as "Construction" gives is fair and legitimate, and signally brought upon the government by itself. The action of the government in outraging the principle of Canada for the Canadians, by giving the contract of a big government building without allowing Canadians a chance to compete, is in logical sequence of the declaration of Premier Borden that "Canada could not build warships in fifty years." Mr. Borden is an honest man, with more conscience than spinal column, but we don't believe he believed that when he said it—we don't believe that anything but pleasing the Nationalists ever led him to thus insult the enterprise and skill of Canadian workmen. If Premier Borden's declaration that Canada is prepared to spend our last dollar and give our last man to win the war, is to be realized, he must not expect us to also sacrifice our bread and butter and our material national interests. "Canada for Canadians" is what we are fighting for, in France and Flanders. It is what we should be fighting for at home, but we sometimes forget it. We forgot it when our School Board sent to Kankakee, Illinois, the contract for supplying a boiler to heat a Public school building, in disregard of the fact that we could make boilers at home; we forgot it when the Ontario government gave to a United States firm, the contract for Hydro dynamos at Eugenia Falls that could as well, if not better, have been made in Peterborough.

IGNORANCE IS STUPENDOUS AND LOYALTY IS LACKING

This is What "Construction," a Trade and Non-Political Journal, Says of the Action of the Government

When the Government of Canada sees fit, as it has done, to offer a gratuitous insult to the engineering, architectural and contracting interests in this country, it is surely time for a vigorous protest. In giving the designing and erecting of the new Dominion arsenal at Lindsay to a New York firm it has been guilty of a crime against the public welfare, which should not be tolerated by the people of the Dominion.

The weak-kneed attempt on the part of the Hon. A. E. Kemp to justify the action of the Government in giving this work to a foreign company, by inferring that Canadian architects, engineers and contractors were not competent to undertake this important work, is adding further insult to injury, and like hitting a man below the belt after he has been struck on the face. Failing to find an excuse for getting outsiders to do work for which the people of Canada are paying, and which could be as well done by men who are going to be called upon to pay their share of the upkeep of this Government institution, the would-be defender of the Government's action takes it upon himself to belittle the ability of the men already injured.

From the method pursued in placing the arsenal contract the Canadian government proves itself guilty of stupendous ignorance and a lack of loyalty and patriotism, intolerable at any time, but under existing conditions and circumstances little short of criminal. Its ignorance of the fact that there is hardly a building in the United States, either public or private, that could not have been as well designed by Canadian architects or erected by Canadian contractors might be excused, but its treasonable disloyalty to the men who have been affected by the war more adversely than any other group is unpardonable.

The day the corner-stone of the Dominion arsenal was being laid with great pomp and ceremony in Lindsay by Sir Sam Hughes, members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were in New York putting in tenders for material for this building. Toronto manufacturers found it necessary to go to the United States in order to get a chance to bid for a share in supplying their material to a building for which the people of Canada are paying. Could absurdity be extended farther?

In striking contrast to this free and easy method on the part of the Government and private corporations of ignoring Canadian worth and ability at the expense of the general welfare of the country is the wall imposed against us by the Federal Government of the United States. As an actual illustration of this might be mentioned the case of a Hamilton architect who composed for and won a competition on a building which was to be erected in a city of the United States not far from the Canadian border. This successful architect, whose work was judged on its merit, was not allowed to enter the United States to superintend the erection of the building. The Federal law of the United States includes under their alien labour act, which controls the entry of foreign labour into their borders, and places in the same class as mechanics the architect, the engineer, and the contractor.

It is up to us as architects, as engineers, as contractors, as manufacturers, to see that our own laws are made at least as far-reaching as those of our neighbour, where it is in the public interest to do so.—"Construction."

DOLLAR DIPLOMACY VERSUS THE INTERESTS OF HUMANITY

President Wilson now has in his hands the retaliatory weapons placed there by Congress; and it remains to be seen whether he will use them to the embroilment of relations between the United States and the Entente Powers. Certain it is that the Allied nations will not desist from the employment of powers which they believe are within their rights, and which they are prepared to justify before neutral arbitral courts after the war, by any threats by Washington to enforce the embargoes provided for by the amendments to the Revenue Bill. Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, when these amendments were before Congress for consideration, expressed his view of them in good plain English. He said:

"The threats in this bill will be unfulfilled. President Wilson may rattle the sabre which you have given him, but he will not draw it.

"The relatives of the victims of the Lusitania sinking marvel at a country which believes that 'strict accountability' means a flood of gentle ink.

"You hypocrites! You claim you are devoted to the cause of humanity and despise the cause of commercialism. Then, why don't you pass an amendment refusing our harbours to Germany's interned ships until she repudiates her Lusitania crime? Why do you pass amendments which even you admit can serve no other end than the stuffing of sordid pockets already bulging with the golden harvest of our fellowmen's misery?

"In adopting these retaliatory amendments, you are taking an action which all over the world will be looked on as a blow in support of Germany's ugly cause. You have suddenly surrendered, without warning to your own people, to the insidious propaganda which so long has corrupted such a large part of our press. Doubtless your action will serve its purpose—it will bring to your standard in doubtful States hundreds of disloyal voters who care nothing for the bloom and glory on the American roll of honour and everything for the jealousies and hatreds of lands which they swore to renounce when they took the oath which made them—God forgive us!—American citizens.

"Ninety-nine men out of a hundred who howl against the Allies' censorship want Germany to win the war. Yet the overwhelming mass of the American people pin their faith on the banners of the Allies.

"Fat traders, who by hook or crook seek access to the luscious profits of the contraband market, yell against a blockade which hampers their lust for more gold to jingle in their already over-weighted pockets.

"And to all this we yield and in our statute book we inscribe another threat at whose unfulfilment countless Americans of the future will blush with shame."

The United States, which was in the depths of commercial depression two years ago, has prospered incredibly by war orders from the Entente Powers; but the dollar-chasers are not content. Their eyes glisten and their mouths water when they think of the fancy prices Germany would pay for necessaries for carrying on the war. They could supply the wants of Germany and reap these profits by shipping through the ports of the neutral countries contiguous to Germany if it were not for the blockade maintained by the British through the application of the doctrine of continuous voyage. The Allied nations stand stoutly upon the contention that, having the power, they have the right to stop the exportation of goods to Germany; and they hold that the natural and reasonable extension of the recognized rights of belligerents to meet new conditions is defensible. Many of the precedents upon which they rely are derived from United States practice during the Civil War, when Washington showed considerable ingenuity in adapting old laws to meet new conditions. In the present controversy, however, the United States Government has taken a pedantic view of the whole question; and has sought to confine the rights of the belligerents within limits which under present day conditions, would be valueless for purposes of war.

It would be a mistake to deduce from the tone and matter of the United States notes on the subject under controversy and the action by Congress, suggested possibly by the States Government to contribute to desire on the part of the United States government to contribute to a German victory. Their action is dictated, not by love for Germany, but by love for the Almighty Dollar. The men in charge of affairs in the United States are probably pro-Ally in the same proportion as the people at large—that is, at least five to one. They expect and want the Allies to win. They know that if they could impose their view as to the rights at sea of belligerents upon the Allied nations it would prolong the war a year, perhaps two years, with all that this means of agony, loss, ruin and death. But this is a little matter in the eyes of the United States Government in comparison with the desire to vindicate and enforce Mr. Robert Lansing's interpretation of sea law, with the incidental advantages that would thus accrue to the cotton-growers, tobacco-raisers and other interests in the United States.

Scores of Renters Should Own Their Homes

Because I make home owning so very easy. Buying a good garden lot, large or small, is the first wise step to take, and for families of limited means, a close suburb with low taxes, is by far the safest place to buy. I can give you a choice lot near all south end factories, or in Rosedale, near Jackson Park, or at Auburn, east of river; excellent garden and orchard, 600 feet along river. Low prices and any reasonable terms desired, with valuable assistance to build when $100 is paid. I want to sell now, and I make you this offer if you will come to my office or write me and buy now. Open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. I will give a discount of 10 p.c. off my low prices and a further discount of 10 p.c. for all cash paid before November.

European War Has Made Valcartier Camp Famous Has Commanding Position

Although the Camp is a Product of This War Work Was Commenced in 1913—Many Visitors Are Much Impressed With the Best Camp on the Continent.

By Chas. E. Compton

Synonomous with the part that Canada has played in the great world war, stands the name Valcartier. It was there that the Firs Canadian contingent—that has since covered itself with glory—mobilized and then sailed overseas to Great Britain a few weeks after war was declared. Thus, Valcartier is really a product of this war, although it must be said that work has begun there in the fall of 1913. Of course, Valcartier of 1912 is not the Valcartier of to-day. Then, it was merely a collection of farm properties, but to-day one finds an ideal military camp, which it is said ranks first class with any military camp on North America. Be that as it may Valcartier Camp is a model in every respect.

The purchase of the original site, which has been enlarged since was largely due to the foresight of Col. William McBain. Having recommended it to the minister of militia, who authorized the purchase, he acquired the farms from their owners at a reasonable price. Col. Duroche was the engineer in charge and to him is due the splendid drainage and sanitation of the camp.

NATURAL FACILITIES.

Every visitor is bound to be much impressed with the splendid natural facilities of Valcartier. In the first place of one fancies to himself 20 square miles on a plateau some 200 feet higher than Quebec he can judge in his mind the magnitude of Canada's greatest military camp. Nestling in the lap of the Laurentians, which form splendid natural butts for the rifle and military ranges, but camp of fers excellent opportunities for shooting.

On three sides the mountain sides form a picturesque background while stretching to the south and southeast is a gradual descending slope to the St. Lawrence river. The slope is fairly steep and to draw an ordinary passenger train up the grade frequently two engines are employed.

Owing to its altitude and sandy soil heavy rains do not cause the camp any after damage. While it is raining it is unpleasant, but as soon as the rain is over, the porous soil absorbs the water. This is of great advantage to the soldier, as experience in other camps has already proved. Few soldiers desire to wallow in the mud.

NO SIDING THEN.

When Col. Duroche sent his men there the first loads of material had to be unloaded between trains on the Canadian Northern line between Quebec and Lake St. Joseph. There was no siding. All this is changed and things are different. A commodious station accommodates that city of some 20,000 military citizens. Some five trains a day each way, are loaded with men 'on pass' going for or coming from a short holiday. Are they glad? Just ask them. Every man is delighted to have a chance to go home or even to the city for a few hours.

They are men of duty, those men who live in tents. Although they know that camp life is not so luxurious as in their own homes they are sworn to do their duty and they are doing it. Practically every train has its large or small load of soldier boys of all ranks and on Saturday afternoon the crowd is something enormous. Quebec is 16.5 miles distant and the Canadian Northern—the only line that runs into the camp gives a good service. Almost every hour there is a train and no one has grounds for complaint.

CAMP PARASITES.

When entering the camp, the visitor meets the cabman, the motor driver and other leeches who would suck the soldier's pocket dry if he would allow them. First, they ask 50 cents per head to drive you then come down to 35 cents and in a vain endeavor to catch what business they can, they get down to a reasonable price of a quarter each. But the walking is good for those who care to try it and there are not a few Tommies who have been bitten once too often. So they foot it and are glad they did. The cabman's mind is not visible.

When you walk you meet men in khaki who have white hands around their arms on which is inscribed in black letters "M.P." This does not mean Member of Parliament, but Military Police. They are good constables.

Several let you pass, but a fellow who concedes it to be his duty to do a little more officious than the others tells you that you must go "to that little green building over there and get a pass."

In "that little green building over there" one sees several timid women with bundles, who say they do not know how to proceed. But you walk in and there are two privates there—one standing and the other writing. You say you are Mr. "So-and-So," and the sitting private writes out a pass. This pass goes into your pocket and you bring it home as a souvenir—but you have satisfied the guard on the gate.

"THE TENTED CITY"

Those who have seen a battalion under canvas know exactly what newspapers call "The Tented City". But to look over the canvas dwelling of 20,000 men gives one the impression of a sea of white.

As one passes along, the telegraph offices and branches of Canadian banks are seen. A Montreal newspaper has a little office on the grounds and apparently does a thriving business.

On one side of the street the word 'street' does not mean a muddy highway as in some camps but a paved street. The pavement is swept each day.

There is on one side what is properly or improperly called the "special service" battalion composed of men who have been found medically unfit and have been put into this unit from others, for work not so laborious are required by other regiments.

The visitor journeys on and three or four green painted buildings are pointed out as the camp headquarters. There Brig.-Gen. E. W. Wilson and his staff administer the camp.

The chief thoroughfare leads to the left side and the main section of the camp. In the early part of this week there were some eighteen battalions there.

FLOATING POPULATION.

As the units come and go so quickly, Valcartier's residents are truly a floating population. But it is representative of Canada. There may not be units from all parts of the Dominion there, but individuals from the east, centre and west are to be found in a great many battalions. You will probably meet there men from Halifax and Vancouver.

Due to Valcartier's builder, Col. R. S. Low, the men have running water in shower baths and in washstands. Many of the tents have electric light. In front of each battalion a raised and inscribed mound designates the number of the unit. If one reads these signs he probably finds the troops in camp includes The Canadian Divisional Engineers, 148th, 171st, 18th, 167th, 139th, 136th, 145th 165th, 239th, 132nd, 139th, 179th, 150th, 19th, 5th Pioneers, Special Service Battalion, Army Service Corps, Canadian Dental Corps, Ordnance Depot, Army Medical Corps, etc.

SPLENDID RANGES

A word of the ranges might be apropos. Valcartier's ranges are said to have a capacity of 2,500 men at once and this feature alone is something the soldiers prize highly.

On the mountain side one notices (especially if his attention is called) a space where the landside herbage is burned. Inquiry revealed the secret.

That part had been used by the 'big guns' to test the ammunition and the 'woods' have suffered in consequence. Everyone said for big gun practice the range was splendid but it had only been used to test explosives.

The proximity of the camp to Quebec is perhaps responsible for the crowded condition of the hotels in that city.

Just now the visitor finds it difficult to find a room and sometimes he has to visit two or three hostelries before he can secure accommodation. Friends of the soldier boys are continually coming and going. It is no uncommon sight to see an elderly lady with her arms loaded with parcels trudging up the road. All of a sudden out runs a private, coat and hat off, hair dishevelled and face partially wet; throws his arms around her until she drops her parcels and they kiss each other. She is his mother and he is so glad to see her. She is delighted. They may meet again after the war on earth or in the great beyond.

RED LETTER DAY

"Hunk, hunk" blows a motor car horn behind you. You step aside and the six cylinder goes whizzing past. One of the officers has secured the "loan" of the battalion car and he has met his parents at the station.

"Does any one know those two young girls walking down the sidewalk?" They are surveying every inch of the way. They are somebody's sisters. A sergeant spies them and runs to meet them. They cover their proud brother with kisses and those are happy moments for all.

PICTURESQUE SCENERY

Those who have never visited Valcartier have been heard to remark that there is no use trying to see friends there. Such impressions are foolish and absurd. The commanding officer of the subordinates are only too glad not only to direct visitors, but to show concessions to the men while their friends are with them.

The scenery between Valcartier and Quebec is charming, and visitors to either place usually take the electric car to St. Anne de Beaupre, where pilgrims and tourists alike find scenes of interest. The Quebec bridge, the citadel and the historic Plains of Abraham bring before one history of the past and present.

As the Canadian Northern train nears Quebec it parallels the beautiful St. Lawrence for at least a score of miles, and when the city itself bursts upon the view thoughts of schoolboy days and the "Capture of Quebec" become green and vivid memories.

TO MEND LINOLEUM.

Cut a rectangular piece of linoleum a little larger than the worn piece by taking a ruler or yard stick and cut edges straight with the point of a sharp knife. Lay this flat over the worn piece and cut carefully just the size of the new piece. Take out the old piece and place in the new one, tack down the edges, and you will have a neatly mended linoleum that will be scarcely noticeable.

BELGIAN PATRIOTISM RIGIDLY PUNISHED

News has been received that while the German military authorities did not take any action as a result of the daring address that Cardinal Mercier delivered in the Cathedral at Brussels on July 21, the anniversary of Belgian independence, they did take official notice of all the attempts of the people to celebrate the day. The women who wore little strips of green ribbon as the color of hope were punished. A milliner who decorated her little store in green was fined 10,000 marks (about $2,500.) There were similar instances.

This information came to New York in the mail of a prominent Belgian-American, the same person who last week gave the complete text of Cardinal Mercier's address in the Cathedral of Brussels.

"Since the events of July 21," the letter said, "von Bising, the Governor General of Belgium, does not sleep. Here is a new decree he issued on July 30 as a result of the celebration of Independence Day:

(1.) It is forbidden to give political manifestations in public, no matter what they may be, meeting in the street, vociferations, acclamations or invectives, closing of stores, restaurants, etc., concerted demonstrations produced under form of special signs, (flag, etc.), or unity of colors exhibited in women's dresses.

(2.) Infringements, (unless a more severe penalty be imposed,) will be punishable by arrest or imprisonment or not more than six months, or a fine of 20,000 marks maximum. Both penalties may be imposed simultaneously.

Infringements under the present decree will be judged by the mihtary courts and the military commanders.

Brussels, July 30, 1916.

Governor-General, etc.

"We know," the letter continues, "that many merchants of Brussels, jokers by nature, succeeded, notwithstanding the numerous ordinances of the Military Governor of Brussels—who pretended to foresee everything—to manifest very clearly and very eloquently their loyalty and their patriotism. There followed, Les Nouvelles of Maestricht tells us, many condemnations, the Germans knowing better than any one how to turn the most noble sentiments into money. We give below the most typical among the penalties imposed:

"The big parasol and umbrella store, Severin, on the Boulevard of Brussels, had two immense windows absolutely empty with the exception of a man's walking stick crowned with a monkey's head in each window. As the French for monkey is 'singe,' he who ran who read 'Bissinge,' if quick at picture puzzles, a play upon the German Governor General's name, (von Bissing.) The proprietor of the store was fined 20,000 marks for his little joke.

"A little milliner, formerly a rather obscure little person, but now a 'grande modiste' decorated her entire store in green (the color of hope.) Green hat, green ribbons, green draperies, every little knicknack in the store loudly proclaimed the hopeful attitude of the little storekeeper. This little milliner had to pay a fine of 10,000 marks.

"A seller of fruit exhibited red tomatoes, yellow lemons, and black grapes (the colors of the Belgian flag) He had to pay a heavy fine for his patriotism.

"We could enumerate many other examples. Brussels has given proof of a unanimity and of an ardor of sentiment that is really admirable. The 21st of July does her honor as well as would a glorious defense before the enemy."

CHOLERA INFANTUM

Cured By Using

DR. FOWLER'S

Extract of Wild Strawberry

Cholera infantum is one of the most common, and at the same time one of the most dangerous summer complaints of infants, and many children have died who could have been saved had the proper remedy been used on the first sign of the trouble.

Cholera Infantum begins with a profuse diarrhoea; the stomach becomes irritated, vomiting and purging set in and the child rapidly loses flesh, and becomes weak, prostrated and languid.

Mrs B. A. Cirwell, Rossway, N.S., writes: "I can recommend most highly Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. A friend of mine whose little daughter was ill with cholera infantum was given up by the doctors. The little one's mother asked me to come in and see the child. I told her I had a bottle of 'Dr. Fowler's' and asked her if she would try it. When the bottle was half used the child was well. This cure was a miraculous one for I thought the child was dying at the time."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past seventy years. Any one who has ever used it will not accept a substitute. See that you don't. When you ask for "Dr. Fowler's" be sure that you get it.

The genuine is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 35c.

IF KIDNEY'S ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THE FOOD WE EAT.

THE AMOUNT OF FOOD one eats is determined by one's weight, the amount of work one does, the season of the year and, to some extent, by one's digestion. A great part of the food we eat goes to make heat, consequently the fuel value of the food eaten in cold winter weather should be twice as great as that of the summer when the heat ranges from 90 to 100 Deg. F.

Food value is generally indicated by the term calorie. A calorie is the amount of heat required to raise one kilogram of water one degree centigrade. A man doing active manual labor requires 4,000 calories of food daily, as compared with 2,000 calories required by the man lying quietly in bed. In a general way the amount of food a person needs varies with the weight, but the unit of food per pound of weight is highest in the first year of life and lessens year by year as one becomes older. The baby grows very rapidly in his first year and besides he takes a great deal of exercise. He works harder than an older person.

Foods are classed as Proteins, Fats, and Carbohydrates or Sugars. The proteins are the substances necessary for the growth and repair of the body tissues. The fats keep us warm and the carbohydrates supply energy. Eggs, milk, cheese and meat give the largest amount of protein; milk and butter the largest supply of fats, while sugar, jam, bread, milk, and cereals largely supply the carbohydrate. The following tables indicate the quantities of food and food values for the diet of—

MAGNETIC LAMPS NOT REQUIRED IN CITY'S CENTRE WILL BE MOVED TO OTHER MAIN THOROUGHFARES

Utilities Commission Presented Plans of Changes to the Council Last Night —44 Lamps Will See Real Service After Several Years—Ornamentation Where Not Actually Needed

ACCOUNTS ADJUSTED

In a conference with the committee of the Whole Council last night the Utilities Commission through its chairman, Mr. T. F. Matthews, presented a plan to remove forty-four magnetite arc lamps from the centre of the city and distribute them on the outer stretches of some of the principle thoroughfares. The work should be completed by the end of the present year. The iron standards will remain in position where they are required as trolley poles, but the brackets and lamps would be taken off them and installed on painted wooden poles of uniform size similar to that erected several months ago as an experiment by the Commission on Sherbrooke street in front of the temporary sub-station at the corner of Bethune street.

9 lamps on George street between McDonnel and Smith streets.

11 lamps on Charlotte street, from Bethune to the boundary.

4 lamps on Hunter street from the creek to Rubidge street.

9 lamps on Hunter street east to Concession street.

1 on Murray street, between George and Aylmer streets.

1 on McDonnel street between George and Aylmer streets.

2 on Simcoe streets from the creek to Aylmer street.

These make a total of 43 of the lamps that are not necessary under the present system of lighting the central portion of the city.

Cost $1,200 a Year.

This change will cost the city between $1,200 and $1,300 a year, but the Utilities Commission will receive this additional revenue and the streets mentioned will be illuminated by modern lamps. Mr. Matthews remarked that this forward step was but a beginning of a general scheme to replace the city's antiquated system as it was described before the Arbitration Board not so long ago.

The lamps to be moved in this first extension will be connected by overhead wiring. The work will be commenced in the near future after a conference of the Commission with the Fire, Water and Light committee.

Mr. Matthews was accompanied by Mr. W. H. Moore, Mr. R. Hicks, Mr. H. O. Fiske and Mr. R. L. Dobbin.

Swapped Accounts.

The Council and Commission presented a number of unpaid accounts they held against each other, some of them dating back to 1913. They finally agreed to write off those antedating January 1st, 1916. Ald. Stratton believed that the accounts up to that time practically counterbalanced one another.

Bill Reduced $250.

Another little item Mr. Matthews presented was an account for $1,500 against the city for the water used on the street this year. Under a five year agreement that terminated this year the city paid $1500 a year for this service. That sum was $500 less than was formerly paid. Ald. Stratton contended that the city had used less water on the streets this year as a result of the extensive oiling, and the Commission's quarterly payments had been held up until the account was adjusted. He suggested that $1250 was a fair amount for this year on account of the diminished demand. The Commission finally agreed to accept this sum which represented a discount of $250.

Light For Lock Street.

Ald. Duncan mentioned the need of a new lamp at the corner of Lock and Romaine street and Mr. Fiske promised that it would be attended to during the coming week.

Ald. Saunders inquired about the proposed lights for Parnell street, and it was stated that these would be installed during the winter when the trees had been trimmed and thinned.

The west end of Elm street was also referred to, especially a service to a new house erected by Mr. J. J. Hickey.

PAULA SHAY, STAR OF "EVERYWOMAN"

Paula Shay, the star of "Everywoman," is a new discovery and a new sensation in the world of the stage. She rises to stardom practically from seclusion. Her beauty, magnetism and dramatic instinct are so compelling that after Henry W. Savage saw her first performance in "Everywoman," he offered her a three years' contract, whereby she is to be starred on Broadway next year in a play especially written for her.

In several respects Miss Shay's sudden rise to fame parallels the story of Julia Marlowe. She is only 22, the age at which Miss Marlowe made her debut on broadway, and she too comes from a family whose means have enabled them to give her every advantage of training and specialised education to equip her for her career.

Even without her training and native ability, Miss Shay could hardly fail of a measure of success on the stage. For with her almost spectacular beauty—long, golden hair, deep blue eyes, rose-bud complexion and the very picture of grace—she would be an ornament to any play. But she has served a faithful apprenticeship. She has played the leading roles of half the modern successes in a season of stock, and to gain poise and command of facial expression she has acted for the camera.

Now, however, she considers that her career has just begun. And it is the intention of her managers that she shall have the full opportunity to which her beauty and ability entitle her. Mr. Savage has negotiated for a drama that will give expression to Miss Shay will have the chance to dis and as the story is concerned with characters of prominence in metropolitan society, it is intended that Miss Shay wil have the chance to display her virtuosity as a musician. In the meantime the critics and the public are acclaiming her the most beautiful and talented "Everywoman" who has ever been starred in the play.

PRETTY BARMAIDS ARE NOT IN FAVOUR

NO REGULATION AGAINST IT — BUT BOARD HANDS OUT A GENTLE WARNING.

Toronto, September 22. — Sunday selling in standard hotel bars and the appearance behind the bars of fair maidens as a substitute for the less prepossessing male sex are frowned upon by the Ontario License Board. So far no edict against either has gone out but the members of the Board made it evident that neither innovation will be allowed to become general.

Vice Chairman Dingman pointed out, in regard to Sunday selling, that while there was nothing in the standard hotel regulations to restrict the sale of soft drinks to any particular hours, the Board did not look with approval upon Sunday selling..

"The hotelmen must understand that this Board is responsive to public sentiment and that if Sunday selling is carried on in a way contrary to public sentiment it might be necessary to take steps to stop it," said Mr. Dingman. The future action of the Board on the matter would Mr. Dingman intimated, be guided largely by the course taken by the hotelmen.

The members of the Board are a unit in their disapproval of the employment of girls behind the bars, although the question has not been taken up definitely.

"Any man can understand why it is not advisable," said Mr. Ayearst.

"They tried it in Saskatchewan and found it necessary to put a stop to it."

Whatever doubts the City Solicitor of Toronto has about the intent of the Act in regard to restaurant licenses for non-standard hotels, it is not shared by the Board. Mr. Dingman stated emphatically that the Board proposed to protect standard hotels and will take action to prevent non-standard hotels getting municipal licenses to sell soft drinks, cigars, tobacco, etc., and generally operate a restaurant or cafe business.

WOULD TURN KRUPPS GREEN WITH ENVY

New York, September 23. — The British are manufacturing new war inventions "which would turn the Krupps green with envy," according to Dr. Benjamin Rand of Harvard Univeraity, who returned from a visit to England on the steamship Andania. Accorded privileges of inspection by the British Foreign Office, Dr. Rand said he visited munition and ordnance factories and saw "some astounding inventions," but that he was pledged not to disclose their nature. He found among every class, he said, an intense determination to do all possible to win the war. In one factory he saw 7,000 women at work uniformed in khaki. New factories were being built, he said, and existing ones constantly extended.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentry, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LICENSE INSPECTOR OF NORTH ESSEX IS RILED AT DISMISSAL

Windsor, Sept. 23.—Announcement was made here to-day of the appointment of M. E. Mousseau of Belle River, a prominent member of the Conservative party and one of the county auditors, to be the license inspector for the district of North Essex and Windsor, which have been merged as a result of the new temperance legislation. Mr. Mousseau will succeed Inspectors Paul Morand of North Essex, and Gaspard Pacaud of Windsor, who will be asked to send in their resignations to the government.

The ousting of Inspector Morand came as a great surprise to the Conservatives of the county owing to his strong party connection. The dismissal of Inspector Pacaud was made it is said because of his refusal to give up his work as notary public and insurance agent as required by the section of the new act, which says the inspectors shall devote their entire time to the performance of their duties.

Inspector Mousseau will resign his post as county auditor at once, and will remove to this city. His salary will be $1,800 a year. Morand and Pacaud each received $1,200.

Speaking of the dismissal, Inspector Morand declared he would demand of the Government a valid reason for being removed from office. He has not yet received official notification of the appointment of his successor.

VERSES THAT ARE FITTING

The following verses are used in All Saints' church at the close of the evening services, and are particularly fitting during this world strife.

The tune used is "Mansfield," usually sung to Rev. S. Baring Gould's well known hymn. "On the Resurrection Morning":

Ere we leave Thy house, O Father
For our nation we would plead
Guard our soldiers, God of Armies,
In their need.

Spare our sailors in their perils
Monarch of the mighty deep
Safely guard them, Holy Pilot, Safely keep.

Grant to victor and to vanquished
When their earthly conflicts cease
Crown of blessings, loving Father
Heav'ns own peace.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ONTARIO FEDERATION OF LIBERAL CLUBS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 23.—The announcement was made to-day by the London Liberal Club of the preliminary draft of the programme for the annual meeting of the Ontario Federation of Liberal Clubs, which is to be held on Oct. 11. This is the big gathering in connection with which it has been already announced that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. N. W. Rowell, and Hon. Mr. Norris, Prime Minister of Manitoba, will be the speakers of the evening banquet.

Every deglate to the annual meeting will attend the banquet, while provision has been made for several hundred other visitors to the banquet and the latter, whether members of the club in affiliation with the Federation or not are being invited to the afternoon meeting as well.

This meeting will be held in Hyman Hall, the large auditorium of the London Liberal Club, and the programme promises to be most interesting. Following the preliminaries, which commence at 1 o'clock, three or four topics will be freely discussed by the rank and file of the Liberal party. One of the subjects to be discussed will be "Lawless Legislation" and the delegates are invited to come prepared to give instances within their cognizance of the autorratic methods of the Ontario Government. "The Public Attitude Toward Graft," and "The Patronage System" are to be discussed, while a subject that promises to arouse great interest is "Canada's Duty to Her Soldiers." The Federation executive is selecting four representative members to lead in the discussion, and all other speakers will be limited to five minutes each.

The tickets for the banquet are being sent out only where the dollar admission fee has been sent to Mr. C. C. Ferguson, secretary, at London, and these are to be accompanied by delegate badges, as a Reception committee has been appointed to make the visitors welcome. Already the application for tickets are numerous, and the accommodation of 350 seats, reserved for Liberals outside of London, is likely to be spoken for within the next week, especially as the railways are giving a round trip at a fare and a third from all places west of Toronto.

THE HARVEST THANKSGIVING

Harvest thanksgiving services will be observed in St. Luke's Church tomorrow. The church will be appropriately decorated and there will be special music at both services. The special preacher will be Rev. Professor Cosgrace, M.A., B.D., Dean of Divinity, Trinity College, Toronto.

Rivals Her Daughter In Youthful Beauty

A well-known society matron whose youthful beauty is so well preserved that she is regarded as her daughter's rival in this respect—though she does not pose as such—attributes her girlish complexion chiefly to two things. She says:

I am convinced that many cosmetics, by overloading the skin and pores, tend to age the complexion. Marcolised wax has just the opposite effect. It keeps the pores clean, permitting them to breathe and removes dead particles of cuticle which are constantly appearing and which give the complexion that aged look. Whenever my skin begins to get the least bit off-color, muddy or faded, I go to my druggist's for an ounce of marcolised wax; I apply this nightly, like cold cream, for a week or so, washing it off mornings. This is what keeps my complexion so fresh, white and velvety.

"The absence of wrinkles and flabbiness I owe to the use of a simple face bath prepared by dissolving one ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This keeps the skin 'tight' and firm."—Social Register.

Two Years' Suffering From Shot in Arm

MUCH TROUBLE CAUSED WYOMING WOMAN BY BOYS' PRANK.

Wyoming, Sept. 23.—Two years ago last July, while sitting at her door in their backyard, Mrs. Charles Luckins was accidentally shot in the arm by some neighbor boys who were throwing tin cans in the air and shooting at them 30 rods away.

It was thought the shot had not penetrated deeply, but next day the wound showed signs of poisoning and a doctor was consulted. Some four shots have been removed since then from the wound but the gathering appeared in another place.

Then later what appeared to be a shot appeared under the skin on the hand but after a couple of days it disappeared. The arm finally became painful, and it was decided to send her to the Victoria Hospital, London, and have the X-rays applied. A shot was located just below the elbow. Mrs. Luckins came back home and her doctor took her to Petrolea Hospital and operated to try and remove the cause of so much trouble. She has been 152 days in the Petrolea Hospital and three weeks in Sarnia Hospital, and has continually suffered for over two years.

ATTACKS FIANCEE GETS FATAL WOUND

AIMING AT GIRL FROM AUTOMOBILE JEALOUS MAN IS SHOT DOWN BY HER BROTHER.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 23.—Angelo Pollicio is in a hospital suffering from a bullet wound over the heart, inflicted when he attempted to shoot his sweetheart, Mary Geraga, 20 years old, from an automobile, in which he was riding on a crowded thoroughfare. It is believed that he will not survive until the morning. Pollicio's attempt to kill his fiancee, was frustrated by his brother, Rafael Geraga, with whom she was walking at the time.

Discerning Pollicio's intention, Geraga, seeing his sister's peril, drew an automatic pistol and fired at Pollicio, who dropped to the floor of the tonneau unconscious. While Pollicio's motive could not be learned it is believed that he was jealous.

The shooting took place just after six o'clock when the streets were crowded with persons hurrying from work. Geraga and his sister were walking toward their home, in Main street, when Pollicio drove alongside them. Waving a revolver above his head he was about to take aim when Geraga's bullet felled him. The shots from his weapon went wide of their mark.

CHIEF OF STAFF TO GO.

Gen. Gwatkin Unable to Get Along With Sir Sam Hughes.

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—General Gwatkin's departure from Canada, it is said, is of his own accord. He will leave as soon as the Minister of Militia returns. The chief of the general staff will return to England and the service of the War Office because of a constant friction with the Minister of Militia. General Gwatkin, it may be stated, is very close to Rideau Hall.

What brought matters to a head was the publication last May of the General Alderson letter condemning the Ross rifle, a condemnation subsequently justified by the complete abandonment of that arm. It was charged that this letter saw the light through the office of the chief of the general staff.

In view of the situation, it was intimated last summer that General Gwatkin would go back to the British service this fall. He is expected to leave in October.

New York Objects to Canadian Soldiers Returning That Way.

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.— Objections by New York immigration authorities to Canadian soldiers in uniform was reported to Ottawa to-day. It is claimed that this is a violation of the neutrality laws, but particulars are being asked for. Most of those who return from the front by way of American ports do so at their own expense. The matter is being inquired into by the superintendent of immigration.

HOW FAT FOLKS MAY BECOME THIN

By Elizabeth Thomas.

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same—lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight.

Simply go to your druggist and get some oil of orilene capsules. Take one after each meal and one before going to bed. Weigh yourself so as to know just how fast you are losing weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by the inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any large druggist can supply you, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00 postal note or money order. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1249 Montreal, Can.

sault was undertaken by an Eastern Ontario battalion against a salient in the German line some 500 yards in length. This battalion carried out its task in a manner little short of perfection. Sharp at 4.45 one afternoon in broad daylight and under an almost cloudless sky, three companies under command of Major Vanderwater sprang from their trenches and advanced steadily towards the German line. In front of them our artillery laid down an intense barrage and our men followed so closely that they were almost in the midst of their own shells. One German machine gun was still in operation, but it did not succeed in stopping the advance. Some of the enemy continued to shoot until the last moment. Thus several of our men, including two officers, were killed on the very parapet of the German trenches. But their death was avenged, for with an irresistible onrush our men poured into the enemy lines. Those of the enemy who did not immediately surrender were shot or bayoneted. Those who attempted to escape back to their support positions were shot down as they ran from hole to hole, either by a Lewis machine gun which Lieut. Douse had promptly brought into action or by our snipers. Altogether about 80 prisoners were taken and the trench was filled with German dead.

Prepare for General Assault.

This successful enterprise, depriving the enemy of a valuable observation post, straightened out our line, and carried our positions forward some two hundred yards, thus preparing the ground for the more general assault of September 15th.

In the meantime the Germans attempted several counter-attacks which were promptly repulsed. There was also a constant and at times intense artillery duel. Several cases of desertion from the German lines occurred and upon two occasions large parties of the enemy seemed to wish to come over and surrender.

Four hostile aeroplanes were brought down over our lines after aerial combats, much to the delight of the men in the trenches.

The cooperation between the infantry and the flying corps was intimate and most successful. We obtained an accurate and constant supply of aeroplane photographs and were promptly advised of any change or movement in the enemy's lines.

When observation was favourable as many as twenty of our captive balloons were visible at a time.

The Great Attack.

The morning of September 15th dawned bright and clear. There was a frosty nip to the air. Suddenly our massed artillery burst into a frenzy of activity. Shells of every calibre were hurled over the heads of the waiting infantry.

Shortly after six o'clock our battalions began their attack. Before them the artillery barrage advanced stage by stage with a remarkable precision and a great intensity of fire. In successive waves our infantry moved forward, climbing over the shell-torn ground leaping the battered trenches. Among them burst the enemy shells. The noise was terrific. Machine gun and rifle fire poured into them. Steadily they mounted the last ridge, saw Martinpuich on their right and looked over to the brick ruins and white chalk mounds of the sugar refinery and the trenches to the right and left which were to be their objective.

No sooner were the first lines of German trenches secured, than the assaulting waves pressed onwards. In their midst, moving ponderously but steadily, came several of the new armored cars. His Majesty's landship "Creme de Menthe" led the way and the effect upon our men was electrical. In vain the Germans rained a stream of bullets against the invulnerable cars but they were powerless to stop the advance.

At the Sugar Refinery.

Although our infantry were the first to reach the sugar refinery, the cars assisted materially in silencing the German machine guns and in enfilading the enemy trenches, and the deep, strongly protected dugouts of the sugar refinery. Ten officers, including a battalion commander, were made prisoners. At the same time the trenches on either flank, known to us as the "Candy" trench and the "Sugar" trench, were stormed and captured.

In this attack men from Toronto, London, Ottawa and Kingston fought side-by-side with men from Winnipeg, Regina and Vancouver, and with men of the Mounted Rifles from Eastern Canada.

Aeroplanes hovering overhead established contact with the infantry, and reported to headquarters that the whole of the objective had been secured and that patrols were being pushed forward towards Courcelette and the gun-pit road to the southeast.

So successful was this attack that the corps commander, Sir Julian Byng, decided to strike another and immediate blow at the enemy. He ordered that the village of Courcelette, together with a line of German trenches between Mouquet Farm and the north-western edge of the village, should be attacked. The manner in which these orders were carried out reflects the greatest credit upon all concerned.

By six o'clock in the evening all preparations were completed and the new attack was launched. The objective was a difficult one, including a large and strongly- fortified village on the right.

French Canadians' Gallantry.

A famous French-Canadian battalion, having as its objective the larger part of Courcellete, behaved with the greatest skill and gallantry. They stormed across the tangle of streets and trenches and ruined houses, inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy, and finally established themselves in advance of the northern and eastern edges of the village. They showed much individual enterprise in overcoming the resistance of isolated posts and in bombing the German fortified cellars and dugouts.

Brilliant Halifax Battalion.

On their left a Halifax battalion cooperated brilliantly in the capture of the rest of the village.

A Canadian light infantry battalion which has already seen long service, together with a Montreal battalion, at the same time captured the line of trenches to the west and established a strong position. Thus within little more than twelve hours the Canadians had captured the whole of the German offensive positions on a wide front to a depth of from 1,000 to 2,000 yards. This was accomplished in the face of a desperate and determined resistance, in which the Germans fought with the courage of despair.

It is an authentice fact that bodies of machine gunners were found chained and padlocked to their guns.

No sooner were the enemy positions captured than the work of consolidating them and strengthening their defences was undertaken by our engineers.

Field companies and pioneer battalions working under heavy fire accomplished marvels. Strong points were constructed and nearly 2,000 yards of communication trenches dug.

Further attacks of a more local character for the purpose of improving our positions were successfully made.

For the whole operations our losses were not disproportionate to the results achieved.

The 15th of September will ever be an historic day for Canada. Our men have won a signal victory over the enemy. They look confidently forward to others.

Westboro Fire Engine Got Lost

OTTAWA, Sept. 23. — Fire Chief Graham has sent a report of the Westboro fire which destroyed nearly $50,000 worth of property, to Fire Marshal E. P. Heaton of Toronto. The chief does not think there was anything incendiary about the origin of the fire, but it is possible that Fire Marshal Heaton will want an inquiry to be held.

Some time ago the town of Westboro decided to improve its fire fighting forces. On the advice of Chief Graham a twin tank fire engine, which it was considered would be about adequate for affording protection against fires in a town of that size was ordered. The waggon for the tanks was built and the tanks were to arrive on August 25th, but owing to the railway trouble the tanks have gone astray and have not yet been located. Had they arrived last month the heavy fire loss of Wednesday might have been averted.

Hebrews Await Rosh Hashonah And Yom Kippur

The blowing of the "Shofar," or the ram's horn, will summon all Jewish men of Peterborough next Wednesday to the ten days of penitence and praying which reach their climax on the Day of Atonement, October 7th. The services of Rosh Hashonah, or New Year, are especially solemn and will have added solemnity this year because of the sufferings being endured by the Jewish people in the war zones of Europe. Prayers in prose and verse, dwelling upon the judgments of God will be said and sung and at the close of the service the worshippers will greet each other with the wish "May you be written down for a good year."

Orthodox Jews will observe many traditional ceremonies which express the ideas and emotions of the day. In the homes fruits will be eaten, and the pious wish express "May it be Thy will to renew to us a good and sweet year." During the day orthodox Jews will go to the river, shake crumbs from their clothes and recite among other prayers the verse from Micah: "And you will cast into the depths of the sea all their sins." While orthodox Jews observe the feast for two days, September 27th and 28th this year, reform Jews return to the ancient Palestinian custom and observe but one day.

"On the New Year all the inhabitants of the earth pass before Him as sheep before a shepherd," so the Mishna refers to the significance of this day. It is a day of judgment when the sins and merits of all men are weighed by the Divine Judge. The Talmud says that in this annual New Year's judgment scene three books lie open before the Most High. In one book, the Book of Life, the names of the perfectly righteous, the sinless, are inscribed; the second book, the book of death has recorded in it the names of the utterly wicked; and the third book is for the ordinary "middle type" of men, in whose judgment is suspended through the ten days of penitence until the Day of Atonement when the decision is finally made and recorded.

Rev. Aaron Saltzman will conduct special services on that occasion.

If You Have to Work too Hard Take Iron for Your Blood Phosphorus for Your Nerves

Make you 100 per cent. stronger in 10 days.

It is the desire of every man, woman and child to feel well, eat well, digest well, look well; but you must have plenty of iron in your blood to attain this glow of happiness and youth. The moment that the blood gets thin or impure, your stomach is unable to digest your food and it passes into the bowels undigested, then your bowels are unable to take away nutriment from the undigested food and the food begins to ferment, causing indigestion, the impurities run into your kidneys soon follows liver trouble, constipation, rheumatism, etc., and your skin becomes sallow, your nerves shake, you feel tired and all worn out, you take all sorts of medicines and you find nothing does you any good. Now, what you need is iron to build up your blood and phosphorus to restore your nerves. First see how much you weigh, then go to your druggist and get some Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, and in ten days you will find you will be 100 per cent. stronger. The moment that Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is taken it is absorbed by the blood and nerves and you will notice a difference almost immediately. By putting the iron with the phosphorus you form an entirely new form of iron that will not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach nor cause constipation.

Bonised Phosphorus with iron as spoken of here does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine, nor any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. This is not a stimulant which makes you feel fine for a while, but instead it goes to the root of your trouble, builds up your blood, strengthens your nerves, giving power to digest your food and drives away all stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed in this city only at P. C. Weber's Drug Store, Charlotte street.

CELEBRATE THEIR CHINA WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. James Runnett, 523 Sherbrooke street, were at home to over forty of their friends last night on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of their wedding. A very enjoyable evening was spent in music and games, followed by a delightful luncheon at which the bride and groom of twenty years ago again received the felicitations and good wishes of their friends. Mrs. Runnett received many beautiful gifts of chinaware on this, their china anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Runnett were married twenty years ago in Portsmouth by the late Rev. F. W. Dobbs, assisted by Rev. Canon Gould, and an interesting feature of their present anniversary was the presence among their guests of five friends who had attended their nuptials.

EGGS REACHED 40 CENTS CHICKS WERE CHEAP

Eggs touched 40 cents on the market this morning, but dropped back to 38 cents and were heavy at that price. Butter held steadily around 38 cents. Mr. Sam Oke sold New Brunswick Delaware potatoes at $2.25 a bag. Duchess apples moved freely at 75 cents a bag and tomatoes were quoted at 40 and 50 cents a basket. Damson plums were 15 cents a quart. Chickens per pair were all the way from 50 cents to $1.25 and were exceptionally plentiful. As far as quality was concerned they were the feature of the market. Onions, squash, grapes and other garden products were more plentiful than at any time this season.

Peacemakers Are Sent to the Front

London, September 23.—Arrested in Berlin on a charge of seditious anti-war agitation, 130 Socialists have been forcibly impressed into military service, according to a despatch to the Wireless Press from Zurich. Though above the age limit and declared to be unfit for military service, the Socialists were turned over to the military authorities soon after their arrest. After a few weeks' drilling they were sent to the front.

BROKER SUED FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

ONE-TIME CHORUS GIRL DEMANDS $25,000 DAMAGES FROM LOUIS L. WINKLEMAN.

New York, September 23.—A motion to vacate an order for examination of the defendant to learn his assets made in the Supreme Court, revealed that Louis L. Winkleman, well-known on the curb as a broker, has been made the defendant in an action demanding $25,000 for breach of promise.

The plaintiff is Miss Theo Bell, formerly a chorus girl, who alleges that she has known the broker since she was 16 years old, and that in 1908 he promised to marry her. The petition sets forth that he failed to do so, adding also that because of an injury to her eye, for which he was responsible, she is unable to procure work on the stage.

In his answer the defendant makes general denial, adding that the plaintiff institutes the action under an assumed name and that although she has no visible means of support she owns and drives a large automobile. It is also asserted that she maintains an expensive apartment in West 46th street.

"The Bohemian Girl"

A distinguishing feature of the Aborn Opera Company's production of Balfe's masterpiece "The Bohemian Girl," which will be presented at The Grand Opera House, Thursday, Sept. 28th, in its greater pictorial presentment. Hitherto this opera has been presented in America only with the same primitive mounting with which it was presented in times when stage equipment was in its infancy and gaslight was the forerunner of electricity. It was the idea of the Messrs. Aborn to give to American theatregoers, so they announced, the greatest presentation of Balfe's splendid opera ever offered, and in realizing this they have spared nothing in the way of expenditure and effort, with the result that it has enjoyed more substantial success ever since its initial performance six years ago. With a pictorial and realistic production of the most popular of all English operas, rich with melodies that are known wherever music is known, set to a story of romance, adventure and dramatic action interpreted by one of the largest organizations on tour, they framed a combination that appealed not only to opera enthusiasts, but to theatregoers in general.

The cast this season is as noteworthy as ever, including Jeanette Wells said to be one of the most beautiful of American prima donna sopranos, as Arline, Albert Parr, one of Broadway's favourite comic opera tenors for years, as Thaddeus, Phyllis Davies, formerly contralto in the Boston Opera Company, as the Gypsy Queen, Albert Wallerstedt, the popular baritone, as the Count, Francis Tyler, the well-known basso-buffo, as the Gypsy Chief, Ralph Nicholls in his familiar characterization of Florestein and others, with Carl Burton as musical director. A large and carefully drilled chorus and corps de ballet, the Trigani Troupe of Arab acrobats and other special performers make up the big organization. Among the realistic features of the performance are the pursuit of the Gypsy Chief up the mountainside, the reproduction of an ancient street fair, a band of genuine Gypsies making and breaking camp with their picturesque caravan, trappings and various animals and the famous ballet, "The Dance of the Hours," from the opera, "La Gioconda."

MONTREAL, Sept. 23. — The Rev. Father Coutu, assistant superior-general of the Brothers of St. Viateur, Jette, Belgium, has arrived in Montreal on an official visit to the members of his order in America. Owing to the great difficulty of leaving Belgium in war time, it has taken him almost a month to reach this country.

Father Coutu says that not till the close of the war can the sufferings of the Belgian people under German domination be fully known. Only one who has seen this suffering can realize the ardent faith of the Belgians in the ultimate triumph of the Allies. Almost insurmountable difficulties had to be overcome before he was permitted to leave Brussel and official permission was only given on condition that he should return to Belgium before the close of hostilities.

Visited by Zepp.

Father Coutu left Rotterdam by the packet boat Noordam, which was forced to deviate considerably from its ordinary route. Crossing the North Sea, the ship sailed round Scotland and circled Ireland before landing at Falmouth, England. Here the ship was detained for a day while the passengers were subjected to a severe inspection.

An interesting incident coinciding in time with the last Zeppelin raid in England, occurred while the Noordam was cruising in English waters. Five Zeppelins appeared on the horizon.

One approached the ship, passed directly overhead and then circled about with the obvious intent of determining the nationality of the vessel. It finally went away, but the incident created a profound impression on the passengers because they realized that if the Noordam had been considered an enemy ship they would have been promptly attacked.

Father Coutu gives some interesting details with regard to the military government which is all powerful in Belgium. The censorship is very severe and only those newspapers which are formally authorized by the Government may be distributed. Consequently the Belgian people know little of the progress of the war in detail ,though the German officers are admitting the defeat of their armies on the western front. Father Coutu is of the opinion that the defeat of Germany will date from the battle of the Marne.

"The best soldiers in the world composed the army that marched on Paris," said Father Coutu, "and it is only necessary to see the young boys and old men who are being brought to reinforce Germanys shattered battalions to gain an idea of the state of the German Empire today."

A great number of priests have been imprisoned for nominal reasons, notably the Superior of the College of St. Michel, the director of Saint Louis' College and the cure of Notre Dame de Lourdes at Jette.

Father Coutu is a French-Canadian, born in this province. He has been director of the pupils of the college of Rigaud and of the seminary at Joliette. He went to France in 1895 to take the directorship of the Noviciate d'Oullins.

A Wrong Impression.

The Kingston Standard says: The 2nd Battalion now in France is in command of Lieut.-Col. Swift, better known all over Canada as "Dolly" Swift, and some papers in referring to the brilliant career of this battalion and the fine work they have done, and are still doing in the trenches speak of it as a "Quebec Battalion." The present commanding officer comes from Quebec, but the battalion belongs to the 3rd Military District, and was recruited and sent out from here, and is purely a Canadian unit. Ontario men in camp who have returned from the front, and who belong to the 2nd, resent the unit being credited to Quebec, simply because the commanding officer now in command of the battalion, happens to come from Quebec. He was no part of the original battalion.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22. — Private advices received in Ottawa are to the effect that the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, under command of Col. E. Jones, has been badly cut up the recent fight at Courcelette and Martinpuich. Of 36 officers it is stated four have been killed and 14 wounded. The killed include Lieut. Frank McGee, the well-known hockey player; Lieut. Brownlee. Lieut. B. K. Allen, and Lieut. Norton Taylor.

Other regiments which have been heavily cut up include the 73rd Montreal and the 87th Battalion of Montreal.

Lieut. Arthur E. Goodeve, of the Princess Patricias, son of Commissioner A. S. Goodeve, of the Railway Commission, has been killed in action. Word of his death was received from Capt. Harry T. Goodeve to-day. Lieut Goodeve was killed by the bursting of a shell over the trench on which he was at the time.

He won his commission on the field.

Lt.-Col. Johnston of the 247th Battalion, was in Havelock yesterday and met a number of representative citizens in regard to recruiting for the 247th Battalion. An organization was formed to assist in the work, with Mr. J. Sexsmith, M.P., as chairman. It will be the endeavour of the committee to raise a Havelock platoon for the 247th. Much enthusiasm was shown.

TO SPEND $100,000 ON LOCAL PLANT IN PRESENT YEAR

Mr. W. H. Denham's request that the city close Mill street, including the end of Murray street, for extensions the Quaker Oats Company have planned and are eager to get under way, was considered again by the Council last night. It was finally decided that Mayor Duffus, Ald. McIntyre and City Engineer Parsons should constitute a committee to meet Mr. Denham during the coming week asking for certain concessions, that the city be safeguarded against any indemnity claims that might arise out of the closing, that the company grant the city a right of way to a proposed bridge over the river at the end of London street, and also on the east side of the river to Hazelitt street, and that assurance be given that the company would not oppose a high level bridge over the river at Hunter street.

Mr. Denham told the Council that the company would begin on Monday alterations to its yard tracks and the building of a new spur line, and scales. The total expenditure in buildings and other expansion improvements this year would approximate $100,000. The Council would be willing to grant a new company more than the Quaker Oats Company was asking in this case, Mr. Denham remarked, at the same time referring to the moderateness of the request and the probability of reciprocal concessions from the company.

Ald. Saunders moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that the city's cement mixer be rented to the Quaker Oats company at $2.50 a day.

Newspaper Men Sent To Jail

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 23.—Edward Beck, editor of the Telegram, was sentenced to a month in jail and a fine of $500 by Judge Galt for contempt of court. Deacon was given two weeks and fined $100, and Knox Magee, one month and $500. The abode was the sequel to a very unusual report in the Winnipeg Telegram of proceedings before the Agricultural Buildings Commission. While giving evidence before this commission Hon. Robert Rogers, Dominion Minister of Public Works, criticised the Commissioner, Mr. Justice Galt. Reporting this, the Telegram, which is generally supposed to be controlled by Rogers, commented very disrespectfully on the statements and the manner of Justice Galt when debating with Mr. Rogers.

Deacon was the news editor of the Telegram and Magee is editor of the Saturday Post.

The above sentences were given for contempt when the defendants declined to answer questions regarding these articles, or to take the oath to give evidence.

CAPACITY ATTENDANCE AT GREENE RECITAL

The first of the autumn musicales at the Greene Music Co. studio last night attracted a crowd that exceeded the accommodation facilities. And the programme was a complete delight rivaling anew the charm of the Edison reproductions of world famous vocalists and instrumentalists. Mlle. Alice Verlet's soprano solo, Verdi's "Home to Our Mountains," Arthur Middleton, Albert Spaulding and others, were included in a nicely balanced programme. These recitals are free to the public and their popularity is attested by last night's capacity attendance and the numerous expressions of appreciation and pleasure.

A BUSY TWELVE HOURS FOR THE STR. "GENEVA

The "Geneva" docked at the George street wharf at ten o'clock last night with a scow load of 6,000 bushels of wheat. This shipment was collected at various wharves along the lake and river. Leaving the scow here, Capt. Harris returned to Gore's Landing last night and this morning at 6.30 o'clock set out on the Saturday market trip to the city, arriving here with one hundred passengers at 10.30 a.m.

The Rainbow brought up seventy-five.

Roumanians Attacking On Dobrudja Now

Greece May Enter War

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Sept. 23. — A despatch from Athens dated Friday, says the Greek Government is said to have telegraphed definite proposals to the Entente capitals which if accepted will mean Greece's entry into the war. If the uncertainty of relations between Greece and the Entente continues it is regarded as not improbable that Greece may declare war on Bulgaria on her own account.

MASS MEETING FOR THE BOYS

A good and profitable time is promised the boys of the city who attend the mass meeting which will be held in the Y.M.C.A. Sunday afternoon, Sept. 24th at 4.15. Mr. Joseph Wearing will be the speaker, and will give the boys a talk on the value of Bible study. Every boy between the ages of 12 and 18 will be made welcome, and a special invitation is extended to the fathers to be present. 'Come with your boys'. Good music and hearty singing.

The Junior Boys' Bible Club got off to a good start this evening. Fifteen boys enrolled in the club which means that the club will be well attended this season.

EX-ALD. J. C. ANDERSON PASSED AWAY THIS MORNING

tiring worker and ever alive to the responsibilities that were vested in the position which he held both with the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company and the Utilities Commission. His death will be a distinct loss to the community.

His Municipal Career.

The municipal career of the late ex-Alderman J. C. Anderson began in 1911, when he entered the Council as one of the two representatives from East City. He was re-elected in 1912, and continued to serve on the Council Board until the autumn of 1913, when he resigned to accept the position of accountaht in the office of the Peterborough Utilities Commission. The late ex-Alderman Anderson firmly advocated the acquisition by the city of such power privileges as would enable the community to obtain light and power at a minimum of cost. He was a thorough student of municipal affairs, and took a keen and consistent interest in all things pertaining to the welfare of the city. It was significant that he should be selected for a position of trust with the Utilities Commission following the establishment of that important body. It was a position he was well qualified to fill by reason of his long experience as an accountant with the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company, and also as a member of the municipal Council during a period when the power question was a vital issue. It came as a shock and surprise to his colleagues when it became known about a couple of months ago, that he would have to temporary relinquish his duties, on the advice of his physicians. The Commission immediately granted him three months' leave of absence. It was hoped that a prolonged vacation would enable him to regain his health and strength, and that he would be able to return to his duties at the conclusion of the three months. He only returned for a day or two when the staff of the Utilities office was somewhat depleted, due to the holiday season.

During the greater part of ex-Alderman Anderson's tenure of office as member of the City Council, he was chairman of the Finance Committee, a position which he very ably filled. He continued in this capacity until his retirement from the Council and his acceptance of the important position which he held at the time of his death.

The deceased was a Presbyterian in faith, and was also a prominent Mason. The funeral, which will be under Masonic auspices, will take place on Monday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock from the family residence, 156 Douro street. Interment in Little Lake cemetery.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Willard Ready To Defend Title

Circus Contract Expires Nov. 1st, and He Will Then Take On Any Person---Weighs Over 300 Pounds

NEW YORK, September 23.—The contract by the terms of which Jess Willard acts as the centre pole for a circus tent and does a few stunts on the side, expires on November 1, and the heavyweight champion is now prepared to talk terms for a match with any heavyweight in the world for a championship bout.

This is official, for it comes direct from Tom Jones, mouthpiece for the champion. Willard is now on the Pacific coast making his final bows as a circus man, and Jones sent this message to a sporting man of Seattle: "You are authorized to announce that Jess Willard is open for matches, as contract with circus closes soon."

Jones' telegram means that Willard is ready to receive propositions from promoters and clubs for a championship battle with any heavyweight in the world. Willard's management has hitherto ignored all offers for bouts because of the ironical contract with the show. It was specified that the champ would not enter the ring while with the circus. But the contract expires on November 1. Therefore, the heavyweight king says he is ready to arrange for another battle. And now the scramble for the big clash will begin.

Just how much time Jess, who is said to scale more than 300 pounds, will want in which to train is problematical, but the man who gets the match will be assured of being outweighed by at least 80 pounds. If Moha or Dillon is selected, they certainly will have to concede considerable weight.

TIGERS CONFIDENT OF WINNING RUGBY HONOURS

CAMP BORDEN—This spacious camp is all agog over the inter-city Rugby series between Hamilton Tigers' battalion and the All-Torontos, the first game of which takes place in Hamilton on Thanksgiving day. The Toronto and Tiger battalions talk of nothing else during their leisure time, and the interest being shown all over the camp is surprising. The consensus of opinion is that the Tigers are tackling a tough job in attempting to vanquish the pick of the many Toronto battalions, but that the famous yellow and black tribe will make it one of the most interesting games one would wish to slap an optic on.

The air is full of footballs. They commence to fly but a few minutes a letter to those in charge of the To- from their daily routine, and practices are in order until dark. Ernie Laidlaw's All-Torontos are putting in their preparatory licks not far from the Tiger camp, and the Bengals are working equally as hard. Captain Joe Wright, of the Argos, has sent the famous double blue uniforms to camp to be used by the Torontos, and in after the battalions are dismissed ronto team states that great interest is being shown in the game in Toronto and that a big crowd will be up to Hamilton for the Thanksgiving day game.

Gordon McQueen Turns Out.

The Tigers have Gordon McQueen, Tommy Stinson, Harold Rowlands, Jack Erskine and Art Evans working out on the back division. McQueen turned out on Monday. He played with the intermediates for a few years, and is a fine punt. Jack Erskine has practically recovered from his recent injury, and is working hard. He looks to be in for a fine season.

The scrimmage has always been one of the strong departments of Tiger teams. This year will be no exception. "Snooze" Ireland, George Meyers, Reg. Robins and Bill Jewell are working out in the centre of the line and showing up in fine style. Ireland and Meyers are regulars, while the other pair are practically newcomers to the senior ranks, but they shape up as quite ready to jump in and hold their own with the Toronto huskies. Coach "Yiz" Marriott is drilling the squad without a let-up, and if condition counts for anything the yellow and black will triumph.

Whichever team wins, the promise from this camp is that Hamilton football lovers will be treated to one of the finest games ever seen on the old cricket field.

Every time a man swallows a doctor's advice he has to cough up money.

A writer says that money is always seasonable. Perhaps it is merely mint sauce.

When the pot calls the kettle black it is time for the kettle to demand an investigation as to the shady ways of the pot.

Another "Iron Man" Looms On Horizon

Another "Iron Man" pitcher looms along the horizon. He is Fred M. Walker, the huge twirler for the Utica, N.Y., State League.

Walker to date has worked in something like 38 games, despite the late opening of the league. He pitched 9 games in 18 days a short while ago, and won 6 of them. Up to date he has a winning percentage, beyond the .600 mark.

SURELY A ROSE BY ANY OTHER NAME

"Those in glass houses—".

When it comes to cute front names, what do you think of this line-up, recruited from among the New York sport writers:

Hyatt Daab, Damon Runyon, Boeman Bulger, Purves Knox, Heywood Broun, Sidney Mercer, Lee Arms, Grantland Rice.

And yet those birds, ever so often, take to kidding the White Sox manager because his name is Clarence, and joke Mr. Haughton because he had the name of Percy wished upon him in his infancy.

LAWN BOWLING

The closing games of the jumble tournament are now being played. Last night the final in the primary were played off between the Pratt and Read rinks, and the final in the consolation games between the Cairns and the Moore rinks with the following results:

Pratt	0102201001—10
Read	1010002001100— 6
Moore	0001120200010— 7
Cairns	1110000301301—11

The third consolation prize has yet to be played for and the compensatory contest between Mr. Wiley and Mr. Oke.

These games, it is expected, will be played off on Monday.

The tournament fees will all be in during the next few days and the prizes will be laid aside, to be presented at the banquet on Thursday, Oct 12.

Tickets for the banquet may now be procured from the executive.

INVADERS USED GERMAN CARS.

Roumanians Entered Transylvania After Seizing Foes' Rolling Stock.

LONDON, Sept. 19. — A dispatch from a Daily News correspondent at Bucharest says:

"The Germans were beaten at their own game when the Roumanians on declaring war, crossed the Carpathians in a single night. The Germans themselves made up for the insufficiency of waggons (railway cars) for mobilization. They had sent waggons into Roumania to fetch grain. These waggons returned laden with Roumanian soldiers. As we travelled south (from Petrograd) we passed troop trains consisting almost entirely of waggons from Essen, Bremen, and other German towns.

"The fall of Tutrakan is not an incident of great importance. When the troops retired from the outer fortifications they found the Bulgarian elements in the town had murdered and tortured unarmed Roumanian ambulance attendants and doctors. When after four days, the town was finally taken, the Bulgarians massacred soldiers and inhabitants alike. Roumanian officers shot themselves rather than suffer a worse death."

AMERICAN LIVES ARE STILL IN JEOPARDY FROM SUB. ATTACKS

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 21.—By sworn testimony and by official reports the State Department now knows that American lives on the high seas are again in jeopardy from the operations of Prussian submarines, contrary to the laws of nations and of humanity.

Great clouds of debate and political warfare are being raised in Berlin to emphasize the steadfast stand of the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollwegg, against the rising tide of demand for a resumption of unrestricted submarine warfare.

Herr von Tirpitz urges and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg stands firm; the national liberal party stages a fight in Reichstag to overthrow the compunctious Chancellor, in order that the Prussians may be ruthless if only victorious.

But while these histrionic efforts proceed in Berlin, in an effort to convince "Americans how difficult a thing it is for the responsible authorities to hold off on submarine warfare and now they may perchance be compelled against their better inclinations to break their pledges to the United States, the facts are proving and have proved that the submarines are out of the leash, and that American lives are again in jeopardy regardless of the long exchange of notes between the two governments.

Even as the State Department was formulating a course of action upon the sworn testimony of American survivors from the British steamship Kelvinia to-day, an official report arrived from the American Consul General at London. Mr. Robert Skinner, stating that the lives of two more American seamen had been placed in jeopardy by a submarine attack upon the British steamship Strathtay. He had reported this vessel sunk in a previous despatch, and his message of to-day was to tell of the rescue of two American citizens from her and the fact that she was torpedoed. His report read:

Mr. Skinner's Report.

British steamship Strathtay, previously reported sunk, was torpedoed in the English Channel by a German submarine on September 6. Two American seamen on board—Wm. Wooton, No. 104 North Third street, Harrison, N.J., and Bernard Sweeney, No. 21 East twenty-third street, Bayonne, N.J. They have reported."

This preliminary report from Mr. Skinner did not allow whether the Strathtay received warning from the Prussian submarine, and so a second report was ordered from him which must be awaited before action in that case can be taken.

Immediate action, however, is to be taken in the case of the Kelvinia. American survivors from this ship—there were twentyeight Americans menaced with death in that attack—have given sworn affidavits that the ship was attacked without warning. The wake of a torpedo was clearly seen, they have stated, and then came the explosion which sent the steamship to the bottom.

These instances in which official reports and sworn testimony have been obtained are but a few of the cases informally reported and not followed up.

Passengers from the steamship Patria have reported two vessels torpedoed, one flying the Norwegian flag, in which cases the reports indicate that no warning was given. For many weeks the operations of the submarines have played an increasingly important part in the official reports. If the judgment of President Wilson upon the chance of conducting such warfare within the limits of the law be applied it is made inevitable that this situation will sooner or later—if it has not done so already—produce the proof of the broken pledge which must force the break between the Kaiser and the United States.

Mr. Wilson's Stand.

The President said:

"The use of submarines for the destruction of an enemy's commerce is of necessity, because of the very character of the vessels employed and the very methods of attack which their employment of course involves, incompatible with the principles of humanity, the long established and incontrovertible rights of neutrals and the sacred immunities of non-combatants."

Such use of the submarines is now a matter of official record and of legal evidence, in not one but many cases. No other expectation can be entertained here, it is felt, than that this must bring a break. No other interpretation can be placed upon events in Berlin than that dust is being thrown into American eyes to prepare a defence on the day that America moves to force that break. The pledges given were the same scraps of paper. A play has been made to force action against the British blockade. That is all. And a postponement of submarine warfare was ordered in the hope that President Wilson would make the predicted effort to begin peace negotiations.

But the aims which dictated the postponement of submarine warfare have now failed and so there is to be submarine warfare again. There already is submarine warfare. The U-boats are off the coast of England and in the Mediterranean.

Encourages More Notes.

The idea, or the hope, seems still to persist in Berlin that the United States can be induced in the next submarine murder to make the matter a diplomatic issue.

This, it is thought, must be the purpose directing the sham battle on the political stage at Berlin, where leading politicians and agitators are shouting themselves hoarse to shake Von Bethmann-Hollweg from his opposition to the submarine policy. What a service he renders, at the expense of political popularity at home, to the American nation in thus urging respect for their rights!

And when trouble comes will not the American nation be inclined to deal leniently with the man who has so stanchly stood against this abhorred thing? So it also is with Count von Bernstorff, Ambassador in Washington. His labours to prevent submarine warfare must gain for him a friendly audience here when he comes to plead against drastic action in the next 'crisis.'

So the defence builds up. It was urged here that the United States should take warning of what was impending when Admiral von Tripitz, subject to the command of his government, first began his propaganda for a resumption of submarine warfare in "defiance" of his government and in "opposition" to it. But no enlightening forecast in the situation was obtained. The facts are there to inform us. And the future, it seems certain, must soon show whether those facts will be dealt with upon their true meaning by the United States.

MOST PERFECT OF WAR INSTRUMENTS IS "SEVENTY-FIVE"

The most perfect, the most daintily conceived engine of human slaughter which the mind of man has ever devised, is the description that has justly been applied to the famous French "seventy-five" gun, which has been mowing down the Germans in thousands during the fight for Verdun.

Technically the "seventy-five" is a piece of French light artillery, of which the calibre—the interior diameter of the bore—is seventy-five millimetres, or approximately three inches. Its main characteristic is the system whereby an extraordinarily rapid rate of fire is obtained. Prior to its introduction the personal equation determined the rate of fire, which depended on the skill of the individual gun layer, who had to relay the weapon after each shot, owing to the movement caused by the recoil. In the "seventy-five" recoil is of no moment, as it merely serves to anchor the gun more firmly in position after each shot is fired.

HAS SECRET BUFFER.

Without going into complicated technical details, it may be explained that the recoil is absorbed by a buffer to which the gun is attached instead of to the customary axle tree. This, however, would not alone have made the "seventy-five" capable of its actual rate of fire, which depends also on the speed at which the shell fuses can be adjusted. Having solved the recoil problem, the French artillerists set themselves to invent the necessary fuse-setting device. The nature of this appliance is a secret, as is also the recoil absorber. The latter cannot be discovered if a "seventy-five" should fall into enemy hands, since the opening of the buffer causes the escape of the compressed air, and the secret lies in the exact combination of compressed air and glycerine. Hence Krupp's cannot imitate the mechanism of the gun, which as a recent writer in "Blackwood's" put it, "will blows great holes in the scenery" and is a "veritable hose" of death.

When the "seventy-five" began to approach finality it was discovered that its very excellence might in certain circumstances be a defect. The reason was that the extraordinary accuracy, combined with the rapidity of fire, resulted in a weapon which could in a couple of minutes place fifty or more shells in exactly the same spot—admirable gunnery but of no special virtue when the target is a long line of soldiers whether in open or close formation. So the artillerists, desirous of still further improving what was already the best gun in existence devised a simple form of gearing with which the "seventy-five" could simultaneously be moved through a given arc and raised or lowered as required.

MOWING FIRE.

The combination of these two movements, which the French call "mowing" and "progressive fire," means that the gunner can at the same time sweep a given area in front of him with fire and be certain of dropping his shells right on a body of moving troops, however rapidly they may be advancing or retiring. It is this combination of perfect accuracy in laying, rapidity of fire and direction of fire, which makes the "seventy-five" an unrivalled weapon.

Its effect in action can be imagined from another quotation from the article in "Blackwood" already referred to:

"As the captain finishes on a sharp word of command, each gun, being laid on an axis parrallel to its fellows, whisses off without further command a string of eight shells in two groups of four, and then ceases fire. As the last shell leaves the gun the loading number swings open the breach and stands easy—the whole process has taken exactly twenty seconds, and somewhere about two miles off, there is a patch of Mother Earth the size of Trafalgar square, every scrap of which has been so beaten by shrapnel bullets that within its area, it is mathematically accurate to say, there is no unprotected living thing."

The story used to be told as a convincing proof of the steadiness of a Cunarder famous in her day, that if a glass of water were filled to the brim and placed on the saloon table, not a drop would be spilt throughout the voyage. An even more striking degree of stability has been claimed for the "seventy-five" and French artilerists declare that if a goblet of champagne be placed on the breech-block of a gun the vessel and its contents will be intate after firing.

Incidentally the "seventy-five" reveals the superiority of French artillery organization over the German system. Improvements in German guns originate at Krupp's, which means that artillery is designed by men who will not be called upon to use it in war time. In France, on the other hand, the officer in charge of a battery, the men who fire the guns, and the men who design and manufacture the weapons are all part of the same organization.

Miss Nellie Trenwith, of Rochester, N. Y., is making a visit in the city, the guest of Mrs. J. Clancy, Rubidge street.

Private P. W. Hone, of the 201st Battalion, Camp Borden, is spending the week-end in town with his brother, Mr. Arthur D. Hone, of the Collegiate Staff.

Mr. Earl Eakins, of the staff of the Bank of Ottawa, Rideau Street Branch, Ottawa, is spending his holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Eakins, 24 Stewart street.

Miss Kate McNichol, of Brooklyn, N.Y., is renewing old acquaintances in town while the guest of her friend, Miss Agnes Murray, Parnell street.

Miss Kathleen Moher, or the Humphries Holerale stenographing staff, has returned to Toronto after spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Moher.

Messrs. R. Moher and A. Perkins have returned to Lansing, Mich, after visiting friends here and also visiting Toronto and Ottawa exhibitions. Mr. Perkins was greatly impressed with the lift lock.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Graham, Water street announce the engagement of their only daughter, Ada, to Mr. Charles Edmund Stanton, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Stanton, Millbrook, Ont. The wedding to take place very quietly early in October.

Council Mentioned Romaine St. Sewer

The likelihood of the Romaine street sewer emptying into the new Park street trunk line was mentioned at the Council meeting last night. Nothing will be done in the near future but the day of the disappearance of the pumping station and all the other members of the celebrated "white elephant" are at hand.

Continued Shortage Of Canned Goods

Crop Failures in Many Sections Are Responsible—The Market Situation

Importations of all goods from Greece and Sicily have been seriously affected by recent developments. There promises to be a scarcity of currants, nuts, etc., during the coming winter. Last year's performance may be repeated unless the grocers secure stocks of Christmas supplies well in advance. It is a certainty that all the ingredients which will be used in making the Christmas puddings this year will be unusually high in price.

The canned goods situation is still unsatisfactory, owing to a continued shortage of supplies. Crop failures in many sections are responsible for the shortages. The canned salmon situation is very similar to that of canned fruit and vegetables. There is a good demand for sugar at present. There are some hints of firming prices but the market is quiet following the recent decline in price. Potatoes are slightly easier in Quebec, but on account of the short crops it is expected that the price will rally. Nuts continue firm, on account of the difficulty in securing supplies from Europe. The slight easing in freight rates on coffee from Brazil is a hopeful sign of better shipping facilities. Molasses show an upward tendency, but there appears to be plenty of supplies. Teas are generally unchanged, but low grade teas will probably be a little easier in price. The market for pork products remains steady owing to the continued high price of hogs. Lobsters have gone up to a record price, and there have been several advances in sea and lake fish. Flour remains firm. There is an unprecedented demand for all mill-feeds. Further advances are expected on some lines of package goods made from wheat.

Reports from Western Canada are encouraging and the business outlook is brighter now than it was a month ago. Collections are good. Toronto bakers have again advanced their prices on bread and are now selling a 1 1-2 lb. loaf at 8c from the wagon to the consumer.

Scorching Words For A Deserter

Kingston Magistrate Sends 156th Man to Gaol For a Year

KINGSTON, Sept. 21—"You're a coward and you haven't a d—— bit of sand in you. I ought to send you down for two years, but I'll let you off with a year." Such were Col. Hunter's comments this morning in sentencing Private Gordon H. Martin of the 156th Battalion who was found guilty of deserting his battalion. Martin's home is at Milbrush.

"Perhaps there won't be any war when you get out, so you won't have any chance to show the white feather," added the veteran colonel.

"Give me a chance for my family's sake," pleaded Martin.

"How many have you in your family?" asked the colonel, to which Martin, between sobs, replied, that he had a wife and one child and two children belonging to his brother.

"You should have thought of your family before," said the colonel.

"And I have a mother and father too. Give me a chance for their sake and I'll go to the front and show you whether I'm yellow or not."

Yes, you've disgraced your poor old mother and father but you'll have a chance to live it down when you come out.

The evidence showed that Martin had been a very bad actor while in the army. His officers had given him many chances but he failed to appreciate them. He had absented himself without leave on numerous occasions and on his latest absence had remained away for a long while.

"I went to see my sick wife," he pleaded.

"That's what they all say. Blame it on the poor woman. You enlisted, were fed on eatables fit for a society wedding, given a good bed and treated well by your officers, whom I know are kind-hearted, conscientious men. Your wife was looked after and you got $1.10 per day for a little drill. Why, in my time we got 50 cents a day and drilled ten and twelve hours a day. I can't give you a chance, but your wife will be looked after," were the colonel's parting words.

NEW FAKE GAME AT MARMORA FAIR

The Marmora Herald says: "A young woman was arrested on Fair Day on a charge of obtaining money by false pretences. She had a large supply of patriotic buttons with which she tagged every man she met, and she represented herself in some cases as working for the Red Cross and in other cases as working for one of the Canadian Battalions. She was in the company of a young man and they claimed to be brother and sister. They were allowed their liberty by turning over the money collected to the local Patriotic Society and getting out of town.

NEW CHIEF FRENCH STAFF.

Gen. Dupert Succeeds — Has Won Fame in the War.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—General Pierre Georges Dupert has been appointed chief of the headquarters staff of the army at the Ministry of War in place of General Jean Cesar Graziani, who has retired on account of ill-health. Dupert was a colonel at the outbreak of the war and rapidly won his way to the command of an army corps.

GOOD ADVICE TO KIDNEY SUFFERERS

Sufferers from weak back, kidney trouble or rheumatism, should immediately give the attention to symptoms that is necessary in order to arrest these troubles. If you do as you should do you would immediately get a bottle of Dr. Santa's Kidney Pills, for sale at Lynch's Drug Store. If they do not help you take back the bottle and get the amount you paid.

WEDDING BELLS

McGREGOR—MEHARRY.

The marriage took place on Wednesday, September 20th, of Miss Hilda Meharry to Mr. Theodore McGregor of Michigan. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robert Pogue in the Manse of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. The couple, who were unattended, left on the afternoon train for their home in Michigan.

OBITUARY

JAMES H. HOULIHAN.

Last evening, a well-known and highly respected resident of Peterborough passed away in the person of James Houlihan. Death took place at the residence of his son, Mr. Dennis Houlihan, 93 Robinson street. Deceased was seventy-four years of age. His wife pre-deceased him eighteen years ago.

The late Mr. Houlihan is survived by five sons and four daughters, namely, John, Dennis, James, Joseph of this city, and Frank of Downeyville. The daughters are Mrs. Robert Winn of Downeyville, Mrs. B. C. Scully of Edmonton, Mrs. Forham and Annie of Toronto.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock from the residence of Mr. Dennis Houlihan to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I have read several letters in The Examiner, about the night work, and I, for another, am not pleased about the way it is done. I say, let each person have it done for himself, and punish the one that don't attend to it right. I say it is too much (40 cents) each, a month, for a working man to pay. According to the by-law it says $20.00 fine or six months in jail. I suggest, none of us paying the 40 cents and go to jail; we might as well be in jail as throwing our money away like that.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

Ratepayer.

RE TAXES FOR 1916.

Having been asked as to the reasone the county rate and 93rd Battalion rate is so high in Smith township. I beg to state that the county rate of 6 7-10 mills on the dollars, covers the general county rate, 4 1-10 mills Canadian patriotic grants, 2 44-100 mills, equivalent to government grant to schools, statutory, 14-100 of a mill.

Equalized Assessment.

The 1-4 of a mill re 93rd Battalion grant from township was levied to cover $420.00 grant, not $20.00, as appeared in a local paper.

Thanking you for space, I remain,
Yours truly,
E. M. Elliott,
County Clerk and Treasurer.

PEACEMAKERS SENT TO WAR

138 German Socialists Were Accused of Seditious Agitation.

LONDON, Sept. 21. — Arrested in Berlin on a charge of seditious anti-war agitation, 130 Socialists have been forcibly impressed into military service, according to a despatch to the Wireless Press from Zurich today. Although above the age limit and declared to be unfit for military service, the Socialists were turned over to the military authorities soon after their arrest. After a few weeks' drilling they were sent to the front.

DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Sept. 23. — Serious doubt is expressed in provincial political circles as to whether the Legislature will be prepared to respond to any request which may be made to amend the Ontario Temperance Act at the next session to make direct diliveries of liquor from a brewery or distillery warehouse to the individual consumer impossible. The constitutional difficulties in the way are stated to be insurmountable inasmuch as the British North America Act does not permit of any legislation which will place a restraint upon trade between the provinces of the Dominion.

Rally Day At St. Andrew's Church

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church will endeavour to rally all its forces to-morrow. In the afternoon there is to be an open session of the Sabbath School. Mr. Mitchell will give an address. RUSSIANS TOOK FIFTEEN HUNDRED PRISONERS

BRITISH TROOPS HAVE CROSSED THE STRUMA RIVER

FIFTEEN ZEPPELINS RAID THE EASTERN COUNTIES

Thirty-two Persons Killed and One Hundred and Sixteen Injured—Two Zeppelins of a Large Type Were Brought Down—Crew of One Were All Killed and the Crew of the Other Numbering Twenty-three Were Captured.

RETRIBUTION DEMANDED

LONDON, September 25.—Fifteen Zeppelins in a raid Saturday night dropped bombs on the Eastern Counties and the outskirts of London, killing thirty-two persons and injuring one hundred and sixteen. Two Zeppelins, which were very large and of a new type, were brought lown and destroyed. The crew of one were all killed and the crew of the other, numbering twenty-three were captured.

RETRIBUTION DEMANDED.

LONDON, September 25.—Some newspapers demand swift and severe retribution on the captured baby killers, but it is likely they will be treated as ordinary prisoners of war.

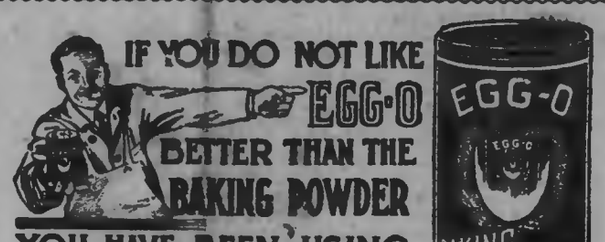
ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

LONDON, September 25.—British troops yesterday continued to improve their positions south of the Ancre. Allies' artillery destroyed ten hostile gun pits and damaged fourteen others. There was great aerial activity on all fronts. On the Somme front there were twenty-nine engagements, four enemy planes being brought down.. On other parts of the front at least fifteen more were brought down including three Fokkers. It is reported that the Allies will shortly land a big force on the Belgian coast to drive the Germans from Belgium.

IN THE BALKANS.

ATHENS, September 25.—British troops attacked strong Bulgarian forces in Greek Macedonia northwest of Florina. French troops advanced. The British forces in the Balkans have crossed the Ctruma River at three points, driving the Bulgars before them. The German War Office admits a retirement in the Balkans.

Swiss sources declare that the retreat of Von Mackensen's army in Roumania continues. Part of the army is cut off by the Russian fleet. German-Bulgarian losses are very heavy.



Military Expert Sums Up The Situation In The Balkan War Zone

Col. Repington Sees Things Favourable For the Allies on All Fronts—The Germans Are Still Fighting Well But the Dejection Has Been Marked—Gen. Sarrail's Mission—Enemy Has Not Scored a Success For Months.

THE TEUTON PLANS

LONDON, September 25.—Col. Repington, the military critic of the Times, reviewing the whole situation of the war sees things favourable for the Allies on all fronts.

"Except against Roumania the Austro-Germans and their satellites have scored no successes in many months past," he writes, "and have not retrieved any losses. West, east and south they have lost great numbers of men, and continue to lose them." He deprecates building too much upon the order from Gen. Von Falkenhayn in reference to the great wear and tear on German guns and stores of muntions. He dwells, however, upon the significance of the German fleet still avoiding battle, and the increasing effect of the blockade as reflected in German newspapers and letters found on prisoners.

FIGHT WELL, BUT DEJECTED.

"The Germans at the front are still fighting well," he adds, "but the dejection has been marked. Where the material and moral condition of the people is slowly, but steadily, deteriorating, anxieties regarding the next loan are general, and the fact that German troops have continually to be sent to all fronts to make amends for the failures of Germany's allies provokes bitter comment.

"When the veil is lifted we shall probably find that Germany has suffered far greater losses in men, money, ships, credit and material than we have any idea of, while we can be satisfied that Germany's aggressive war has brought her as much misery as her worst enemy could desire."

TEUTON PLANS.

Col. Repington writes confidently of the situation on the western, Italian and Russian fronts, though he says the accumulation of German and Turkish troops replacing the Austrians, also the approaching winter, may delay General Brussiloff. Referring to the Balkans, he writes: "The enemy's plan is to drive the Roumanians back out of Transylvania while holding the Russians in the Carpathians, to act defensively with part of the Bulgarian army at the Salonika front, to assail Roumania with German, Austrian, Turkish and Bulgarian forces on her western and southern fronts.

"The first part of this programme has been partially performed by driving back the central Roumanian army upon Vulcan Pass. The left army of Brussiloff has not yet debouched from the Carpathians, and can give no immediate help, while the two other Roumanian armies are too wide on its flanks to affect the local issue for the moment.

MACKENSEN TOO CONFIDENT.

"The Turco-Bulgar army under Mackensen was trying to break up the Russians, Serbs and Roumanians on the Dobrudja before they could complete their concentration. He was partly successful, but Maskensen spoke too hastily in claiming a decisive success and the main danger on this side is at least temporarily averted.

"The question arises whether the offensive by Gen. Sarrail's army in Macedonia will attract to itself sufficient hostile forces to precent Mackensen from aiding materially the Austro-German columns which are aiming at the Roumanian main armies in Transylvania. The German and Bulgar press say contemptuously that the Salonika army is incapable of exerting any essential influence. On the other hand, the Roumanians and the Russian-Serbs in the Dobrudja are believed to exceed greatly the Bulgars and their supporters."

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

"Hardware and Metal," Sept. 23, said:

Of the many important price changes this week the advance in the price of liquid paint is probably the most far-reaching. All white paints have advanced 20c per gallon, and colours, 10 cents per gallon. The lines affected are inside and outside ready-mixed paint, floor paint and wall paints. Changes will undoubtedly have to be made in the prices of sundries as well. The advance in price was inevitable owing to the scarcity and increased cost of raw materials, labour, containers, etc. Unless costs of materials recede in the near future, further advances may be looked for by the first of the New Year. Other hardware lines which have advanced this week are harvest tools, hay knives, scythes, sash cord, reaping hooks, axes, wrapping twine, cotton rope, pig lead. The demand for steel is as insistent as ever and the movement is gaining in momentum. Producers are now concerned with delivery problems rather than with new transactions. Canadian manufacturers of hardware lines have all the business they can handle. Many are handicapped by a scarcity of labour and raw materials. Further advances are not improbable in wire nails, boiler tubes and plates and wood screws. Collections generally are very satisfactory. Paint manufacturers have announced new terms effective October 1. The terms will be 2 per cent., 15 days, or 60 net. Those formerly in effect were 2 per cent, 30 days, or 90 days net. The advent of cooler weather has stimulated the demand for stoves and accessories, glass and all lines of fall hardware.

Twelve Barrels Whiskey Taken From Cellar of Seaforth Private House

Officers of Huron County Temperance Society Make Seizure.

SEAFORTH, Sept. 25. — Probably the largest seizure of liquor ever made in Western Ontario was made here this evening by Messers. Powell and Pellow, officers of the Huron County Temperance Alliance.

The lot consists of twelve barrels Walker's rye whisky and is said to be worth about $1,200.

Although the liquor was found in a private home the officers believe it was being stored for other than personal use. They experienced considerable difficulty in getting the large barrels out of the cellar, the shipment weighing two tons over, but finally succeeded in taking the lot to Inspector Torrance's cold storage plant at Clinton, where it will remain until the case comes up for trial.

"Young man, you give great promise," said the trust magnate. "When may we look for you?"

DISASTER HAS ENDED LAST THREE VOYAGES OF CAPTAIN BIRNIE

Crew Almost Starved and Ship Sinking When Help Arrived.

BOSTON, Sept. 25. — Capt George Birnie of the Portland schooner Lucia Porter arrived here from Gibraltar with six members of his crew aboard the steamship Cretic and reported that his vessel had been abandoned 600 miles west of Azores.

"Disaster has ended my last three voyages," Capt. Birnie said. "I began them all on Friday ,because I thought that superstition was a dream. Now I've decided I'll never sail again if I have to start on that day.'

In February the Ducia Porter was stripped of her sails and her seams opened in a storm off the Maine coast, and in May she was tossed on the beach at Swampscott, almost a wreck, and her crew taken off in a lifeboat.

After being rebuilt, the schooner sailed from St. John, N.B., on Friday, August 11, for Las Palmas with a cargo of pine, and a few days later encountered a storm. Capt. Birnie said he and his crew were forced to seek refuge on the after-deck house, and had about exhausted their limited food supply when the British tramp steamer Knight of the Garter picked them up on her voyage from Norfolk for Italy, and landed them at Gibraltar.

Former Queen of Confidence World At Sunday Meeting

Not the Footlight Billy, but the One With the Long Criminl Record.

DETROIT, Sept. 25. — Evangelist Billy Sunday insists on literal interpretation of the Billy Sunday "sawdust trail," just as he insists on literal interpretation of the devil, as a real devil, with horns and hoofs and fire and brimstone, and he compromises on no fire limits restrictions that prescribe tan-bark instead of wood sawdust for the aisles in his big tabernacle.

So, though the first batch of converts "hit the tan-bark" when they walked forth to grasp Sunday's hand, and pledge their faith and service to Christ, there was sawdust spread deep on all the aisles, ready for the penitnents to tread upon.

Sophie Lyons There.

Among those who were present in the tabernacle was Mrs. Sophia L. Burke, a woman past middle-age, clad in sombre black, but wearing many jewels.

Some years ago she was one of the most-sought women in America—by the police.

For the little woman in black and diamonds was Sophie Lyons, once known as "Queen of the Confidence World" and "The Cleverest Woman Crook in the World."

"Have you hit the trail " she was asked, as she confided her deep interest in the tabernacle meetings.

"I have not," she answered. "I am a Jewess, as you know, but 25 years ago I gave myself to the Great Jehovah. I have lived my life for Him since. I am interested in these meetings, though. I brought 80 others here this afternoon.

Billy There, Too.

"Billy is in here. I made him come with me."

"Billy" is Billy Burke—recently emerged from a prison in Sweden, after a little jewelry deal—Billy Burke, with a criminal record so long that the police of Detroit refused for years to let him stay in the city when he happened to be 'out of stir.'

While the number of converts who have "hit the trail" in the past two days has been large, perhaps 800 in all, the evangelist says he is only just getting into his stride.

BLACKMAIL EXPOSURE DUE TO LEGISLATOR

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23.—The exposure of the blackmailing syndicate which duped wealthy society men and women out of a millian dollars is the result of disclosures made by a Congressman from Pennsylvania. He was to have been taken in for $6,000. His name is being guarded by the authorities.

It is said he became acquainted with the band in Atlantic City. A party was made up, and at a fashionable cafe in the resort city the Congressman met some of the women blackmailers. He returned to his home city and some time later received a call from a stranger, who showed a Secret Service badge.

THREATENS WITH ARREST

The man told him, in detail about all his movements in Atlantic City. He added that one of the women had made a complaint, backed by affidavits made by other members of the party. By paying a certain amount he could avoid arrest

The Congressman pleaded for time to think it over, which was granted. Later he was again threatened with arrest for violation of the Mann act. He made an appointment to meet the bogus Secret Service man in Washington.

While in Washington the Congressman secretly made inquiries into the alleged charges against him. He then learned no charges had been entered. He and United States officials failed then to locate the blackmailer.

In connection with the operation of the band's headquarters here, United States agents have under surveillance the man they believe printed the "fake warrats" and stationary successfully used in the blackmail scheme. The fact that 500 warrants and nine United Etates badges were seized indicates that wholesale operations were going on.

WOMAN "STOOL PIGEON"

Ever since last June, starting at the Republican convention in Chicago, the United States authorities have been receiving weekly reports from a woman "stool pigeon" whom they placed with the blackmailers. The woman has given to the Department of Justice officials important facts about the transactions.

It was definitely established to-day that the members of the band kept in touch with one another by use of a ciper code. The code is in the hands of local United States agents and may be made public in a few days.

Further arrests are looked for. In all probability the case in which Mrs. Regina Klipper was blackmailed will be tried in New York.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Bowes Street House

How It Came by Its Repairs

By LENORE E. CHANEY

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

While Gilder bent eagerly over the quarterly report his agent sat back and watched him uneasily.

He was a big man—this agent—faultlessly dressed and bearing an air of ease and conscious well being very soothing to the senses. Faultless, too, was his manner toward his superiors—suave, deferent, but not too deferent.

Ah, that is a very great thing—to acquire a manner like that. If Gilder smiled, Burson radiated pleasure; if Gilder frowned, Burson breathed a deprecating regret, and yet he never roused the savage desire to kick that a more suppliant and cringing servant might have done.

For Burson respected himself, in a very modest and unobtrusive way, and thus begat respect in his betters. But for all that he often experienced troublesome days, and one glance at Mr. Gilder's lean face had conveyed clearly to Burson that this was going to be one of the most troublesome of them all.

"Ahem!" Gilder shut his spectacle case with a snap and glared at his agent. "I see profits far below normal again, sir. I notice in the Bowes street house alone the bill for plumbing is over $300 for the past year."

"I have been wanting to speak to you about the Bowes street place," began Burson, extracting a letter from the file at his elbow. "You see, Mr. Gilder, the Bowes street plumbing is in pretty bad condition; there's been quite a little agitation recently in some of the papers about an epidemic of typhoid down there, and this morning I got this letter from the head of the social settlement in the district."

"Lot of nonsense," was Gilder's only comment as he tossed the letter down half read.

"But you see they threaten a health board investigation."

"You ought to know as well as anybody, Burson, how little we have to fear from the board of health."

"Yes, I know they have been very kind."

"The point is what are you going to do to bring up this credit balance? At the present rate of decline another year or two may see the balance on the other side altogether," said Gilder.

Burson faced himself for a battle, though his manner was as suave, as gracious as ever.

"I am sorry to say, Mr. Gilder, that I can't see any way of stopping the leak unless you are prepared to spend a lump sum on new plumbing. In the Bowes street place alone a thousand dollars ought to be spent immediately. A great many of the tenements remain empty simply because they are not habitable, even for the sort of people who live in that section. We cannot reduce the rents without establishing a very bad precedent, and of course I could not put in any very extensive repairs without consulting you."

"Extensive repairs," ejaculated Gilder, now thoroughly aroused. "For heaven's sake, Burson, one would imagine you were letting on Fifth avenue instead of slum tenements! You are dealing with a class that has no business to expect luxuries. It's scum—plain scum, demanding new and up to date plumbing in its dens."

"Of course what you say is true," agreed Burson, "but times are changing everywhere, and I can assure you, sir, the people in the tenements now are not the sort we had there ten years ago. It grows increasingly difficult to deal with them, and in this Bowes street house especially we've had no end of trouble.

"One of my men was pitched down the steps only last week by a burly giant who declared he wouldn't pay his rent until the leak from the floor above was stopped. Of course we set him out, but it's had a very bad effect on the others, especially as the typhoid is very bad in the house, and the settlement workers have led them to believe it's entirely due to the pipes."

"More likely it's due to their own dirt and filth!" snapped Gilder, pacing wrathfully up and down. "But I look to you, Burson, to straighten this out. That's what I pay you for, and I expect you to do it."

"I have been doing my best. I intend to go down there myself this afternoon and look the house over. I am having a plumber meet me there to submit estimates."

At the word "estimates" a sudden gleam of suspicion lit in Gilder's eyes. "Estimates—graft! Ahn!"

"I think I'll just go down with you, Burson, and we'll look it over together."

Burson's dismay was evident.

"Oh, Mr. Gilder, I'm sure you wouldn't like that! You've no idea how filthy and vile the streets and people are down there. It wouldn't do at all to go in your car, in the present state of things, and I'm sure you wouldn't relish the ride on the street cars."

This served, of course, to fix the idea only the more firmly in Mr. Gilder's mind. He would certainly go; of that Burson might be certain.

Once having made the resolution he forged calmly ahead, but before he had traversed half the distance from the street car to the entrance of the Bowes street house he had begun to realise some of the difficulties of which Burson had spoken. For one thing it was hot—the middle of September—and the smells were almost overpowering.

Hawkers with cans of lukewarm water, in which floated half cooked ears of green corn, others with slices of watermelon cut in the early morning and now covered with filth and flies, were everywhere in the dusty streets.

Added to these were the roar of the not distant elevated, the screaming of innumerable babies and the shrill whistles of gangs of street gamins, making a very inferno of dirt and confusion. Gilder was glad to turn into the comparative quiet of the Bowes street house.

Once inside, Burson took the lead and began at once the tour of inspection. The house had been designed for a far better class of tenant, than now found a haven within its walls. It had originally two suits of apartments of five rooms each on either side of the narrow hall which bisected the house. But long ago these five rooms had been divided so that now they formed three suits each—two of two rooms and a single room.

The single rooms, dirty and dark as they were, found ready occupancy, for the rent was but half that of the two roomed suits. But, while nearly all of the single rooms were tenanted, many of the two room suits were empty. Gilder's reduced dividends were explained.

They were making the last rounds on the top floor when they heard a voice far below hailing Mr. Burson. The strength and assurance of it spoke eloquently of a full dinner pail.

"Ah, that must be Manders, the plumber!" exclaimed Burson, hastening toward the dark and rickety stairway. "Pardon me one moment, Mr. Gilder. I'll bring him right up."

Left to himself, Gilder started slowly toward the narrow window at the far end of the hall. Suddenly a door was flung open halfway down the hall, and the anxious face of one of the amateur nurses from the settlement peered out. At sight of Gilder her face cleared and she sprang forward.

"Oh, sir, I am so glad to see you! My patient is very sick—typhoid. I must have help. The doctor is somewhere in the building, probably with Casey's little girl on the first floor. Bring him as quick as you can." Then as she realized the blank look on Gilder's face anxiety again puckered her smooth brow.

"Oh, you don't think you can find him? What shall I do? I must—I know! You stay here—keep very quiet—he's delirous and won't notice the change. Don't excite him whatever you do!" and before Gilder could voice his protest she had pushed him through the door and sped down the hall.

Nauseated and highly indignant, Gilder looked about him.

The work of the volunteers from the settlement was apparent here, for the room was far cleaner than any Gilder had seen in the house. The patient lay on one of the settlement hospital cots, which with a desk table and one chair formed the only furniture in the room.

Gilder was a stranger to sickrooms, and a vagrant curiosity stirred him as his glance rested on the form of the sick man. In the dim light his features were barely distinguishable—his thin frame twitched restlessly under the light sheet.

Gilder half turned to go when suddenly the man sat bolt upright and stretched out his arms in the piteous appeal of childhood.

"Daddy—daddy!" he wailed. "Take me up, daddy; I am tired of my bed."

An onlooker might have seen a curious change in Mr. Gilder during this scene. At the first word from the sick man's lips he had stopped, one foot extended toward the door.

The trembling of his form grew until it was like a palsy, and the muscles of his throat moved convulsively up and down. Little beads of perspiration that were not caused by the heat stood out upon his forehead—a great pounding was in his ears. Then he turned.

"Danny—Danny!" the whisper sounded loud and rasping in the little room. "Danny—it can't be you, Danny, boy—it can't be you! It's been a long time—you've changed, Danny. But your voice—it's just the same—just the same!"

When the nurse and doctor hurried into the room a few moments later a strange sight met their eyes. Mr. Gilder, the great Mr. Gilder, whose wealth and eccentricities furnished so much copy for the Sunday supplements, was on his knees by the side of the tenement typhoid patient, and the face he turned toward them was tear stained and very old.

"Doctor—my son—he is very ill. My son—do you hear? The son of Baldwin Gilder. You must work hard—spare no expense—see how he clings to me—my poor Danny, come back to me like this! You think he will live—oh, I'm so glad—so glad!"

Some time later Burson, with his plumber in tow, appeared at the doorway, properly shocked at sight of his aristocratic patron in the midst of such surroundings, but his surprise gave place to wonder at Mr. Gilder's first words—the voice was so strangely gentle.

"Ah, Burson, I cannot go with you now. I have more important matters here. I have found my son—yes, my son—lost these ten years. I shall not leave him—he needs me. You will have to look after the plumbing yourself. And Burson—we will put new pipes throughout the house—whatever is necessary for comfort and health. Never mind the expense. You see, Burson—my son is a tenant—that is, he was a tenant—in the Bowes street house."

Enormous benefits follow the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in ever case; they are very mild, very prompt and guaranteed by the makers. Insist on getting Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box everywhere.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION!

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to such in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washings the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headache, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin out the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

As usual, plaids are seen in autumn modes. Where chiffon and Georgette crepe were used in the dresses combined with serge and velvet, plaid silk is now substituted. The general tone of the plaid must always harmonize with the colour of the taffeta, satin, or velvet. The sleeves, skirt, yoke, and underbody of the corsage are usually of the plaid silk. Block check silk is sometimes substituted for plaid.

This reservoir is as easy to clean as a pan

YOU would never put off cleaning the hot-water reservoir of the Pandora. It is such a simple thing to keep clean.

It is lined with clear white porcelain as hard as glass. And it can be lifted out as easily as you would lift a pan from the top of the range. You empty it out and wash and rinse it. The water is always as clear and pure in the reservoir as it is in the kettle.

This is only one of the many conveniences of the Pandora. The oven-door is glass. Think how often you open the door on bake days. You can watch the baking through the Pandora oven-door. The wash-boiler can be set the long way of the range, if you wish, leaving two of the hot front holes free for cooking. Wash-day dinners can be just as good as on other days.

You have heard about the Pandora, would you like to study out for yourself why so many women praise this range?

McClary's Pandora Range

You can learn why Pandora Ranges stay good as new—long after other ranges have to be repaired or replaced. You can see illustrated the many useful ideas to make cooking less tiring. These things are fully explained in an interesting little booklet, "The Magic of the Pandora." You are going to give some thought to the purchase of your range—surely. AVIATOR OVER LONDON LOOPS LOOP 23 TIMES Thrilling Evolutions for Charity Show Extraordinary Advance in Art of Flying.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Extraordinary developments in aviation under war pressure were shown in a performance given yesterday by a military airman in the neighbourhood of London for funds for war hospitals. As the story goes, Lieutenant Robinson looped the loop three times in his joy after destroying the Zeppelin L-21.

The performer yesterday began his stunt high in the air and made his big biplane do some wonderful bird-like evolutions. It was like figure skating, if you can imagine a skater turning somersaults. By way of varying his intricate patterns he dived, turned over, and shot up again. He looped the loop twenty-three times, getting lower each time until the was too near the upturned faces for nervous watchers. It was a dance in the air as quick and sure as the sportive flights of a swallow at evening.

The flight of aeroplanes over London which was once illegal, owing to fear of possible descent upon some thickly populated quarter, nowadays is no uncommon incident, and in certain districts not far from the metropolis swarms of aeroplanes of various types can be seen in the air at any time, making speed and performing evolutions thought impossible a couple of years ago.

Experts declare that when peace comes the application of aeroplanes to ordinary purposes of life will bring many surprises.

ATTACKED BY AN APE.

Wife of President of France Has Terrible Experience.

While the President of France and Mme. Poincare were taking an after-dinner stroll in the gardens of the Elysees recently, the President was summoned to read some despatches that had just come from the front. He had hardly reached his study when he heard screams from the garden, and rushing back, the President learned from Mrs. Poincare that the moment he left her she had been attacked by a 'strange being.'

While an inquiry was being made, Dr. Henri de Rothschild, who lives a few doors away from the Elysees, arrived on the scene and explained that an ape which had been sent to him had escaped from its cage and had been seen climbing over several garden walls in the direction of the Elysees.

The ape was found in a tree, but it was not until a Hindu attendant had been summoned that the animal could be induced to come down.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Manderscar, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

RISING OF THE SUN OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

"I Am the Light of the World."

Jesus Now the Light of the World only in Prospect—Sun of Righteousness Not Yet Risen—Jesus' Followers Merely Little Candles Shining in the Darkness—The World Has Striven to Quench This Light—Ignorance and Blindness the Cause—Kingdom of Satan Now Ruling—But We Are in the Early Dawn—Sun of Righteousness About to Rise.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 24.—Pastor Russell delivered a characteristic address before the I. B. S. A. Convention here today. He took for his text John 8: 12: "I am the Light of the world; he that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." He said in part:

At the time that our Lord used these words, He was the Man Christ Jesus, and had not yet become the Light of the world save in prospect. He was then the Light of the world in the same sense that He was the Saviour of the world. The ultimate result of His coming into the world would be that the world would be enlightened and saved. To this end He had become a man. To this end He died. At His First Advent our Lord came into the world to accomplish a work that would result in the world's salvation and uplift from sin and death at His Second Advent. The interim has been devoted to the selection and the preparation of a class which God has ordained to be associated with His Son in the great work for mankind to be inaugurated at the opening of the next Age.

Our Lord not only said, "I am the Light of the world," but declared to His followers "Ye are the light of the world." He pointed out the way in which they were to be lights at the present time, saying, "Men do not light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the House, but not to the world. Likewise Christ's disciples are to let their light shine to all within the Household of Faith—not to the world at large. They are not to expect, however, that their light will dispel the darkness now.

The sin, the jealousies, the misunderstandings and the pride of the Jewish rulers led them to secure the crucifixion of our Lord Jesus; and thus His light was temporarily extinguished. So it has been with His disciples all down the Gospel Age. We are not to expect that our light will now dispel the darkness; but rather, as has been the case throughout this Age, that the darkness will ever seek to quench the light.—John 3: 19-21.

Why the World is in Darkness.

The Bible tells us about two great Kingdoms; Satan's Kingdom of Darkness and Christ's Kingdom of Light. As the Scriptures declare, "Darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the people." (Isaiah 60:2.) This is because Satan's Kingdom is in power. Satan is "the prince of this Age." (John 14:30.) It is not that God made Satan to be the prince; but rather, as St. Paul explains, Satan is the god, or ruler, of this world because he is now ruling in the hearts of the children of disobedience. (2 Corinthians 4:4; Ephesians 2:2.) To-day the children of disobedience are so numerous that fully nine-tenths of the human race are under the domination of the Prince of Darkness. Many who render him service do not realize what they are doing. But "his servants ye are to whom ye render service." If people knew that they are serving Satan, things would soon be different. But they are deceived.

We are only now beginning to get out of the darkened, drunken condition in which the Bible declares that the world has been for centuries. (Revelation 17: 1-6.) The majority of mankind are still in a large measure of darkness. All of us have had more or less experience with this stupid condition of spiritual drunkenness. We are very thankful to God that we are getting awakened and sobered up, even though the majority of mankind are still serving Satan. (1 John 5:19. R.V.) This may seem a hard thing to say; but it is true.

God refuses to accept any service except that which is rendered by His sons. Consequently whoever would render acceptable service must first become a child of God by entering into a Covenant of Sacrifice with Him. (Psalm 50:5.) This we do by presenting our bodies a living sacrifice, becoming acceptable to the Father through the imputed merit of Jesus, receiving the begetting of the Holy Spirit, and thus becoming children of God, joint-heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ to all that God has promised. (Romans 2: 1, 2; 8:17.) Unless this be true of us, we are not serving God.

As we give careful heed to the Word of God and see what are the terms of service, we realise that there are very few who are serving God, who are following in the footsteps of Jesus. But we rejoice that the light is beginning to break through the darkness, and that the glorious character of our God is beginning to be understood as never before by those who are humble and teachable.

According to the words of our Lord Jesus, the Sun of Righteousness was to rise at the close of the Gospel Age and the beginning of the Millennial Age. Both the teachings of the Scriptures and the signs of the times indicate that we are now living in the day when the Sun of Righteousness is about to rise, to scatter all the mists of darkness that envelop the earth. The Bible gives us a beautiful picture of what will take place when this Sun shall have risen over all the world. All other lights will be obscured by its brilliancy. All the dark places of the world will be opened up. Every hidden thing will be manifested. The light of the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the sea.—Isaiah 11:9, Habakkuk 2:14.

Then there will be ocean-deep knowledge of God. That will be the time when the true Light will lighten every man that has come into the world. It has not come during this Age because the Church must first be selected; first, the faithful ones from amongst the Jews, and then the remainder from amongst the Gentiles. Only a "remnant" from Israel after the flesh, and only a "remnant" from Israel after the Spirit, will be of this true Church of Christ. (Isaiah 10: 20-23; Romans 9: 23-29; 11:5; Matthew 7:21-23.) It was the Divine purpose that, after the Gospel of Christ had first been presented to the Jews, God's professed people, it should then go to the Gentiles, to take out of them "a people for His name."—Acts 15: 13-18.

Tares Sown Amongst the Wheat.

In the Divine Plan the Gospel Age has been set aside for the gathering out of the faithful "Israelites indeed" from both Jews and Gentiles, to constitute the Church of Christ which is to reign with Him in His Kingdom. Our Lord Jesus tells us that when this number shall have been completed and glorified with Him, then the Kingdom will come and the Sun of Righteousness will rise to shine over all the earth. This Sun cannot rise before that time; for the Church is, with her Lord, to constitute this Sun.

In the parable of the Wheat and the Tares (Matthew 13: 36-43) is pictured the work of the Gospel Age. Our Lord Jesus and the Apostles sowed the good seed of the Kingdom. They proclaimed that the Kingdom of God was yet to be set up on the earth. After the Apostles "fell asleep" in death, Satan came and over-sowed the field with tare-seed. The tare-seed represented the false message, not the true Message of the Kingdom. The Kingdom seed brought forth the true children of God; but the tare-seed brought forth children of error—"tares."

During this Gospel Age the wheat and the tares have been growing side by side in the nominal church organization. Our Lord forewarned His followers that no attempt should be made to separate these two classes until the close of the Age—the Harvest time—when He would return and would supervise the separating work in person, though unseen, as He is now a glorious spirit being. During this Harvest time, the "wheat" would be gathered into the "garner," while the "tares" would be figuratively burned; that is, destroyed as tares. The garner into which the wheat were to be gathered represents their change in the First Resurrection. "THEN shall the righteous shine forth as THE SUN in the Kingdom of their Father." THEN will be the time when our Lord Jesus Christ will, in the fullest sense of the word, become the Light of the world. —Malachi 4:2; Matthew 13:43.

We are now in the closing days of the Gospel Age. The Harvest is nearly finished. The last members of the Bride, the Body, of Christ are now in the flesh; and their course, we believe, is nearly run. This whole Christ—Head and Body, Bridegroom and Bride— will constitute the Sun of Righteousness, the Light of the world. When this Sun shall have risen, THEN the world will see. NOW they cannot see. As the Apostle Paul says, "The god of this world [Satan] hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." This is the reason why many cannot understand the Message of Truth when it is presented to them.

But when the Sun of Righteousness arises, then all mankind will see. All the blind eyes shall be opened; all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together." (Isaiah 40:5.) What a beautiful picture the Bible places before our minds! Truly earth's coming glory will compensate for the darkness, ignorance, and superstition which for many centuries have prevailed throughout the world.

The "Children of the Light."

In the words of our text, the Master declared, "He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." His followers were to be enlightened while the world was still in darkness. The humble, teachable ones into whose minds the light of Truth shone carried in turn the light to others who were meek, who had the "ear to hear." The Truth of the Gospel, the Message of the Kingdom, gave zeal and courage to all who received it into good and honest hearts.

We read about the courage of St. Peter and St. John. After they had been illuminated by the begetting of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, they went forth to proclaim Jesus of Nazareth as the Son of God, the Messiah, who was to bless the whole world. Although they were imprisoned for preaching in Jesus' name, they continued to do so after the Lord delivered them from prison. When again called before the authorities and threatened, they answered, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye; for we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."—Acts 4: 19, 20.

The words of these faithful servants of God confounded their enemies; for although even the people noted that they were ignorant and unlearned men, still the wisdom with which the disciples spoke could not be resisted nor gainsaid. Truly the power of God was manifested in His humble, faithful children. They knew what they believed and why they believed it. Therefore the people "took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus and had learned of Him." Thus it has ever been. The Lord's promise has been abundantly fulfilled to His people—that they should not walk in darkness, but should have the light of life.

In the Truth of God's Word there is a transforming power which affects the entire life. In proportion as it is received, it gives its possessor the spirit of a sound mind. It makes him more efficient in business. It makes better husbands and fathers, better wives and mothers, better sons and daughters, better neighbors and friends. Even the worldly recognize the fact that the Lord's people have nobler ideals, better judgment, a broader outlook and kindlier sympathies than have others.

No More "Encircling Gloom" to These.

It is not sufficient that one give his heart to the Lord, and then receive the illumination of the Holy Spirit which comes at that time. The good beginning must be carried on daily, if we are to walk in the light and be transformed in character. Our Lord Jesus is to be our great Teacher; and we must go to Him continually, receiving the lessons and the blessings that come through the daily study of His Word.

When we thought, as once we did, that nearly everybody was bound for eternal torment and that probably we might go there too, it is no wonder that we did not love the Bible. But when we come to know the Lord, all that darkness begins to vanish, and the love of God begins to be shed abroad in our hearts. It is a wonderful thing to know that we may be made sharers in the great Divine Plan, that we may be made joint-heirs with Christ Jesus in His glory; to know that "if we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him," and that "if we die with Him, we shall live with Him"—as spirit beings having the Divine nature, as the Lord has promised.—2 Timothy 2: 11, 12; 2 Peter 1:4.

Cardinal Newman's beautiful hymn well expresses the doubt and uncertainty which have prevailed for centuries:

"Lead, kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
Lead Thou me on;
The night is dark, and I am far from Home;
Lead Thou me on!"

This hymn seems to touch a popular chord; for all have realized this "encircling gloom." All have realized that we need a "kindly light" to lead us. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the kindly Light that is leading His people. Through the Word of God He has been guiding His people during the dark time which has preceded the rising of the Sun of Righteousness. (2 Peter 1: 19-21.) But that Word has been neglected. The creeds and the "traditions of men" have been substituted for the Scriptures. There has been an "encircling gloom," a darkness that could be felt. The Cardinal realised that the night was dark, and that we were far from Home. He felt bewildered. He had been a Protestant; and in his search for light he had become a Catholic. Not knowing just what to believe, he said, "Lead Thou me on!"

Grave Mistake of Church Leaders.

In the attempt to separate wheat from tares, contrary to the Master's instructions, various denominations have been formed, each of which has claimed to be the Church of Christ. Each denomination has tried to console itself with the thought that its gloom was no greater than that of the others. But all of them have been in the "encircling gloom," and all have felt it. Instead of following our Lord Jesus Christ, they have followed Luther, Calvin, Knox, Wesley, and other men. We do not read that the Apostle John or the Apostle Peter or the Apostle Paul started a Church which was called after his own name. On the contrary, they denounced the spirit of division as wrong.—1 Corinthians 1: 10-13; 3: 1-7; Ephesians 4: 1-6.

Seeing, however, that we have gotten ourselves into this difficulty, the only thing for us to do is to extricate ourselves from these entanglements by obedience to the Lord. We need not fight the denominations. Let them take care of themselves. But let each true disciple of Jesus see that he follows his Master, and that he lets his light shine. Be "as wise as serpents, and as harmless as doves." The people are more or less confused in mind. They contend for their creeds; and yet, if asked, they acknowledge that they do not believe their creeds. No intelligent person to-day could believe the monstrous teachings of the creeds.

Let us be true followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the Light of the world, and will soon begin to enlighten the whole race of mankind. Soon the Church will be glorified with Him, and with Him will constitute the great Sun of Righteousness which is to rise and fill the earth with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God. Let this thought, dear brethren, inspire our hearts to faithfulness. Let us follow closely in the Master's steps; and shortly we shall receive a glorious share in the great blessings which He has promised to His faithful followers.

To us it has been a great blessing to look beyond the sea and witness the loyalty and the courage of the soldiers in the trenches and on the battle fields of Europe. If these men can so bravely lay down their lives for the kingdoms of this world, how loyal should every Christian be to the great Captain of our salvation! How much we should be willing to bear for Him and His Cause! What manner of persons ought we to be in all godliness and holiness!

THE BURDEN OF AGE.

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, sore, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of middle years have received health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They ensure the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

TO LAUNDER FINE CURTAINS.

In doing up fine curtains, the weight alone of the heavy work often tears the curtains. Try the professional cleaners' method on small pieces. Take cheese cloth that has been shrunk, or old sheets sewed together, on which carefully baste the curtains. Wash, starch and iron in the usual way. When the bastings have been drawn out the curtains will be as even as when new with very little wear on them. It saves old curtains for another season's use.

HUNS ABANDONING ALL HOPE OF TAKING VERDUN FORTRESS

(By Paul Mowrer.

Verdun Front, Sept. 22.—The battle of Verdun, which in after years doubtless will be adjudged the most terrible in the war, is apparently dying away in intermittent bursts of fury. The Crown Prince's last serious attack was on July 11. Since then he has sent reinforcements of men and guns to the Somme front and the initiative at Verdun has passed into the hands of Gen. Nivelle. Germans' sole interest at present is to maintain the dominating positions won at enormous sacrifices.

German Spirit Breaking.

While they counter-attack energetically whenever the French score a success the idea of ever taking Verdun seems to have passed from their minds, their effort to gain it is still desperate. The French are actually advancing. Their object is to retake just enough ground to make the situation absolutely secure.

Over in a Fortnight.

In another fortnight, if all goes moderately well, the tremendous seven months battle should be over. For Germany the bitterness of failure and the beginning of the end. For France the glory of unparalleled defence and the world's admiration.

French Gallantry.

Typical of the horrible warfare is the eight days' engagement in which the French, a month ago, retook the Thiaumont redoubt, only to lose it after an astounding exhibition of endurance and heroism. The attack was made by the 61st Brigade, supported on the left by the 62nd Brigade. The 61st Brigade consists of the 96th and 81st regiments of infantry. The 96th with the 61st reserve reached the field on the night of July 31. On Aug. 1 a general advance against the Fleury-Thiaumont line was begun and shattered by machine guns.

Attacked in Waves.

The 96th returned to the original position and almost immediately counter-attacked but its own machine guns saved it. By Aug. 2 the 96th were well established on a low neck of land at Froideterre, which stretching north east toward Thiaumont, merges into the large vontour of Douaumont Hill. At 2 p.m., after a fresh bombardment, the 2nd Battalion of the 96th charged in successive waves, despite losses from German machine guns hidden near Fleury, and captured the wreck of "Three-tree trench," where 100 survivors were taken and three machine guns dug from the ruins.

Germans Cut Off.

The 1st Battalion supported the 2nd. At daybreak the entire regiment once more flung itself forward into the hollow called Vine Ravine between Froideterre and Fleury. The few Germans in the hollow quickly surrendered, and even a stronger force which held the eastern lip gave up, for they were cut off by a curtain of fire. Several hundred prisoners were taken.

Being protected by the lay of the land from machine guns at Fleury the 96th began to climb the slope northward toward Thiaumont redoubt, which they captured in one dash before the few Germans surviving the French bombardment could recover from their surprise.

In Ruins of Fleury.

At the same time two companies mounted the slope eastward and succeeded in penetrating the ruins of Fleury. The heroic 96th, under cover of a demonstration on its left by a regiment of the 62nd Brigade, rapidly installed itself among broken beams, bent iron rods, German bodies and buried casements.

The Germans, now aroused to danger, prepared to retake Thiaumont at any cost. The artillery battle that followed seemed to rock the very skies with fury. That night the smoke over the hillside was so dense that signal rockets were invisible. Toward midnight German shells obliged two companies in Fleury to give ground slightly. The German infantry advancing reinstalled machine guns at daybreak and opened a vicious flanking fire from the southeast on Thiaumont redoubt which at the same time was being hard pressed from the east and north.

Germans Pressed Advantage.

At dawn the 61st found itself occupying an untenable salient into the German lines which enclosed it on three sides. The German artillery was already concentrating full strength on the redoubt. German machine guns had been advanced beyond Fleury. The first thing necessary was to remove the machine guns. Toward the middle of the afternoon the 4th and 6th companies crawled from their shell holes and rushed toward the deadly guns. The fire was so heavy the men could only drop on the rough ground and remained there under bombardment the rest of the day. At nightfall the 5th and 7th companies advanced to the relief. The 7th replaced the broken 6th and increased the gain slightly.

Germans Retired.

By morning of August 7 the surviving Germans retired, leaving the French in full possession of the Thiaumont-Fleury line. Then came the heaviest bombardment of all. The 61st, fighting against hopeless odds and attacked on three sides, held out until night when they were obliged to retire on Froideterre, carrying the remaining machine guns with them.

Eight days of astounding valour, costing hundreds of lives, under most frightful conditions thus ended in a draw.

Return to Classic Features Latest Styles in Paris

The war's effect upon Parisian styles and the marvellous transformation of taste, not only in dress, but in all matters of art, music and literature, in France, were described by several buyers for big New York firms, who arrived in New York aboard the S. S. Chicago, of the French line.

"France, beaten at Waterloo, and again in 1870, had come to allow herself to be treated with a species of superciliousness by the self-sufficient Prussians and actually permitted her classic purity of style to be poisoned by the 'kolossal ideas of these arrogant neighbors,' said one of the buyers. "The war has torn the eyes of France wide open to her own ancient glories, and even the styles in women's apparel are beginning to reflect this classic spirit by a return to the simple, common sense good taste of yore."

Another on board the Chicago, Bernard Flurscheim, junior member, and European buyer of the firm of Franklin Simon & Co., said to a Herald reporter:

"France is awakening, full force, industrially. Styles now are beginning to reflect the sober thoughtfulness of the nation—the calm confidence with which it is awaiting the final victory in the war.

(WAR COSTUMES ADAPTED).

"The war, too, shows its influence upon style in the adaptation of allied military costumes to the modiste's art. Blouses are Russian and are worn outside the skirt. Suits are the long Russian belted coats with loads of embroidery.

"The Serbian hat with its one emblem on the square front has also become the rage in Paris. But notwithstanding this foreign touch, the French women feel a kind of reluctance to dress ornately for the public gaze when so many men are at the front giving their lives for the country. Of course one will always find great splendor of costumes at dressmakers and tea parties where an element gathers which will never dispense with all that is lavish in style. But they are few compared with the great majority of truly stylish women who are wearing simple, sober outward garbs.

"However, as a set off to this simplicity of style, the lingerie has gone to the other extreme. Never before has there been lingerie more ornate or extravagant.

"A novelty which every woman carries is a 'mirror des tranches' — a trench mirror—made of a square piece of metal polished like glass, and carried in a little leather case. They were first sent to the soldiers, who used them to shave by; and now they have become a feature of fashion.

Beaded bags, too, are growing to be more and more the rage. Their wonderful combinations of colors and beautiful designs copied from antique bags of the time of Louis XV., make them the one bright spot in the streets of Paris."

"GERMAN POISON GONE."

Another who arrived here on board the Chicago was a European representative of John Wannamaker. He said:

"If there were any proof needed of the determination of France to get rid of the German incubus once for all, nothing could be more conclusive than the change which has taken place in regard to the taste in styles. This change affects styles not only of dress but of everything into which the element of art enters. France wants no more of the German poison which had long been raising havoc with the fine classic taste that made Paris the centre and fountain head of fashion ever since the Renaissance.

"This return to the old classic, sober, French styles is only in its infancy yet. The German idea, which lays so much stress upon all that is 'kolossal,' with a 'k' has long been infecting with its poison every department of art. But by the time the war is ended Paris will have reasserted her mental independence and will once more be the undisputed pattern of all that is beautiful in dress as well as in all other arts. There will be no more grotesque effects; nothing to offend the eye. Common sense and good taste will once more be the dominant notes in all that pertains to the dressmaker's and the milliner's art."

MET "LITTLE ALICE" AGAIN

Mrs. Alice Cary Risley of Jefferson City Was War Nurse.

"Why, it's little Alice!"

A gray-haired grizzled Missouri veteran shook the hand of a little gray-haired woman, at the G. A. R. encampment at Kansas City, and they talked of old times. The little woman was Mrs. Alice Cary Risley of Jefferson City, Mo., president of the National Association or Army Nurses of the Civil War. The veteran was one of her former patients.

At the outbreak of the Civil War Mrs. Risley was Alice Cary Farmer, who lived with her parents at Newberry, on the Bayou Teche, in Louisiana. Her parents were from Massachusetts and were suspected as spies. Her father made his escape to New Orleans after its capture by General Butler. Twice Mrs. Risley and her mother attempted to leave their home and a mob gathered to hang her mother. Finally they escaped by the underground railroad, famous in war times, to New Orleans. They were on the Mississippi River two days and two nights in a skiff, with only two raw sweet

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S CORSET COVER OR BRASSIERE

By Anabel Worthington

The front fastening brassiere is in greatest demand this season; especially to those who are inclined to stoutness does it mean decided comfort. With the front fastening the flesh is drawn from the underarms; that is a big feature.

In the illustration a particularly good fitting model is seen; it is seamed down the centre back and has darts either side, running from waist to armhole; the neck is cut very low in back, and when made of lace over a good foundation this brassiere could be worn for evening dress occasions.

Darts on each side of the front, fitted for removable boning, aid in moulding the bust into rounded lines.

In the picture the square neck and armholes are finished with edging and a wide band of insertion is used straight across the top, continuing in unbroken line to the shoulder, so that there are no ridges or folds of material. A similar band of insertion runs parallel with this one below the bust; this adds to the attractiveness of the garment, which is reinforced where wear is greatest. Wide Cluny lace edging would be nice for an elaborate style over net; shields may be attached if desired.

The pattern No. 7912 is cut in sizes 36 to 44. To make in size 36 will require ⅝ yard 36 inch material and 2½ yards insertion, with 2½ yards edging.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

GHOULS PLOT TO ROB TOMB OF LINCOLN REVEALED

In the winter of 1876 the Chief of Police of Springfield, Ill., was told by a woman that she had overheard certain criminals plot to open the tomb of Abraham Lincoln, steal his coffin, sink it in the Sangamon River and offer its return for $200,000 ransom. Additional guards were immediately placed around the mausoleum of the martyr-President and the plot was thus frustrated for the time being.

Eight months later Patrick D. Tyrrell, of the United States Secret Service, learned of a similar plot from Lewis C. Swegles, then being used by the government detectives as a "stool pigeon" or "roper." The ransom, according to Swegles, was to be the same as before, $200,000. Certain St. Louis men, whose real names could not be determined, were said to be parties to the plot. Swegles, detailed to keep in touch with the conspirators, later reported that he had been chosen to help carry out the ghoulish work. In fact, he stated that the detail had been entrusted to him—that he had been instructed to obtain a wagon, in which the leaden casket was to be smuggled out of Springfield by relays of horses to the sand dunes of Northern Indiana. Here the martyr-President's remains were to be buried that the shifting sands might at once obliterate the wagon tracks and other surface indications of the crime.

Counterfeiter in Plot.

Swegles reported that the ghouls planned to take careful measurements of the distance between the place of burial and the nearest tree, in order that there should be no difficulty in disinterment after the ransom should be paid. A convicted counterfeiter, of a dozen aliases but generally known as Ben Boyd, and who was then serving a term in the United States Penitentiary, was said to have been selected to carry on negotiations or the ransom. Boyd's freedom, it was alleged, would be one of the conditions under which the body would be returned. That Boyd might prove to the authorities that he had accurate knowledge of the whereabouts of the corpse, it was decided that a page of some foreign newspaper was to be raggedly torn in half, one fragment being left in the Lincoln tomb, where it might be found when the body was missed, and the other being held by Boyd. He was to let it be known that he could solve the mystery if given a pardon, and to prove his claims he was to produce the missing half of the newspaper page, thus demonstrating to the authorities without doubt his connection with the affair.

Chose Election Night.

Continuous reports from Swegles indicated that he was in the close confidence of the conspirators. Early in November he warned the Secret Service men that the night of Tuesday, November 7, 1876, had been chosen for the crime, this date being that of the Hayes-Tilden election. That particular time was selected because it was believed that the excitement incident to the receiving of election returns would shield the ghouls from any possible attention. The Secret Service men planned to hide in the tomb and allow the ghouls to actually steal the body before pouncing upon them, but the dead President's son, Robert T. Lincoln, who had been taken into the confidence of the detectives, protested against their allowing the plot to proceed to the point where profane hands might actually be laid upon his father's coffin. So it was agreed that the criminals should be caught in the tomb while endeavouring to open the grave.

The detectives' accomplice, Swegles, reported that he and two of the conspirators would leave Chicago on the evening before election day, and Tyrrell, the Secret Service operative, who had unearthed the case, saw his "stool pigeon" with two determined-looking men jump aboard the Alton train, leaving Cricago at 9 p.m. With two detectives Tyrrell boarded the same express and the six men at opposite ends of the train arrived at Springfield that night.

Election day that year was dark and gloomy, and by 6 o'clock the blackness of night had fallen over the cemetery. The sarcophagus containing the body of the martyr President lay in a catacomb at the north end of a monumental structure at whose southern extremity, 175 feet distant, lay Memorial Hall. The detectives selected the hall as their hiding place. They had the promise of Swegles that at the proper psychological moment he was to leave the catacomb, presumably to fetch the horse and wagon, but on his way around the base of the hall was to come to the door of Memorial Hall and give the detectives a countersign. After hiding in Memorial Hall for two hours the detectives saw the flare of a bullseye lantern flash through the grating of the iron door leading into the outer world.

Hurried to Catacomb.

The ghouls were making an examination of the interior of the hall, but satisfied with their superficial examination, did not attempt to enter. The next moment they hurried around the base of the monument to the catacomb and again the detectives were left in the darkness.

After what seemed an interminable wait the countersign was whispered through the bars. The detectives opened the grated door and went cautiously around the hill, drawing their revolvers as they advanced. Going to the door of the catacomb they found that the staple containing the lock had been filed off and that the iron door stood ajar. Tyrrell, leading the detectives, called on whomsoever was within to surrender, but there was no answer. Finally Tyrrell led the way within the tomb. Groping about he found no one. Lighting a match he saw the sarcophagus littered to pieces and the leaden casket all ready for removal. Tools were scattered over the floor, but the ghouls had fled.

Swegles had reported that the two men who had accompanied him to the tomb were counterfeiters, known as Hughes and Mullen. After ten days Tyrrell ran these men down and had them sent to the penitentiary for a year on the charge of robbery and larceny. Their counsel charged that the Secret Service men had "framed up a job" on them in order to break up a counterfeiting conspiracy in which they were implicated.

The whole affair was fraught with mysteries which no one to this day has been able to solve.

In Pink Pajamas She Gives Policeman A Puzzled Shock

NEW YORK, Sept 23.—It is probable that when the next police examinations are held for any rank in the department there will be a question in them based upon a wild morning experienced by Policeman Zucker of the Simpson Street Station, in West Farms road. Mrs. Mildred Hogan, twenty years old, the Bronx, walked in her sleep soon after two o'clock and the police question involved ranks in confusion with the famous problem regarding the baby and the eagle.

Policeman Zucker was at 167th street when he saw a young woman walking toward him wearing a boudoir cap, a pink pajama suit and neatly tasselled pink slippers. He stood at complete attention. As the figure drew nearer he saw that the young woman had blond hair and was exceedingly pretty. He adjusted his hat, started to fold his arms, didn't reached into his coat tail pocket and obtained a handkerchief and proceeded to remove the dew from his forehead. As he replaced the handkerchief dimly the young woman passed him. She was asleep.

Now in the eighteen years of his police experience Zucker had heard many things. One of them was that a person walking and asleep might die of shock if suddenly awakened. Something had to be done and Policeman Zucker certainly did not know what was best. To turn in a call for the reserves would be ridiculous, to borrow an alarm clock would be impossible and to give the young woman an unasked two o'clock call might be fatal. There was nothing in the ordinances, status or Hoyle that could make the policeman's duty clear.

He had followed and walked around Mrs. Hogan for six blocks, when a taxicab came along. He called it very gently, lifted Mrs. Hogan into it and listened to her even breathing as they sped to the station house. As the taxicab stopped at the station door she awoke, lived on and told her name and address. Within a few moments her husband arrived with suitable clothing and Mrs. Hogan went home.

Even now Policeman Zucker may not know what to do if that same thing occurred again, but his perplexity does not quite rank with that caused by the question of the baby and the eagle, before referred to. It was a sergeant's examination many years ago. Twenty men were taking it and nineteen failed to answer the question. The twentieth answered it well.

"What would you do if, when on duty at New York Zoological Park, an eagle swooped from its cage, seized a baby from a mother's arms and flew aloft? If the eagle was shot the child would be killed by the fall."

And the single candidate answered:—

"I would burst out crying, rip out my hair and turn in my shield."

RUSSIA IS KIND TO HER PRISONERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Herbert H. D. Pierce, former Minister to Norway, returned on the Norwegian-American liner Bergensfjord. He went to Petrograd two years ago as special agent of the State Department with the rank of Minister Plenipotentiary to inspect the prison camps throughout Russia. A private car was placed at his disposal by the Czar and in this he visited many camps in Siberia.

Among all the 300,000 prisoners whom he saw Mr. Pierce said he observed not a single instance of cruelty or hardship. The German, Austrian and Turkish soldiers who were captured, he found, were treated the same as Russian soldiers with regard to food, clothing and the sanitary condition of their camps. Many of them, he noticed, seemed glad that they had been captured.

Also on board the Bergensfjord was Samuel Harper, son of the late President Harper of Chicago University and professor of European history in that institution, who found that democratic institutions were spreading in Russia. The cost of food and clothing has risen in Petrograd, he said, and meat can be eaten only on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Many Russians told him that any American enterprise started there after the war "must contain" a Russian element in the administration."

Another passenger was Dr. Moisey Bookbinder of the Wesley Memorial Hospital, Chicago, who had assisted in hospital work at Naumburg Swale, Germany. He confirms reports about the loss of confidence by the Germans as to the ultimate capture of Verdun and said that when he left 16,000 wounded men were still at the front awaiting transportation to the base hospitals.

Dr. Hans Gallusser, a Swiss electrical engineer, here to study electrically operated railroads, said hat the remaining 800 miles of Swiss railways now run by steam, including the St. Gothard tunnel through the Alps, were to be electrified.

PEARL BUTTONS SCARCE.

High Water in the Mississippi is Reported Cause.

Within the past few days the Button Manufacturers' Association of America met in convention in New York and seriously considered the advance of between 200 and 300 per cent. in the price of pearl buttons, according to quality and the kinds of buttons required. All the manufacturers of domestic or fresh-water pearl buttons in the United States were presented, and Muscatine, Iowa, the centre of the industry, had the largest delegation.

The button-makers whose homes are in the Middle West were able to tell their fellows at first hand how the unusual high waters of the Mississippi and its tributaries have made the 1916 harvest of mussels, from the shells of which the pearl buttons are cut, exceedingly small and far below the needs of the trade. The deficiency in pearl buttons represents a

Rumanians Take 6884 Prisoners

German Counter Attacks Are All Repulsed

THE RUMANIANS ASSISTED BY NEW RUSSIAN TROOPS HAVE MADE GAINS

Russians Are Reported Fighting in Southern Transylvania For the First Time---Rumanians Take 6884 Prisoners ---Fierce German Counter Attacks On Newly Won British Positions on the Somme Are Repulsed An nounces General Haig.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

BUCHAREST, September 25.—Roumanian troops have captured 6,884 prisoners on the north and northwest fronts in Transylvania, said an official statement.

Some progress was made on the north and northwestern fronts along the Danube and in Dobrudja.

Reinforced by Russian detachments, the Roumanians have halted an attempted Teutonic invasion on ther northwestern frontier and have taken the offensive at Vulcan Pass. Russian troops are now fighting in Southern Transylvania for the first time since Roumania declared war. Some Russian detachments are even reported as far west as Orsova in Dobrudja. The battle is getting violent, but the Roumanians retain the initiative.

Powerful Counter-Attacks Repulsed

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 25.—The Germans continued their powerful counter attacks against the newly captured British positions north of the Somme last night while heavy artillerying continued on the Somme front, General Haig to-day reported that the German attacks east of Courcelette last night were repulsed. It was in this sector thaat General Haig's men took half a mile of German trenches on Friday night's fighting. North of Neuve Chapelle and also north of Hulluch, the British exploded mines damaging enemy trenches.

British Warships Bombard The Coast

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 25.—British monitors and destroyers bombarded the Belgian coast on Sunday between Heyst and Bruges, according to a Reuter despatch from Flushing. A special cable to the Star Weekly on Saturday hinted that the British have in contemplation a landing on the Belgian coast near Bruges.

Berlin Admits The Loss of Zeppelins

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, September 25.—The loss of two Zeppelins in Saturday night's raid on England was officially admitted by the Admiralty to-day.

German Morale Is Becoming Weaker

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, September 25.—A correspondent at British Headquarters in France says that the recent British advances in which they straightened the line from Flers to Courcelette on the Somme front have shown that the German morale has been lowered.

"We are receiving abundant proof of the weakening of German troops," he writes. "The German prisoners ascribe this partly to the system of keeping men in trenches for long periods without relief with the result that they are completely worn out."

Early Autumn Is Hampering Manoeuvres

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

VIENNA, September 25.—Unusually early setting in of autumn in addition to hampering manoeuvres on other fronts, has caused a slowing down in operations in Transylvania and in Dobrudja, where the higher points already are covered with four feet of snow. A long lull in offensive movements is coming.

Venizelos To Head Revolutionary Party

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, September 25.—Unconfirmed despatches from Athens this afternoon reported that former-Premier Venizelos had decided to go to Saloniki to head a revolutionary movement, seeking the overthrow of King Constantine and hasten Greece's entry into the war on the side of the Allies.

Diplomatic circles here had no confirmation of the reports, but the despatches occasioned little surprise here.

Many of Venizelos' most ardent supporters have been urging him to end the situation by overthrowing the King.

Allies Successful In Balkan Fight

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, September 25.—Allied troops have won victories on practically every sector of the Macedonian front. The British troops continuing their successes on the east bank of the River Struma, made a successful attack on Jaminah. French captured a trench on the west bank of the Struma.

The Allies have pushed forward on their lift wing on the entire line in the region of the River Broda. The Serbians have reached a frontier mountain crest in heavy fighting north of Krusograd. The French carried houses in the outskirts of Petorak, and also progressed north of Florina. The Russion troops have captured the strongly fortified Hill 916.

On the Somme front violent artillery duels continued throughout last night on both sides of the river, but there were no important infantry actions on the French front.

In Hearing of Charge Against Dolly Taylor of Westwood To-day— Brother-in-law Had Buried It in Tin Box

A NORMAL INFANT

After several enlargements, the preliminary hearing of the charge against Dolly Taylor of Westwood, of "neglect to procure reasonable assistance in her delivery of a child, in consequence of which said child died during or shortly after birth," was begun before County Magistrate Langley this morning. Another charge of concealment of birth is pending.

Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution and Mr. Daniel O'Connell appeared for the defence.

Mr. John Miller of Toronto, Inspector of Police, stated that he was in Hastings on July 4th last investigating a case of child desertion. [illegible] questioned Dolly Taylor regarding this case, but she had asserted that this latter baby was not hers. She admitted a premature birth after six months pregnancy. Her brother-in-law, Andrew Magee, with whom she resided, had buried the baby.

Mr. Miller said he had interviewed McGee, who then exhumed the body from its unmarked grave on his premises. It had been wrapped in a cloth, placed in what appeared to be a bake dish of some kind without a top and the earth had been shovelled over it. To witness, Dolly Taylor had said that a doctor had not been called.

Dr. Phillip H. Huycke of Hastings, testified that he had first treated Dolly Taylor on May 29th. She came to his office late in the evening and alone, and complained of heart trouble. Dr. Huycke mentioned several evidences from which he formed the opinion that Miss Taylor had been delivered of a child some time previous. He could not say how long before it had occurred. He made no comment at the time or afterwards. He sent her home and ordered her to bed.

Witness had assisted Dr. Sweeney in the post-mortem examination of the exhumed body for report to the coroner's inquest. "We found one arm broken," Dr. Huycke continued, "but couldn't determine whether it had been broken before or after death. The scalp was lacerated. The body weighed about eight pounds and was that of a normal and full term child. We stated in the report that it had lived about three or four days."

The fact that the navel was healed, Dr. Huycke explained, indicated that the child had lived from three to five days. Had it been a "still born," this healing would not have been evident. No wound heals after death. The lungs gave evidence of having been aerated. The body had been buried about a month. Witness could not say how the infant had come to its death.

The hearing is proceeding this afternoon.

FIRST DRAFT FROM 93rd IN FRANCE FOR OVER TWO WEEKS

Detachment Crossed Over on September 7th to Reinforce the 5th C.M.R.--Rejected Men Left Camp to Sail For Canada---52nd Battery Has Safely Arrived in England --Capt. Widdifield Saw Zeppelin Raid--To-day's General Military News.

That the first draft from the 93rd Battalion is in France and that those who have been rejected as unfit for active service, including eleven youngsters, under age, are on their way home, is indicated by letters received by the Examiner to-day from members of the 93rd.

The draft left for France on Thursday, Sept. 7th. A member of the 93rd Band, in describing their departure, writes to a member of the Examiner staff as follows:

"We have sent our first draft to France. It consisted of one hundred and fifty men, mostly out of A and B Companies. They had been to the ranges, which are about seventeen miles from here, and when they came back they were picked for the 93rd's first draft to the firing line. They left Thursday morning after Col. Johnston gave them a farewell speech and after they had been inspected at brigade headquarters by Col. Moore. We played them away from the camp to the tunes of "My Little Girl," "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and "Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies." They were all happy and were not in the least downhearted. We miss them very much around the camp, as most of them were among the first to enlist in the battalion. Capt. Munro and Sergt.-Major Miller took charge of the squad until they got to France.

Band is Busy.

The same writer gives some interesting details as to the routine of camp life at Otterpool. He says: "The weather is getting more cold and damp; in fact we are getting rain nearly every day. We (the band) get up in the morning at 4.15 and get ready to play reveille, which is at 5.30. We play down a long lane which runs from the camp to the main road to Hythe. We start to play at 5.30 and quit at 6.30, so you will see that the band has a pleasant little walk before breakfast. After we put away the instruments we prepare for our nice breakfast, which is at 7. Then fall in at ten minutes to eight again, and play the battalion out on the parade ground. After playing a few marches, such as "Take Me Back to Canada," we have a couple of hours' lecture on stretcher or red cross work. We then put in a couple of hours' hard practice, quitting at 12 o'clock, and getting our dinner. We fall in again in the afternoon at 1 o'clock, and play the battalion to the parade ground and then beat it off to a good afternoon's practice, quitting at 5 o'clock. After our supper, which is at 5.15, we are through for the day as far as the band is concerned, except on some evenings, when we go on picquet duties.

I will try and give you a little information as to what the boys with the rifles are doing. They fall in for roll call at 6 a.m., and after answering their names they prepare for breakfast. They fall in again at 8, and drill until 12; get their dinner and again fall in at 1 p.m. They quit again at 5, and are through, except those who go on guard and picquet.

The writer concludes: "We have received some Examiners, and you should have seen the rush to read them. It sure is good to hear news from the home town."

Musketry a Training.

Writing from Lydd Camp to the Examiner a member of the 93rd Bugle Band says: 'We are now at a place called Lydd, sixteen miles from Otterpool. We had to walk this with full kit. Some of the fellows dropped out, but I stuck it out. We get up at 3.30, have bread and tea, and march two miles to the ranges, with all our kit on. We fire a few rounds and return at 10 a.m., for breakfast. We go back to the ranges at 3 p.m. and return at 8.30 p.m., so you will see the day is very long. The boys have made a programme of what we do at Lydd: Six hours at ranges; six hours pack drill; six hours' physical "jerks," six hours squad drill, and then we have nothing to do till the next day. Six days shalt thou labour and on the seventh have a route march and do all the odd jobs."

Cooks Are Well.

"Everything going fine over here. Lots of 'skilly' and beans. The cooks are all in fine shape. Best wishes to all" is the message Sergt. Cook Wride sends in a post card to the Examiner.

Two German Air Raiders Destroyed

British Anti-Air Craft Guns Successful in Bagging Two Big Zeppelins During Saturday Night's Spectacular Raid on England.

NO MILITARY DAMAGE

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Of twleve big Zeppelins which invaded the British Isles last night to deal death and destruction from the skies two to-day lay stark and black masses of steel and aluminum in the little village of Mangold, Essex County. They fell victims of the anti-aircraft defences of London and outlying districts.

One came down a flaming torch, as did the Zeppelin L-31, destroyed three weeks ago; while the second, disabled by gunfire, effected a landing which saved the lives of the crew who to-night are prisoners in England. The crew of the first raider died in the consuming flames of their own ship, but they were not so terribly charred as their predecessors.

This latest raider to light her own funeral way on English soil collapsed and was consumed much more quickly than the L-21. It is possible, though, that some of the men were still living when the great vessel struck the ground. The captain's body was found some distance from the wreck.

The death and burning of the first Zeppelin was witnessed by tens of thousands of London's residents, but the wounding and descent of the second raider was a matter of doubt until to-day's official statements were given out. Few details are available of this second raider's condition, but it is reliably reported that the crew surrendered to special constables.

Many who saw the shrapnel bursting like skyrockets about the invader, which subsequently caught fire, think there must have been several direct hits. Many aeroplanes were aloft and attacked the Zeppelins from all sides.

The raiders took a heavy toll of lives before their destruction, 28 persons being killed and 99 wounded in the metropolitan district of London. Two persons were killed, probably four, and 17 were wounded in the provinces. The property damage, while widely distributed, is confined for the most part to small suburban dwellings and shops, although one railway station was damaged, some empty cars being destroyed and part of the tracks torn up.

The Official Report.

The military damage inflicted was negligible, according to Sir John French's reports, which follow:

"The latest reports show that probably not more than 12 airships participated in last night's raid. Police reports from the provinces indicate that the damage done was slight. At one town in East Midlands a number of bombs were dropped and two persons were killed and 11 injured. It is feared two more bodies are buried under the ruins. In this town some damage was caused to the railway station, and about a dozen houses and shops were wrecked or damaged. A chapel and storehouse were set afire. With this exception no other casualties are reported outside of the metropolitan area. Although a large number of bombs were dropped promiscuously over the districts visited, the material damage was insignificant. A great number of the bombs fell into the sea and into open places.

"The metropolitan casualties are 17 men, 8 women and 3 children killed; 45 men, 37 women and 17 children injured. A considerable number of small dwelling-houses and shops were demolished or damaged and a number of fires were caused. Two factories sustained injury and some empty railway trucks were destroyed, and the permanent ways slightly damaged in two places.

"No reports have been received of any military damage."

The Localities Visited.

An earlier statement by Sir John said: "Fourteen or fifteen airships participated in the attack on Great Britain last night. The south-eastern eastern, east Midland counties and Lincolnshire were the principal localities visited.

Another Peterborough boy has laid down his life for the Empire. Yesterday, Mr. Walter Naish, 336 Mark street, car taker of the East City school, was notified from Ottawa, that his son, Pte. Chas. Henry Naish, Canadian infantry, is officially reported killed in action on Sept. 15th. Pte. Naish enlisted here in May of 1915, and went to Kingston with a draft from the 57th Regiment to join the 59th Battalion. When a draft from the 59th was picked to go overseas a year ago, Pte. Naish was one of those selected to go. The draft was sent to the 30th Reserve Battalion for further training and then drafted into Canadian battalions at the front. Pte. Naish had been on the firing line for some time. He was only eighteen years of age when he enlisted and his only previous military training had been a short time with the 45th Regiment. Pte. Naish was well known and popular and the news of his death will be a shock to many friends. His father, Mr. Walter Naish, is a prominent member of the Salvation Army. The family will have the sympathy of citizens generally.

Lance Corp. Kelsey.

One of the few of the original A Company, 2nd Battalion men, left on duty, Lance Corp. H. G. Kelsey, is to-day officially reported wounded. Lance Corp. Kelsey enlisted here with the 57th's first draft for overseas service and was a member of Major Ben-

THE NEW MURDER.

An appeal to German generosity or gratitude is as vain as the similar appeal of a lamb to a wolf would be. The German victims of the recent air raid, who were killed with the bringing down of their Zeppelin, sat decent burial, were laid decently away with solemn funeral rites in a pretty little church yard, near London. Though they got better than they deserved, they got what British humanity, British generosity, and British decency dictated. It was a mistaken generosity. Its chivalry was wasted on barbarians. The repetition of the Zeppelin raid on Sunday, in which thirty-two peaceful and innocent non-combatants were killed and one hundred and sixteen wounded, was the Hun answer to British generosity. This war on women and children, is not war; it is murder, of malice aforethought, wilful premeditated, ghastly murder of women and children without military object or advantage. In all the war raids of the Germans in England not one thing has been gained that was a scrap of help to Germany and her allies in waging war. On the contrary, they have been of immense damage to them. To-day, in the trenches, smashing, the Germans, are thousands of British fighting men, fighting with set teeth and unconquerable determination, bred of Zeppelin raids and the murder of women and children. Every demonstration of German barbarity, like that of Sunday, only makes the determination of Britain and the Empire more grim—stirs to new fighting heat the blood of the bulldog breed. Zeppelin raids and the murder of non-combatants, women and children, are the mad acts of the madmen the gods are making ready to destroy.

CANADA'S HALF CENTURY.

On July 1st, 1917, Canada will have completed her first half century of existence as a confederated Dominion; and it is probable that the occasion will, as it might well be, be properly celebrated. Other places in Canada are already moving in that direction; preparations for a successful celebration are afoot, and Peterborough, which leads her sister cities in so many ways, should not be behind in such a matter. Peterborough has taken a leading place in helping in the war, and surpasses in this respect, the minor cities of the province and Dominion. We take the lead in contribution for patriotic purposes, and have probably recruited more soldiers in proportion to population than any city of the Dominion, unless, possibly, some western cities. These things are not mentioned by way of boast, but to show that Peterborough has a reputation to maintain, a record to protect, and should not allow itself to be behind in the race for leadership in a proper and fitting celebration of Canada's semi-centenary. If we are to be true to ourselves in the matter, it is not too early to begin consideration and adequate preparation. Brantford has already begun, and we should not let Brantford beat us. The nine months between this and the first of July next year will, in the stirring march of events, pass rapidly.

It may be thought that the great demands of the war, which may not be over in July, 1917, contraindicate the introduction of activities in preparation for a celebration. Our activity in war matters to meet the demand upon our duty, is the very reason why we should conjoin the two events. Canada's record of the past two years is the culmination of our national achievements in the past fifty years. We have never before done anything so well worthy of approval, no matter what we have done. We have never had occasion to be so proud of Canada as at the present moment. Our soldiers in the battle lines are covering the name of Canada with a new glory. Canadian people, men and women, especially women, are giving splendid services and making sacrifices that makes Canada, a name to be proud of wherever it is spoken. At the highest point of merit for great achievement in our history, it seems to greatly appropriate that we shall celebrate fittingly and adequately the half century of national existence with such a glorious culmination.

A BLIND SEER.

There is one man in Chicago who is either competing with the Kaiser for the lying championship, or should be locked up with other lunatics. He, a Mr. Moulton, vice president of a bank, returned from a trip to Central and Western Canada was telling a pro-German journal, the Chicago Examiner, that Canada is longing for annexation to the United States. He says Canadians are "irritated" because of the draft of men to the war. There he is wrong. Of course Canada has sent a few men to fight in Europe, but they were not drafted; they went voluntarily, with the good will, with the free consent and godspeed of every Canadian, save a few whose opinion doesn't count. It must be such as these, slackers and shirkers, that must have inspired the Chicago slanderer. There is no annexation sentiment in Canada, that for the moment counts, if indeed there is any at all. Canada is well contented with her present position, and if she wanted a change of political status, she would not tie herself up with a nation whose chief spokesman declares she is too "proud to fight." Canada is proud to fight and though her disposition in this direction means much sacrifice, it is infinitely less sacrifice than it would to cast herself adrift from her great past, her splendid present, and her glorious future as a part of the British Empire. We never felt more like being ourselves than we do to-day.

In one sense the war has been a blessing—it has helped Canada find herself; helped her to know her own spirit, to realize her faults as well as her virtues, her weakness as well as her strength. Her sacrifice has shown her that money and business are not all; that honour and high ideals of freedom are the better part. We are fighting the battle of freedom, and when we shall have helped win it at so much cost, we shall be slow to throw away the treasure and forget what we have paid for it; and shall be also much slower to unite our fortunes with a nation whose government, if not its people, has forgotten the great fight for freedom it made nearly a century and a half ago. The United States has had a great history; it gained its freedom; it struck off the shackles of slavery, but has suffered other shackles to bind her. That they are gilded does not matter, except for the worse; they are no less real nor less dangerous to the liberty of her people. The Chicago dreamer, as a bank official, measures Canada by the money gauge and of course he is mistaken in his conclusions or assumptions. Canada may be spending too much money, losing too much manhood, but one thing she has not lost, nor will lose. Like Albert of Belgium, she has not lost, nor will lose, her soul. She thinks of higher things and aims at a higher goal than annexation to the United States or any other country. The Chicago man is a blind seer: if he knew the Braile typography, and put his finger a moment upon the pulse of Canada, he would learn the truth.

THE LOOPHOLES IN THE TEMPERANCE ACT.

The admission made by Chairman Flavelle of the Ontario License Commission, that private consumers can legally secure whiskey, made in Ontario, by placing the order with the Montreal agent of the distiller and that the goods can be delivered direct, reveals a nasty loophole in the new Temperance Act. Mr. Flavelle states that the legal adviser of the board has given it as his opinion that if a citizen of this province wants a case of whiskey, he may send the order to the Quebec office of an Ontario distiller and that the whiskey can be delivered direct from the distillery. The goods cannot be legally delivered by an Ontario agent of the distiller, nor can any agent in this province solicit or receive an order. This means that the distillers and brewers must advertise for business in Ontario, through their Montreal office and that the consumer must go to the trouble of sending his order there, though the order can be filled direct from the brewery or distillery in this province. This announcement reveals a weakness in the new prohibition act which may be a decided handicap to its successful operation, but it will probably result in so stimulating the prohibition movement that Quebec will be speedily brought into line with most of the other provinces and this situation corrected by the establishment of prohibition there. Or it may give impetus to the agitation for a nation-wide prohibition which would stop not only the sale of intoxicating liquors in this country, but their manufacture as well.—Brantford Expositor.

A PORTENT OF VICTORY.

Soon after the Liberal victory in British Columbia, comes the news that a Liberal candidate for the Ontario Legislature won a foot race at the Brantford Fair.—Toronto Star.

BLACK LIST RETALIATIONS ARE STRONGLY CONDEMNED

It is expected that American firms who have been blacklisted by the French and English should be angry at the loss of prospective gains; so, too, merchants, whose dealings with neutral countries have been curtailed or whose letters have been delayed, not to mention others who have been cut off from all trade with Germany. Few or none will blame them for demanding the enforcement of the letter of international law. But should they have the power to obtain their demands and dictate the policy of this country?

These malcontents are not the whole country, nor anything like it; they make but a small fraction of the population. What is the situation with regard to those of us who, with no axes to grind, respect international law, but respect international justice still more? We may sympathize with these merchants, balked of what seem to them legitimate profits, but we have other and deeper sympathies as well. We sympathize with Belgium, which we hold has been outraged; with England, for "blood is thicker than water, or should be; with France, our sister republic and old ally; and we believe that they are fighting for the cause of international justice.

We are officially neutral. We adopted neutrality because we did not think that self-interest required us to take part in the war. But neither neutrality nor self-interest requires us to stand like stocks or stones, indifferent to right and wrong. Enough has been done for neutrality; enough has been done for self-interest. The country is at peace; we are not killing or being killed. Those most in love with neutrality ought to be satisfied that the United States of America is doing nothing and saying nothing to help the cause of justice. Those who feel less warmly toward neutrality think that more than enough has been done for it.

And, now, at the instigation of a comparatively small band of profit-losers, Congress authorizes the President to take measures of retaliation—retaliation upon those countries whose whose soldiers are dying by the hundreds of thousands for the cause we consider the cause of justice. This is too much. The excuse put forward in that Congress is upholding the international law; as if international law did not depend upon international justice. The British government has asked pertinently enough, How about the invasion of Belgium? What protest did our international-loving Congress then put forward? We may talk as we please about our duty of maintaining international law; but we have no right to talk until we shall do something toward upholding international justice. The pith of the matter is that when American pockets are untouched our Government does nothing for international law; but when American pockets are untouched our insists on the letter of the law, in spite of the fact that its insistence may hinder, delay, and possibly put in doubt the righting of Belgium's wrongs, and the maintenance of the doctrine that treaties shall be kept which constitutes the Lex Imme of international law. The letter of international law killeth; the spirit of international justice giveth life.

We hear nowdays very frequently the words, "American ideals." Some of us are at a loss to know how they differ from the ideals of other nations, and our doubts are increased by uncertainty whether we should estimate "American ideals" by what America says or by what America does. If we are to accept what nations say, we shall believe that all nations pursue all noble ideals, and thereby, perhaps, fall into errors; but if we confine ourselves to what nations do we shall find definite data to go upon. Many nations set greater value on other things than money. Germany, for instance, sets greater value on ambition; Belgium on honour, France on national existence; England on Empire; Italy on her unredeemed fellow countrymen; Russia on the Slav destiny. Wha shall we say America prefers to money? What says the action of Congress—but that the United States of America is willing to put a spoke in the wheels of international justice?

Congress, however, has shifted the responsibility to the President of the United States, the successor of Washington. The President has uttered many noble words about "American ideals;" he has said they consist in service to humanity, self-sacrifice, and the like. Now that he has the power to hinder Belgium, France, England, and their allies in the painful pursuit of international justice, those of us who are not on any blacklist, as well as those who are, await with interest to see how his actions may help define "American ideals" and explain the relations between those ideals and international justice. —New York Times.

PARTY STANDING OF PROVINCES.

British Columbia completes the solid block of Provinces with Liberal Governments from Ontario to the Pacific Ocean. The Eastern Provinces are more equally divided. Ontario, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, Conservative, Quebec and Nova Scotia, Liberal. In Ontario five by-elections have been held in recent years, and all have been unfavourable to the Government, big majorities being cut down in Hamilton and Dundas, while in three constituencies formerly Conservative, the Government candidates have been defeated. Three of the Ontario contests were held before the prohibition law was passed. —Star.

SIGN OF DISTRESS.

Early in the war the German armies were the troops of the war-lord, the "Emperor of Europe." Now the Berlin despatches refer to "the front of Archduke Albrecht of Wurtemberg" and the front of "Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria." The Hohenzollerns want whatever glory war can bring, but when defeat and retreat come they are quick to hand over whatever discredit there is to their dear friends Albrecht and Rupprecht. —Star.

TO INVESTIGATE NORTHERN ONTARIO FIRE.

Mr. E. P. Heaton, Field Marshal of Ontario, left for the north country on Tuesday, Sept. 19th, to investigate the recent fire, and to report to the Government on the best means to be taken to prevent a repetition of it. He will spend about two weeks in the district and possibly take the opinions of northern residents as evidence in forming his report.

It is his opinion that many of the northern fire settlers will suffer financial loss by reason of having placed their insurance with "outlaw" or American concerns not licensed to do business in Ontario. Somewhere about $400,000 is involved in this unlicensed insurance, most of which will be paid. There is $31,000 which is doubtful.

One of the outlaw companies has offered a settlement of 40 per cent. cash and 30 per cent. a year later, making a total of 70 per cent. on the policies. Another offer is 60 per cent. cash during the first year. While the large part of the $400,000 is fairly safe, if the companies do not pay up the policyholders have no redress.—Canadian Insurance.

AN IMPOSSIBLE TRUCE.

"At least over the Quebec Bridge we can have a truce between the parties," says the Toronto News. Not at all! It is true that nobody has yet gone quite as far as Mr. Albert Sevigny went, at the time of the first disaster at the bridge, when he said: "It is the finger of God which presses down on us to punish us for the faults of the Liberal regime." But there are many of the Conservative papers who are trying to argue that the blame for that defective casting is traceable directly to the Liberal party.—Montreal Herald.

A POOR SUBSTITUTE.

The Germans are fed with stories of triumphs, but they find them a poor substitute for food.—Winnipeg Free Press.

MEANING OF IRISH NAMES.

Changes Have Come in Spelling Since Early Times.

The fact is not generally known that Ireland was the first country in modern Europe to enforce the adoption of surnames by law. The act prescribing their general use was passed more than a hundred years before the Anglo-Norman invasion, whereas surnames did not come into general use in England until the days of Queen Elizabeth, nor in Wales till late in the seventeenth century.

There are some interesting meanings attaching to the most common of Irish names. Here are a few, says Tit-Bits, with the curious changes of spelling that have come about since the names first originated.

Murphy came from O'Murphy, Morphey, and Morphew, meaning "superior"; Kelly came from O'Kelly, Kiely, Keeley, meaning "for war"; O'Connor from Connors, Conerty, meaning "helper," and Daugherty from O'Doherty, Doherty, Daughaday, meaning "destroyer." It is noticeable that all Irish names at the first stage in their history had "O'" before them, the first change consisting of dropping that "O'." It will not be necessary, therefore, to repeat the name with the "O'" before it.

Sullivan was originally Sillifant and Sullivant, meaning "quick sighted"; O'Donnell and McDonnell and all combinations of that name were Donald, Daniel, Dona, meaning "dark chief"; Moloney was O'Mulowney, Meloney, Mullany, meaning "thoughtful"; McCormack was O'Cormac, McCormac, McCormick, meaning "son of the crown"; Flynn was Flann, meaning "red"; Flannigan was Finnegan, meaning "Druid"; Boyle was Boylan, Boland, Bolan, Boylin, meaning "benign"; O'Brian was Bryan Bryant, Brines, Bryon, meaning "author"; Brady was McBrady, meaning "ship captain"; and Macaulay was O'Cawlew, McAwly, McAuly, McAuliff, Cawley, meaning "echo," or literally, "son of the rock."

Quick, Direct Results.

There is nothing to equal newspaper advertising for quick and direct results.

Watch the advertising columns and see the class of merchants and manufacturers that use this method of publicity. You will find they are the most successful in their respective lives. Many of them have tried other methods, but experience has shown them that newspaper advertising has no equal in bringing results. The reason for this is that the paper is read in the home, when the mind of the reader is in a receptive condition, and on the lookout for anything that will make life easier or more pleasant.

NEW FLEETS ARE BEING BUILT BY GREAT BRITAIN WITH ASTOUNDING SPEED

American Who Visits Clyde Shipyards Beholds Scene of Amazing Activity, With Women Working Side By Side With Men on Giant Hulls—All Other British Yards Speeded Up to Same Pitch—Gigantic Effor Not Directed Against Germany Alone, But With View to Conditions After Peace Comes—Speed ChiefRequisite in New Ships.

EFFECTS OF JUTLAND BATTLE

Glasgow. — In the midst of a great shipyard on the Clyde, nearly as big as the Brooklyn navy yard, stood a great pile of rusting junk. "What on earth is that?" I asked. "Oh, those were the engines of the ——," replied my guide. "We got them inside her, then they made some improvements in the design, so we took these out and put in new ones."

I had just inspected the ——. She is so fast that she can sail rings around any capital ship in the German navy, so powerful she can blow out of the water the most powerful Teutonic warship afloat. Eighteen months ago that ship was not even designed, at least not in anything like the shape that she is to-day. When she will be in service I do not know, but she looks about ready for business. "She will be with the fleet" one of her builders said, "less than seventeen months after the first plates were laid."

OTHER SEA MARVELS BUILDING.

There are other ships building on the Clyde faster than the fastest battle ship afloat, and at the same time more powerful than the strongest German superdreadnought known to be in existence. There are ships which I saw in various stages of completion that are faster and more powerful than the one just mentioned. The most secret details concerning these ships such as their actual maximum speeds, are secrets unknown even in the navy outside the few men to whom such matters pertain in the ordinary course of business.

A visitor to the Clyde to-day who wrote an account of what he had seen would astound the world. As one of a small group of men representing nearly every important country in the world outside Central Europe I have just seen from the decks of a little tug that chugged down the river what a great builder who stood beside me described as the greatest scene of ship building activity in the history of the world. For several miles, on the narrow stream which 50 years ago was three feet deep, and today is but a few feet wider than the length of the greatest ships built upon its banks we passed between what seemed almost a solid wall of hulls towering above us on either side.

But no man may visit the Clyde, and describe what he has seen. The visitor is warned before coming here that he will be allowed to describe precisely nothing at all, and must confine himself to an attempt to convey some idea of what the men and women workers of Britain are accomplishing without giving away any one of some hundreds of secrets—such big secrets that they fairly shout themselves at the least expert observer who passes them. "Remember," said an Admiralty censor impressively, "that a man who writes a story about the Clyde, whether any one else reads it or not, will have one most attentive reader, in the Admiralty Building in Berlin."

Our trip down the river was interrupted at several points, and, climbing ashore from the tugboat, we were shown at close range some of the most interesting types of ships, types unknown before the war. For instance, I saw a great ship of design most peculiar, torpedo proof and mine proof. She can be struck by torpedoes and mines, but when they go off they do not hurt her.

WOMEN WORK BESIDE MEN.

The biggest ships on the Clyde are being constructed in great part by women. I went into the workshops adjoining the slips where the largest warship of all is lying, and found the weaker sex perhaps in a majority among the workers. In some of the plants the women recently wore the same costume as their men comrades, including overalls, but news of this leaked out into puritanic Glasgow, even through all the walls of secrecy that surround the Clyde, and, as a member of the Beardmore firm remarked with a twinkle, "They too wear them noo." Very short skirts, and high boots, seem to be the most at present.

The heaviest work of course is all left to the men, but in great shed is entirely occupied by women and girls, the delicate work of adjustment and manipulation of machinery that does not call for muscular effort so much as quick eyes and steady nerves was being done. And well done, the shipbuilders say. No one could doubt that Britain has thrown herself heart and soul into this war who stood in that clattering plant, great cranes travelling overhead, enormous hammers descending, forges blazing, and watched those hundreds of women doing the work of men who had been called away from this most important of all war industries, to fight.

"If so can put the girls to building superdreadnoughts, they can do most anything, and we need never lack men to fight the Boches," remarked a naval officer beside me, and I assented, wondering whether the women whose work I was watching will be willing when the men come back, to return to the ribbon counter, the restaurant, or even the home with its brooms and dishpans.

Speed is the dominant note upon the Clyde. Every ship to be seen, of whatever class, is faster than builders two years ago thought possible for its class. Many cruisers of many kinds we saw building. Patrol boats of great speed, whose mission in life is to make things unhealthy for German submarines, are being turned out in batches. And wherever there appears no room for a big ship slips have been erected in which half a dozen destroyers or submarines are being built.

I counted the number of each of these types which I saw during the trip down the river. I am not sorry that the censor does not permit me to give that number, for it would arouse incredulity. I would not believe it myself if I had not made the count. And the submarines and the destroyers which are thus being turned out in batches, exactly like standardised cheap motor cars, are very different from those known before the war and appearing in the published navy lists. They are very much bigger, and more powerful, and, above all, faster.

CLYDE OUTPUT TOPS ALL GERMANY'S.

"We figure that the ship building production of the Clyde to-day is slightly greater than the maximum possible turnout of all the yards of the German Empire," I was told by a member of the John Brown firm. "And in making that statement," he added, "I am allowing liberally for wartime acceleration over the normal output in Germany."

Keeping this statement in mind, some conception of the size of the new British navy which is being silently created can be formed when it is remembered that the Clyde, though the largest shipbuilding centre in the kingdom, is by no means the only one. On the River Tyne, on the Humber, and the Mersey, and in the Tees, Hartlepool and Wear districts, ships are building, as well as in four great government dockyards. In 1914 the Clyde produced only one-quarter of the total tonage built in the country. It may be inferred, therefore, that the British are turning out at least four times as many ships as the Germans can possibly make, and there are good reasons why the proportion is probably greater than that.

In peace time, beside the narrow stream, 20 miles from the sea, the building of ships, in the great yards of Beardmore, John Brown & Co., Harlan & Wolf, and scores of smaller firms, goes on continuously, but normally the bulk of Clyde shipbuilding goes to swell the merchant marine, nearly half of which was built there.

The navy comes first on the Clyde to-day. Until recently practically no work was done during the war excepting for the navy. If the reader who has seen the Clyde imagines, however, that he can picture what is going on here by thinking of warships on the stocks instead of liners and freighters he will underestimate the rate of construction by 100 per cent., or more. For it is not only the stocks in use in peace time that to-day hold their growing burdens of steel. Ships are being built all along the banks on temporary stocks, so closely crowded together it might almost be said that in many parts of the river their number is limited only by the amount of waterfront available for launching, and when a ship does take the water, it is the custom on the Clyde to-day to commence her successor, not next month or next week, but to-day or to-morrow. An empty slip on the Clyde was something I did not see.

HAVE AFTER-WAR CONDITIONS IN MIND.

At luncheon on Clydebank, a few yards from the slip where one of the largest liners afloat was launched a few years ago, now occupied by a warship bigger than the liner, and superior to anything yet in service, the question was raised: "What does Britain want with a navy of such size?" The question is not so foolish as it sounds. Figures which had just been frankly discussed, but which I cannot give, showed conclusively that the feverish shipbuilding of the present, at least with reference to the great ships newly laid down, can have little or no reference to danger from Germany in the present war.

At the beginning of the war, the proportion of effective battle strength between Britain and Germany was as two to one but that proportion is increasing at a perfectly ridiculous rate. If the war lasts another eighteen months—I am permitted to make this statement after referring the matter to the chief naval censor—the proportion may be more like four to one, giving the German shipbuilders the benefit of every possible doubt. It is natural therefore to wonder why the strain is being kept up, for ships are expensive.

Several naval officers of high rank tackled the question. They substantially agreed and the different points made may be gathered into one statement. It is perfectly true that the margin of absolute safety against Germany has probably been reached, it was said, and if not, it certainly will be reached long before the ships now being laid down can come out. But it is the intention of the Admiralty, at the end of the war, to present before the astounded German people a fleet of such size and power that all thought of ever rivalling Britain upon the seas will vanish from the mind of Germany. Then, and then only, will it be possible to relax the building pressure. Meanwhile the navy is unhampered by Parliament since its building activities are wholly secret and it gets all the money it asks for without being forced to account for a shilling, so the political drag on building programmes with which all democratic peoples are familiar for a moment does not exist.

TO PROVE BRITISH SUPERIORITY.

It is intended, however, to produce to the world when peace comes not only an overwhelmingly big navy, but the most efficient, with the best guns and the fastest ships, as a proof of the superiority of British design and naval science over the German which shall convince even the Germans themselves that futher competition is useless. Many things seen on the Clyde were adduced as proof that this is being done.

The Clyde is known throughout Britain as the centre of labor agitation in normal times and the introduction of women and unskilled labor into exclusive unions, jealous of the rights and privileges won by bitter struggle, has naturally made trouble. Agitators have been deported, newspapers, which in the opinion of the government, were preaching disloyalty, have been suppressed. The temper of the men, however, is surprisingly good. This statement was made to me by members of shipbuilding firms not likely to be prejudiced in favor of the workmen. At the time of my visit work was going on as usual, although the day was a traditional local holiday. There are no holidays on the Clyde during the war, and work goes on day and night, weekdays and Sundays.

In view of the terrific and continuous labor on the hundreds of ships under construction, I tried to learn the hours the men and women are kept on duty. The women, I was told, regularly get one day off a week and work as a rule not more than eight and never more than eleven hours. It has not been found possible to give all the men a day off a week, and stories are told of how indispensable workmen whose absence would tie up some whole department, have worked straight through from the beginning of the war, twelve or more hours a day, with only a few days off in twenty-hour months. The working hours are unequestionably much harder than American workmen would put up with except during such a crisis as this, but the men are successfully appealed to on patriotic grounds. They know that their lot is easy compared with that of their friends on the Somme, and they know Britain must have the ships.

EFFECT OF JUTLAND BATTLE.

"It was most touching to see the effect of the battle of Jutland on the curve in my office which shows working efficiency," said the manager of one of the greatest plants. "There are always a certain number of men who get drunk, or for some other reason fail to show up for work, and naturally we have to be pretty lenient with these men, if they are skilled workmen. We cannot afford to discharge them. The charts always show, therefore, a certain falling off from the highest possible level of output.

"But one morning the men read of a fight in which we lost seventeen ships, in which it was said then, we had been defeated. That struck them hard. I saw the result next week, when the curve showing the number of hours of time lost through avoidable absence was plotted on the chart. It jumped up almost to the perfection line, and a deputation of men came to the office and said they wanted us to know that the few fellows who did not show up the morning after the battle news were too drunk to understand that Britain had lost ships which must be replaced. When they sobered up and took in the news they, too, came back. Of course the effect of such news wears off; it does not last unfortunately until the new ships are in commission. But such an incident shows that the men's hearts are right. We shall treasure that chart."

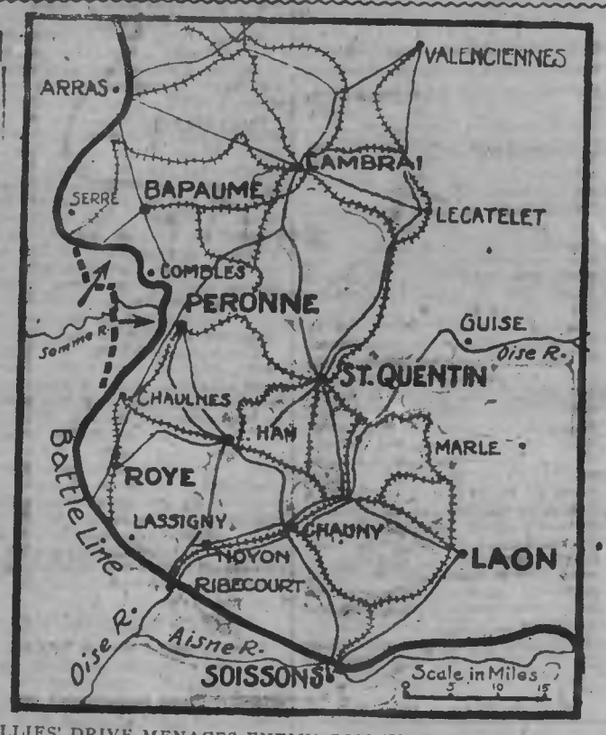
Not only warships are being built on the Clyde. Sandwiched in between I saw many great freighters which will take the places of those sunk by the Germans. The submarine campaign coupled with the highly satisfactory state of the naval building programme, have resulted in a sumption of the building of merchant ships, though not on a scale approaching the normal peace output.

SETS AMERICANS THINKING.

To an American, viewing the incredible number of warships building on the Clyde and reflecting upon his own navy, thoughts not altogether agreeable were bound to come. I am in no way qualified to offer criticism of our methods at home but feel most positive that if the British permitted the world to know what they are doing, very much more emphasis would be laid upon speed in our new ships. Above all, it is not enough to lay down ships as fast as those which appear upon the published naval lists of foreign powers. "The ships which England tells the world about are already out of date," said A. H. Pollen, the famous naval expert, in a recent conversation with me.

That remark came back to me on the Clyde, when I remembered recent discussions about some of our new battleships, to be the most powerful in the world, and some battle cruisers to be the most powerful of their class, which Congress is just now providing for. It is perhaps correct to say that these ships are the most powerful concerning which public discussion has taken place anywhere.

But the British censor has permitted me to say that I have seen British ships building which outclass American ships, the latter as yet only talked about, not laid down, and yet hailed as the biggest or most powerful or fastest ships of their class.



ALLIES' DRIVE MENACES ENEMY COMMUNICATIONS—The manner in which the Allied drive on the Somme menaces the enemy's principal communication lines is indicated on the map which shows the main roads and railways.

"You Don't Know Shell Fire Yet"

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—A news agency despatch to the Sun from London reads as follows: The big bite the French took out of the German front on Tuesday is given great prominence by the newspapers here and commented upon with great enthusiasm. "Every French success arouses immense enthusiasm in the British army and makes our men as happy as if they had done it themselves," one of the correspondents with the army in French feeling toward us is as cordial as ours toward them. I doubt if ever in history have two allies worked together with such perfect unanimity or with more ungrudging admiration each for the other's gallantry."

ONE BITTER STRUGGLE

The British operations during this French advance were comparatively small, but there was a bitter struggle eastward of Ginchy, where the British fought Bavarian troops and sent back nine officers and 160 men prisoners.

NEW BALLOON DEFENCE

The correspondents, referring to the anchored observation balloons, says the Germans have adopted a new means of defending their balloons from the British aeroplanes, which already have downed several of them. This defence is a gun below the balloon which, emits high-reaching flames to scorch the wings of an aeroplane coming too close.

THE GERMANS KNOW

The correspondent sends extracts from many letters found upon German prisoners confirming the terrors of the British artillery and severe German losses. A German officer captured at Ginchy told a British staff officer who examined him: "You don't know what shell fire is until you are in it in one of our front line dugouts."

"A DAMNABLE ENEMY"

A letter from a Prussian artilleryman says, "The Englishman is a damnable enemy. The Frenchman and Russian are not so cunning."

Letters from friends of German soldiers at home deplore the terrible German losses. One says there are 5,000 widows in Offenbach besides the unmarried men who have fallen. Others dwell upon the food shortage and the sufferings of the poor and hungry.

GERMANS AND FRESH AIR

Anybody who has ever fought for fresh air in a German railway carriage will be interested to hear that, even amid the preoccupations of war, the authorities are making an effort to solve so weighty a problem. The Berliner Tageblatt learns that hence forth in a compartment separated from other compartments by a swinging door windows may be opened only if all the passengers in the compartments consent. In other compartments any one passenger has the right to demand the opening of a window. These regulations are now printed on the windows themselves, and it is hoped that the violent arguments which have hitherto resulted from attempts to let fresh air into sitting compartments will be less frequent.

Madge—"To save time, why don't you wear your bathing suit under your street clothes?" Marjorie—"How can I, dear? It shows"—"Judge".

Little Russian Town Has Been Growing Up For More Than 500 Years

(By Stanley Washburn.)

Lutsk — Imagine a small sluggish stream winding through a meadow, curving in a great elbow around a hill on which is perched a medieval castle, surrounded by a straggling little Russian town, which has been growing up for 500 years, and you have a picture of Lutsk. On a branch line of railway, it was before the war as quiet and as isolated as though it were on the banks of the Amur in far-off Siberia.

When I first knew Lutsk, rather more than a year ago, peasants when questioned, spoke vaguely of the conflict as something apart from them, no doubt much as they did of the Manchurian campaign twelve years ago. When next I visited the town, the Germans were already driving through Galicia. I saw the peasants digging trenches and laughing as they dug, for none believed the enemy would ever reach them. But since those days the cloud of war has swept over the western horizon and Lutsk has changed hands four times.

BELONG TO MILITARY.

Thanks to the courtesy of a genial and obliging commandant, we are given a room in a hotel in the main street. Everything belongs to the Military now, and when you want quarters you go to the commandant, and he allots you a vacant place in which to spend the night. An orderly roused an ancient man, who with sulky footsteps, lighted us along a dusty hall into a room with a balcony facing the great highway.

All night long there is the constant roar of traffic beneath our window. Again and again we are awakened by the brasen clamor of military music crashing out the superb strains of the Russian marching songs, as the regimental bands, fifty strong, go swinging down the streets at the head of the columns, pressing onward to take up in turn their burden at the front.

As one sat on the road at Novo Minsk in Poland, last year, and watched the Russian army go by in defeat, so now one may sit here and see the spectacle of a great army advancing after victory. Now, however, it is to the crash of music, while then the only sound was the shuffle of the weary feet plodding through the dust.

With creaking limbers and jingling chains, with six sturdy little horses' necks straining in their collars, the loaded ammunition wagons passing form columns a mile long. Then for half an hour one may watch the odds and ends of transport. Miles and miles of peasants' carts, bearing food, provender, huge loaves of bread, are succeeded by four horse wagons piled high with regimental and staff baggage. These turn aside to let the field telegraph column pass, with its innumerable little two wheeled carts, loaded with poles and coils for the communications.

DEMAND RIGHT OF WAY.

Perhaps behind them a long column of the two wheeled two horse carts, with small arm ammunition for the infantry, passes tumultuously over the rough cobbled stones. Huge motor lorries filled with petrol demand a way through the surging crowds with bellowing of their horns, while motor cars from various staffs pass and repass each other, more insistent still for the right of way.

Intermingled with the throng are the carriages of the town, now commandeered by officers who have local business to attend. Wagons loaded with barbed wire wound on great spools are conspicuous in the procession.

A dozen times a day the traffic must pull aside to permit the passage of troops going to the front. These come through battalion after battalion, their copper tinged faces grey with the fine white dust of the road. Before us are the quarters of a general who has just come to this front, and he stands bareheaded on his balcony and calls out greetings to his men as they pass beneath the windows.

As far as one can see both up and down the street the surging masses of khaki figures with their fixed bayonets swing with their long stride, roaring out their marching songs at the top of their lungs, those wonderful songs to the cadence of which hundreds of thousands of men have died these past two years.

The pavements, too, are crowded with those who have their part in war. Sisters of Mercy, tired, dirty and covered with dust, lean wearily against doorways watching with us their empire in review—for humbly speaking every quarter of Russia is represented here.

The picture is not complete without your filling it in with the backwash from the battlefields, which day by day is crawling eastward. It is true that we rejoice at news of an advance and cry aloud for offensives that the war may end; but when one knows the price that it costs to advance it dims the romance of conquest.

HERE IS THE PRICE.

Here we see the price, hour after hour, in cartload after cartload. Patient; dirty, uncomplaining, they go jolting through the town, those of the wounded who are well enough to travel at all. Some with bandaged arms or bulging whiteclad feet, sit with legs hanging over the ends of the cart chatting gaily of the victory. Others with bandaged heads, survey the crowds without enthusiasm or emotion, while cart after cart creaks by under the load of those too badly wounded to sit up at all.

Many of their faces twitch with anguish at the jolting of the springless carts over the stones. Some are crying softly to themselves, unable to endure the agony. Others lie as dead with passionless faces looking straight up into the sky. Many of these have been wounded two and three days journey from the railway and have jolted all this way to a point where they can be placed in a train.

It seems terrible, but his is what war means. The Russians, however, have this branch of their service better organized than I have ever seen it since the beginning of the war. Compared with those dreadful early days, when we first took Lemberg and had all the Austrian as well as the Russian wounded at the same time, what one sees now is nothing. The greatest need here is a motor ambulance Lady Muriel Paget has one on this front which is doing heroic work and saving lives every day.

Child's Sacrifice Made In Vain For Plague Victim

YOUNG DAUGHTER OF COLBY M. CHESTER GAVE BLOOD FOR SERUM TO AID DYING BOY.

Greenwich, Conn., Sept. 23. — It was learned that Virginia Chester, 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Colby M. Chester, Jr., had given her blood for serum to save the life of Arthur Williamson Carrott, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Carrott, of Otter Rock Drive, Bellhaven, who died on Sunday of infantile paralysis.

The boy was a grandson of Adolphus W. Green, president of the National Biscuit Company, who lives in the Bellhaven section here, where the three other younger children in the Carrott family are still under quarantine. The Chester child was stricken with the disease when three years old and although partly paralyzed, her general health is good.

"I can give no reason why the disease should break out among the wealthy families here," said A. W. Klein, the health officer. "The children have been well protected and have not been allowed to leave the premises while the servants in the different households have not even been allowed to entertain visitors. There is absolutely no contact that I can trace."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Can I trouble you for a small space in your paper for information?

If "every child born of human parents is a child of God, baptised or unbaptised and continues to be one of God's children as long as the child does not deliberately exile itself from the Father, as did the Prodigal Son" —as was declared by the pastor of St. Paul's yesterday morning, how does he reconcile such doctrine with the following:

1. "Behold I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me."

2. "How can a clean thing come out of an unclean?"

3. "Ye must be born (spiritually) again."

4. Is not material or mortal birth, the appearing of a MORTAL not the immortal man?

5. Does material sense or spiritual sense unfold the facts of existence?

This is not for controversy, but for light.

Respectfully yours,

VON PAPEN IS NOW ON SOMME FRONT

Berlin, Sept. 23.—Capt. Franz von Papen, former German military attache, at Washington, now is in the centre of the fight on the Somme front. He is the chief general staff officer of a division holding [illegible] of the most crucial sectors on this front, against which the allies for weeks have been launching their heaviest attacks.

Capt. Von Papen received his coveted assignment to the front after his recall from the United States. He was first given command of a battalion, and as he laughingly told the correspondent during a recent visit to the front, he had had an opportunity to learn the new art of war as it has developed in the present hostilities.

The former military attache at Washington said he was anxious to have his friends in the United States know that he was serving at the front and not in Holland or South America, where he declared certain imaginative correspondents had reported he was conducting propaganda work.

Would Change Holidays Except Christmas And New Years, To Saturdays

NEW YORK—The Saturday Full Holiday National Movement is conducting an earnest campaign to have the legislatures of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania shift the present "fixed date" legal holiday (except Christmas and New Year's days) to specified Saturdays nearest the dates of their present observance, and an equivalent offset in annual holiday hours thus gained, the adoption of eight Saturday full holidays during the summer time (including Independence and Labour days), is proposed.

This change would neither increase nor decrease the present number of annual holiday hours, but it would make holidays more available to practically everybody for greater utilization, relaxation and enjoyment, it is urged. It may later develop a widespread public desire, to be followed by realization, for a Saturday full holiday throughout the year.

"If, then," says the promoters, "the mere shifting of all our present inert holidays (not including Christmas or New Year's days except when these may fall on Sunday) to specified Saturday's approximating the date of their present occurrence, will enable us to 'work up' more of a commemorative and holiday spirit and thereby infuse life into them, by all means let us do it.

"The business and professional man in these days begins the week's work on Monday mornings 'keyed up' in spirit for five or five and a half days of continued and uninterrupted effort, but on the average, in every sixth week, there comes, with a bang, a legal holiday in midweek. At such times it becomes difficult to throw off the pressure, to relax, to get the 'holiday spirit.' We seem rather, once we have started, to prefer the continuous week's work, and begrudge the time lost, feeling that we are not doing our duty to ourselves, our families, or our business."

ITALIANS TO DRIVE DIRECT AT VERY HEART OF AUSTRIA

The great Italian drive on Austrian territory is about to begin, according to statements made in a guarded manner by Italian military writers, who are in relation wth the supreme command. This offensive, contrary to what has been expected by military onlookers generally, is to be a direct blow at the very heart of Austria.

Preparations have been made on a vast scale for action by General Cadorna's forces, and rumours have been succeeding one another concerning coming actions in the Trentino for the purpose of seizing Rovereto, the chief centre of fortress defences guarding the main valley approach from the south to the stronghold of Trent, which is known to be one of the chief objectives of the Italian campaign, and concerning actions to push the gains made on the lower Isonzo by pressing on to the conquest of Istria. The coming offensive, however, is to be made on the line toward Vienna.

A vigorous campaign will be undertaken on the line in the direction of Laibach. The capture by the Italians of this vitally important Austiane of this vitally important Ausquarters for the General Staff in charge of the warfare with Italy, will be one of the most decisive blows which can be dealt against the Dual Monarchy.

The Napoleonic Method.

The hint of the coming operations in this direction has been seen in the frequent allusions recently made regarding the possibility of General Cadorna following the campaign originated and carried out by Napoleon Bonaparte in the first of his successful wars against Austria. More than a hint is now forthcoming in this regard from General Barone, the famous Italian military authority, who has compiled for publication, in behalf of the Italian War Office, a series of documents regarding the conduct of the Italian operations since the beginning of the war.

He refers to the question being asked as to whether the Italians will march on Trieste or on Laibach—whether, that is, they will endeavour immediately to realise their national aspirations by taking the "unredeemed" province or whether they will aim at dealing a vital blow to Austria.

"Italian military action," he says in reply to this question, "has a very clear perspective—the general victory. National aspirations will come afterward. They will be the logical consequence of this victory."

Colonel Barone explains for the first time the problems which confront the Italian General Staff following the victory at Goriza, and he intimates the method in which the problems are to be met.

The Austrian Defences.

"I shall answer in synthetic manner," he says in an article published in the Paris Journal, "these two questions:

"1. What is the significance, from the point of view of the great general war, of the results recently obtained by the Italians on the Isonzo?

"2. What reasonable forecast can be announced, within the limits of the most rigorous discretion, regarding the way in which our operations are now to be carried on?

"At present the Italian front, from Monte Sabotino to the sea, starts from Salcano, at the foot of Monte San Gabriele, runs along the slopes which immediately dominate Gorizia to the east and strikes to the south on the Carso plateau, by Sagrado, and the counterforts of Monte Pecin, to Hill 121 to the east of Monfalcone.

"In this zone the Austrians still hold the group of heights of the Three Saints, that is Monte Santo, Monte San Gabriele, Hill No. 546, and Monte San Daniele and Hill No. 664. Now this group of heights permits of a tenacious defence. Thus also to the north, on the east bank of the Isonzo, where the Italian forces are concentrated, the Austrians have retained possession of Bainsizza, on which are placed many strong artillery batteries, which take on the flank, to the east of Goriza, any attempt at aggression by the Italians.

"Behind their present front the Austrians have other lines, fortified in complete detail, ready for resistance. These are along the Tarnova forest, in the region of Dorimbergo, toward Duino, and further in the rear toward the region of Comen and thence to that of Nabresina, on the slope which directly covers Trieste. There is consequently a veritable labyrinth of defensive fortifications.

Gen. Caderna's New Task.

"The possession of the entire line of the Isonzo will be assured only when the plateau of Bainsizza has been taken and also the heights of the Three Saints, and this hard task is now and above all things the concern of our skillful, energetic and prudent supreme command. Although the official Italian communications recently have been silent regarding this part of the front and mention only some attempts at diversion on the part of the Austrians, there is no doubt regarding the Italian objective. All the recent artillery action has been directed against the Austrian defensive forces. This action has been successful.

"The results we recently obtained in this region have cost sacrifices seemingly superhuman to those who know the terrible difficulties of this region, and rendered more serious through the artificial fortifications constructed on it.

"Before the recent victory the Italian army, it must be remembered had been held back at the threshold of the Austrian empire as by a door which was too narrow, as by an obstacle which could not be turned, and whose existence did not permit the tactical deployment and utilization of the superior forces at our disposal. If this obstacle had not been turned by us, as it now has been, it would have allowed the Austrians to continue to hold the assailant in check with relatively moderate forces without being seriously disturbed by the sending of contingents to Galicia against the Russians. As long as our advance was barred by this short and formidable frontal line our military action, even diplaying a continuous offensive, would not have been able to act efficaciously against the enemy.

When the Defence Must Fail.

"But the breaking of this front, although for the moment it has only been done to the southern part of Gorizia, and the lengthening of our front which results from it, change the character of the operations.

"Hereafter all resistance against our operations, however strong it may be, will necessarily be with a thinning out of the Austrian froces, and we can gradually make our pressure more and more felt, in harmony with the action of the Russians. We are bound to draw new forces against us from the Russian front and thus aid the Russiansin their victorious march.

"Our recent successes prove that in warfare the defensive, even behind formidable positions, if it is not conducted by troops which are admirable and magnificently commanded and led—as the heroic defenders of Verdun have been led—and when it has not at its disposal ample reserves of men, [illegible] dominated and obliged to yield. It is only necessary for the attacks to be skillfully prepared, with an abundance of resources, and executed by troops of valor, without having recourse to the 'slaughter house' methods of the Germans.

"The teachings of Verdun and Gorizia justify this law. It must also serve as a severe lesson for the Teuton, now especially that by the intimate collaboration of the Allies our enemies find themselves in the necessity of defending as best they can the conquered territory. However vigorous the defences, they will fall slowly, but they will fall, if the conditions mentioned are realized.

BRAVER SOLDIERS NEVER FOUGHT

London, Sept. 23.—D. R. Thomas miners' secretary for West Auckland and Football referee, has received a letter from his brother, Private P Thomas, who is serving out in France, in which he says:

"We came here just after the boys had made the first charge. It is a terrible hole. A mixture of heavy shells, gas and tear shells drop around you day after day.

"Our first job here was to bury the poor lads from the north who made the charge on this spot — Tyneside Scottish, Tyneside Irish and Northumberlands. God knows they had something to do. The Huns dug themselves in thirty to forty feet below the ground.

"These gallant regiments played their part well. One piper I buried must have played his pipes right on to the German lines. I buried his pipes with him. Braver men than these never lived. We buried them where they fell, and we were under shell fire all the time."

Beavers Are Victors Over Farmer And Will Be Allowed To Stay

Renfrew, Sept. 23.—A beaver dam lately demolished on the farm of R. Marston, of McNab township, a few miles from this town, by Game Warden Devine of Renfrew, assisted by Mr. Marston, each using an axe and a crowbar, has been rebuilt by the beavers in a single night.

In tearing down the dam the game warden and the farmer were occupied for two hours. On the advice of the game warden the farmer hung a lantern in a tree by the site of the dam, but this did not have the effect of causing the beavers to leave.

Now the owner of the farm is to propose to the Ontario government, through the game warden, that the dam be not further disturbed and that he be paid the sum of $200 for the trouble and inconvenience of having a portion of his premises flooded.

HOW GERMAN PLOT WAS FRUSTRATED BY CARELESS TALK

TOO ELATED OVER PROSPECT OF RESULT TO REMAIN SILENT.

Petrograd, Sept. 23.—A story told here by the members of the Russian Parliamentary party, who recently returned from a tour of the allied countries, is a striking proof of the far-reaching information secured by the German intelligence bureau. The Germans managed to get wind of the intended visit of the Russian deputies to the allied countries and laid a plot to intercept the "Jupiter," the vessel on which the party were to travel from Bergen to England and France.

The plan was frustrated by a Russian woman who travelled on the same train with the deputies from Stockholm to Bergen. A German friend of hers, knowing of the intention to capture the "Jupiter," warned her not to travel on that vessel with the deputies, as he had knowledge from the best sources that a great fleet of submarines had been told off to capture the vessel at all costs. "Just think," said the German, "what a laughing stock would be made of the Russian deputies when they found themselves in Berlin, instead of the capital of the British Empire."

GAVE DEPUTIES TIP.

Madame X——— at once gave the tip to the deputies but the latter pooh-poohed the idea and said they were going to follow out the plan as worked out by the British government, and there was nothing to fear. But the English captain, to whom the German plot was confided, thought otherwise, and at the last moment the deputies were transferred to the imperial yacht, surrounded on all sides with English mine layers. The whole of the day they sailed from Bergen the commander followed a zig-zag course, until they reached a monster British war vessel, which the deputies boarded.

The party was told that their destination was Newcastle-on-Tyne, where they would arrive at 8 a.m. That same night the captain received a wireless that a perfect shoal of submarines was following in his wake, and he again changed his course. The captain told Dr. Shingarieff, the distinguished Russian deputy:

"The submarines will never be able to overtake my vessel, but they reach a point where they could hinder our course, so we have to move very carefully."

The night passed without any thrilling incident until the voyagers reached a port, much to the astonishment of the deputies, far up in the north of Scotland, instead of their supposed destination.

WHY NOT A CANADIAN?

We reproduce in another column a protest appearing in Le Canada against the appointment of an American engineer to be the consulting engineer of the commission which is to investigate the Canadian railway situation and consider the nationalization of some or all of them. It seems to us that there is a good deal of force in the arguments used. We wonder whether it has occurred to the Borden government that they may be doing injustice to Canadian engineers by passing them all over as unfit for such a task? If so, it would be interesting to hear the real reason for going to the United States for the expert.—Montreal Herald.

Barrie's LIMITED FURRIERS

LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR DEPARTMENT

¶ An impression appears to have gained credence in some quarters that this department only carries the Higher Grade Garments in SUITS, COATS, DRESSES, WAISTS and SKIRTS, and while this may be and as a matter of fact is actually true in a general sense, on the other hand the BARRIE policy is to cater for all tastes and pockets, exactly the same care being exercised in the selection of the more reasonably priced garments as in the case with the more expensive ones.

¶ Further, a lady desiring, say for example a suit at $15.00, $20.00 or $25.00 is absolutely certain of receiving just the same measure of courtesy and attention as a lady buying one at $60.00 or $70.00.

¶ Several ladies visiting the store for the first time have commented on this fact remarking also that Barrie's Limited is one of the prettiest and best equipped stores in Canada while the attention and service given is beyond question.

Thanksgiving Services At St. Luke's Church

Rev. Professor Cosgrave, of Toronto, Occupied the Pulpit at Both Services

Harvest Thanksgiving services were held yesterday in St. Luke's church, Rev. Professor Cosgrave, M.A., B.D., Dean of Divinity, Trinity College, Toronto, conducted the services both morning and evening. He was assisted by the Rev. W. H. White, Rector of St. Luke's. The church was appropriately decorated for the occasion and special thanksgiving music was provided by the choir. At the morning service, Professor Cosgrave took for his text the words to be found in the first chapter, seventeenth verse of the general epistle of James ;"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above ,and cometh down from the Father of Lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

"The words of the text," said the speaker, reveal in a few words the source of all good things in life. One of the first and most important things that God gives us is life. God is always sustaining and renewing our life. Like the verse of the well known hymn, "All Good Gifts Around Us Are Sent from Heaven Above." Secondly God is the great food giver. He is the bread of life. He supplies us with the spiritual food which is so necessary to the fulfilment of the highest ideals which life holds for us. Man lives not by bread alone, but is dependent on spiritual nourishment.

Gift of Pardon.

Another of God's gifts is the gift of pardon. Gladstone once said: 'What we need is a great sense of sin.' Men do not worry about their sins to-day. God freely pardons us and gives us peace of heart and mind. Then also we might consider God as the great self-giver. He gave Himself which is the most wonderful thing of all. Christianity began by a great self sacrifice. The whole of Christianity is based on that fact. We ought to appreciate self sacrifice better than we did two or three years ago. The war has given us a better understanding of self sacrifice. Our Christian religion in the past two or three years has received undisputed confirmation. When the gospel speaks of sacrifice it places the emphasis in the right place.

In return for all the good gifts we have received, we must consecrate the life which He has given us. We must not neglect or ignore those spiritual blessings which God has placed at our disposal. That is the duty we must fulfill before we can seek the pardon of God."

Two German Air Raiders Destroyed

"An attack on London was carried out by two airships coming from the south-east between 1 and 2 o'clock, and also by one airship from the east arriving between 12 and 1 o'clock in the morning.

"Aeroplanes were sent up and fire was opened from the anti-aircraft gun defences, the raiders being driven off.

"Bombs were dropped, however, in the southern and south-eastern districts of London, 28 persons being killed and 99 injured.

'Two of the raiders were brought down in Essex. Both were large airships of a new pattern.

'One of the raiders fell in flames and was destroyed with its crew of 22. The officers and men of the second were captured."

The roar of dropping bombs was heard in many districts where the raiders were invisible. It is not believed that more than two or three invading Zeppelins which crossed the East Coast succeeded in reaching the environs of London, and that two of these paid the death penalty gives the greatest satisfaction to the military authorities. Apart from the loss in material, the casualties of the past two raids, it is believed, will have a depressing effect on the morale of the Zeppelin crews in the future.

Careful Defences.

The fact that the airships were brought down well outside of London both last night and September 3, shows the care with which the defences have been developed. The efficiency in dealing with the raiders was further evidenced by the speed with which the searchlights picked up the first raider that appeared above the suburbs about midnight. Suddenly a searchlight beam shot into the starlit sky. Three more dazzling shafts followed, and within 15 seconds the whirring airships were caught in the toils and the guns began sending up shrieking shrapnel shells.

For a minute or two the raider kept its course, then wavered, turned partly away and suddenly dissolved apparently into thin air. Evidently the ship was beclouded in the smoke and the lights lost her completely.

In the meantime, however, bombs were dropping and red flares were visible as they hit the earth. Then the city was quiet for an hour, the searchlights flashing only occasionally in the hunt for raiders. All London within sound of the guns and bombs was out to see the spectacle, and almost despaired of further excitement, when well to the eastward a tiny glow appeared low in the sky. It looked first like the moon rising red in its last quarter from behind a cloud bank. From the city it appeared to hang stationary for a minute or more, then glowing redder and redder slowly turned to the perpendicular and streaked into the gloom of the smoky night ground-mist.

All London expected the attack of last night, the Germans evidently having selected Saturday for their greatest efforts. But a bright moon deterred any attempt since three weeks ago, when thirteen raiders came over the sea. The change from the unlucky 13 to 12 last night brought, however, worse, rather than better luck to the flying squadron. From the moment the first Zeppelin appeared it was evident that the raiders were of the new and large types. This has been borne out by the two brought down. One of the burning Zeppelins in falling, crashed through a row of trees in Essex, two of which pierced the lattice work of the envelope supports. As usual the village fire engine was quickly on the scene and began putting water on the blazing wreck. Police constables and volunteers removed the bodies as rapidly as possible. Some of these were charred beyond all recognition, while others were still white and recognizable. All appeared to be young men, well clad and wearing the remains of stout leather coats and shoes of rather poor quality, which is taken here to indicate that good footwear is not plentiful in Germany.

An eyewitness of the descent of the captured Zeppelin says he saw a Zeppelin flying seaward, three hundred feet up. Then, as if the commander of the airship feared trouble on the water, he turned back inland and in a few minutes landed in a farmer's orchard less than thirty feet from the farmer's cottage. Two loud explosions followed, and then a flare of a few seconds duration. The airship commander marched the men to the farmer's house, but the occupants of the house were too frightened to answer the knock, so the Germans took to the road, where they encountered a constable.

Twelve Grimsby trawlers were sunk in the North Sea by German submarines about the time the Zeppelins raided England. This leads to the belief that U-boats accompanied the airships to afford them a certain amount of protection from attack while crossing the water.

The Trades And Labour Congress Session Begins

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—Led by massed bands of the Musicians Union in Toronto, the delegates to the 32nd annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, paraded from hotel headquarters to the new Technical School where the opening and welcoming ceremonies took place to-day. The convention is one of the biggest in the history of the Congress, and when president Watters called the convention to order for business in the Labour Temple later in the day there were between 300 and 400 delegates present. In addition to delegates from all over Canada, there were fraternal representatives from other lands. Very important business is on the programme.

Children Join In Afternoon Service

After Sunday School yesterday afternoon the children of the three Catholic parishes assembled at St. Peter's Cathedral in honour of Bishop O'Brien's third anniversary of his consecration as Bishop.

About one thousand children attended and the rest of the church was filled with adults. After benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, Bishop O'Brien thanked the children for their attendance and requested them to pray regularly for him.

TORONTO C. G. E. STAFF HAD ENJOYABLE VISIT

Some two dozen members of the Toronto staff of the Canadian General Electric Co. came down to Peterborough Saturday morning, and were entertained by the members of the Peterborough Office. Shortly after the arrival of the train from Toronto, at noon, the party, together with about forty members of the Peterborough staff, journeyed via motor boats and automobiles to a point just below "Yankee Bonnet" on the Otonabee River, where a picnic lunch was served. The efforts on the part of the weather to put a damper on the occasion were a total failure. During the rain, which lasted about half an hour, the shelter of near-by buildings was sought and several impromptu boxing bouts were staged. The battle that provoked the greatest hilarity was that between Mr. W. E. Young of Toronto vs. Mr. A. Jardine of Peterborough. Mr. Young showed great science but failed to secure a knockout. The rain was all over at 2 o'clock and a series of athletic events were run off. All the events were well contested, and with the exception of the motor boat race there was not less than ten entries in each contest. The winners were as follows:

12 lb. shot put—A. B. Cooper, Toronto.

Standing broad jump—G. R. Langley, Peterborough.

50 yards dash—G. R. Langley of Peterborough.

Running broad jump—G. R. Langley of Peterborough.

Motor boat race—W. Armstrong.

Hop, step and jump—G. R. Langley, Peterborough.

The field sports were followed by a seven-inning baseball game, which ended in a draw, 9 to 9. Mr. Harvey Maynard, as umpire, succeeded in raising much ire in both teams, but was certainly impartial, basing his decisions throughout on his knowledge of electrical engineering.

At 7 o'clock about sixty persons sat down to a most excellent dinner at the Empress Hotel. Short speeches were made by Mr. E. G. Patterson, Gen. Supt. of the Peterborough factory, and Mr. W. A. Bucke, manager of the Toronto district office.

The evening was finished off by some very interesting bowling matches on the Water Street alleys. The bowling results were as follows:

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The boys' Bible study rally which was held in the boys' parlours of the Y.M.C.A. Sunday afternoon was a success in every way. The large number of boys who turned out to hear Mr. Wearing speak on the importance of Bible study was well repaid for the time spent at the meeting.

Mr. Wearing an certainly be classthe boys in the study of the Bible, but also drew their attention of making use of their time while at school, and impressed upon their minds the importance of fidelity to study while in their youth.

Mr. Wearin gcan certainly be classed as an expert in speaking to boys, and his address Sunday afternoon will have an everlasting impression on the lives of the boys who heard him.

To-night at seven o'clock the junior employed boys' "gym" class. The senior employed boys' class will meet at eight o'clock.

MOTHERS' CLUB PARAGRAPHS

The Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club desire to thank all those who helped to make the booth at the fair a success; especially to Messrs. Rountree for soft drinks, Adjutant McElhenny, chairs and tables; S. Scott, ice cream cones; W. Routley, candy; Gilgour, bread; also the gentleman who donated $2.50 to the Club.

The Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club wish to thank the ladies of St. Andrew's Church for their donation of socks, slippers and aprons.

The members of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club are reminded that Friday is Tea day. All members are asked to try and be present.—I. Kent, Secretary.

There's nothing a manly man admires more than a girlish girl or a womanly woman.

Interesting Feature of Rally Service at Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church

Rally day was observed yesterday in Gilmour Memorial Baptist church, when the Sunday school and church held a joint service which was exceedingly well attended. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. Galt. The service throughout was of an interesting nature and included some unusual features, chief of which was a special reference to the honour roll of the church. Each name on the roll was mentioned individually, and the whole congregation offered prayer on behalf of each member whose name appeared on the roll. A letter was submitted, a copy of which will be sent to each man with the overseas forces. The report of the secretary showed that the Sunday school is in a flourishing condition, numerically and financially.

NEW CHARTER IS GRANTED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, has issued a license to the Western Racing Association, to conduct races at Devonshire Park, Windsor, making the third licenced race track at the border city.

Mr. Justice Middleton, in June last, held that the Association charter was good. Mr. J. L. White, solicitor to the Treasury, returned on Saturday from the final inspection, and reported $100,000 spent on buildings and track, and ready for business. Upon this report the license has been issued. The first week opens Saturday.

CIVIL ACTION IS ENTERED

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Sept. 25.—Patrick Manning, the well-known lawyer and confidential adviser to Hon. Robert Rogers, has entered a civil action against Judge Galt, on behalf of Knox Magee, Editor of the Saturday Post of Winnipeg, managing editor of the Telegram, Ben Deacon, news editor, and Stanley Beck, reporter, in connection with the confinement of these editors in jail, Saturday. The amount of damages is not yet stated.

The four newspaper men were released by Mr. Justice Haggart of the Court of Appeal on Saturday afternoon, on an application for a writ of habeas corpus.

Great Pictures at Grand

The motion pictures that are being shown at the Grand Opera House are the finest that have ever been shown in this city. The subjects are good and the Pictures are clear and bright. There is no flicker, and it is a pleasure to sit and look at the pictures and listen to the good music.

The feature pictures are the best that can be procured, and are from The Standard Film Service.

The Grand uses two new Simplex Power Driven machines, so that the pictures are always run at the one speed and steady, so that it does not hurt your eyes to watch the pictures.

Just try the Grand to-day or to-morrow, matinee and night, or any day except when the big road shows are in.

The Grand Opera House is always a pleasant place to spend an hour or two.

Schoolgirl's Needs Should be Completed While Stocks Are Good.

Smart Serge Dresses $3.45

The schoolgirl must have a Serge Dress. There is no smarter or more suitable frock made, and certainly none so warm or durable. It is fashioned in a little yoke style with gathered bodice and belt, and a wide full skirt. A wide flat collar and opposing coloured tie and buttons complete a dress value that is a wonder. Sizes 6 to 14.

Sweater Coats 75c to $3

Away last March we procured these wonderful values. We say wonderful because they are truly wonderful. Almost every coat is priced as low as the yarn itself before they were knitted. Has your little schoolgirl one of these? At $1.50 there is a choice of navy brown or red with different trimming, and it is a stout warm little coat at that. In pure wool, we have a great collection at $1.75. They are the real good qualities of former days. You will be pleased with them. And then there are other prices that call for an investigation.

Winter Hose & Underwear

Wool has jumped to almost three times the price it was a few years ago, and yet we have managed by careful buying in the past year to get you the same splendid values at the old prices. Try the schoolgirls combination. It is an elastic rib underwear—warm and cozy, and then our 25c and 50c Union Underwear should not be forgotten. If you are in need of an entire new set let us suggest our special natural wool, priced from 75c to $1.25. It lasts twice as long as the ordinary kind. Whatever kind you choose, test out the Elliot Kind. It wears. Winter Hosiery from 25c to 75c.

Every Kind of School Hat

We suggest you have a Felt, because you will find them both smart and serviceable. They come in quaint little shapes, suitably trimmed and in almost every colour. You know they stand the rain and snow and general scuffing far better than any other kind and you can get a very pretty one indeed for about $1.25. Then there are little plush shapes and cordouroys and knitted hats. Our collection is certainly worthy of a visit.

ORDINATION OF REV. JOHN POWER TO PRIESTHOOD

Received the Sacrament of Holy Orders at St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday Morning, on Bishop O'Brien's Third Anniversary

A NATIVE OF HASTINGS

On the third anniversary of his consecration to the episcopate of the diocese of Peterborough, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien administered the sacrament of Holy Orders at St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday morning to the Rev. John Vincent Power, son of Mr. Pierse Power of Hastings, Ont. A large congregation including relatives and friends of the young priest from Hastings, Campbellford, Marmora and Norwood assisted at the mass, enriched with its impressive sacerdotal ceremony with which the Catholic church receives a candidate to its priesthood. Robed in full emblematic pontificals, Bishop O'Brien celebrated mass assisted by Rev. Monsignor Casey of Lindsay, and Rev. Father Phalen, rector of the Cathedral. Rev. J. J. O'Brien pastor of the church of the Sacred Heart was master of ceremonies, and Rev. Father Meader of St. Michael's College Toronto attended the candidate for ordination. An eloquent sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. McBride of St. Augustine's seminary, Toronto on the subject of "The Character and Power of the Priesthood as Instituted by Jesus Christ". The visiting priests were Rev. Cyril Bretherton of Hastings and Rev. Peter McGuire of Ennismore.

Rev. Father Power had previously received minor orders and those of subdeaconship and deaconship and had been examined concerning his conduct and morals, his knowledge of sacred scripture, theology and the other prescribed qualifications. The past week he had spent in a preparatory retreat. His fidelity to the call he felt within him was illustrated by the fact that he effected his college course largely by his own labours.

THE CEREMONY.

The ordination ceremony was begun during the mass when the Bishop had reached the tract when the candidate was presented by Mons Casey who answered for his worthiness. Bishop O'Brien proceeded with the prescribed address to the clergy and congregation pointing out that in the ordination of a priest the people should be consulted "inasmuch as the life and conversation of him who is to be ordained, might, though hidden from the many, be known to a few." Bishop O'Brien then announced that if any person knew of a reason why the candidate should not be ordained he should then make it known. Followed the Bishop's address to the candidate the recitation of the litany of the Saints, and the imposition of hands. After the investiture with stole and chasuble and the invocation of the Holy Spirit the candidate's hands were anointed and the following prayer repeated by the Bishop:—"Design to consecrate and sanctify, O Lord, these hands through this unction and our benediction. That whatever these hands bless shall be blessed, and whatever they consecrate shall be consecrated and sanctified in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ". The candidate then received the power to offer sacrifice to God, to celebrate mass for both the living and the dead in the name of the Lord. After the new priest had received communion he knelt before the Bishop who with an imposition of hands said, "Receive the Holy Ghost, whose sins you shall forgive they are forgiven them, and whose sins you shall retain they are retained."

These were the salient features of the ceremony which was unfolded with impressive solemnity.

At the conclusion of the mass Bishop O'Brien briefly addressed the congregation congratulating the father of the young priest to whom he extended an effectionate welcome. He made a touching reference to the fact that Rev. Father Power's mother had not been spared to assist at the ordination and also to the recent death of his brother who was killed in action at the engagement of Zillebeke. The latter had gone forth in the full flush of patriotism and for a just cause, and mother and brother Bishop O'Brien continued, surely looked down from heaven upon this ceremony. There was a great scarcity of priests. This was the first Sunday ordination in ten years and His Lordship expressed the hope that it would be an example and an encouragement to other young men who felt within their hearts an urging toward the priesthood. Then he exhorted not to harden their hearts against the call. The harvest was great but the labourers were few.

The priesthood existed. Bishop O'Brien proceeded, because God desired it; He willed it and promised to be with it to the end of the world. He needed no instrument in the operation of His divine grace. There was open to Him an infinite number of ways of perpetuating his mission. But He came on earth and in positive and explicit words chose a priesthood of men whereby faith might be fully disseminated and His divine grace bestowed.

Referring to the spiritual powers and prerogatives of the priesthood Bishop O'Brien quoted the words "Receive ye the Holy Ghost". How could Bishop or Pope pretend to hand down that power if God had not left it with His church to preach and teach in His name, to celebrate the sacrifice of the mass and to perform the other duties and functions He enjoined upon it. No man would dare to hand down these prerogatives of his own design. The only guarantee that they had been left with the apostles and their successors was that the author of divine grace had Himself willed it.

Rev. Dr. McBride based his sermon on the text "Let a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God" from the first epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, fourth chapter, first verse.

WILL RE-ORGANIZE FOR THE SEASON

Members of Operatic and Dramatic Society and Those Who Wish to Join Are Asked to Meet

The Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society meet to-morrow night, Tuesday in St. John's School Ladies 8 to 9; Gentlemen at 9. A hearty invitation is extended to all who have taken part in previous operatic presentations to come as well as to singers who may not have done so. A thoroughly interesting season may be confidently expected as three distinct works will if possible be presented.

Intending members are asked to be present sharp on time. Richard J. Devey, Musical Director.

Earl of Essex Found Dead

Examiner Special:

NEWMARKET, Eng., Sept. 25.—The Earl of Essex was found dead today.

The Earl of Essex was fifty-eight years old. His second wife was Adele Grant, of New York. He served in the South African war, winning the rank of colonel in the Imperial Yeomanry, and owned fifteen thousand acres of land.

RALLY SERVICE HELD AT SELWYN

Yesterday a special rally was held at Selwyn Baptist church. The meeting which was conducted by the Rev. J. Galt was a great success and brought together a large congregation, the outstanding feature of the meeting was the excellent singing by a special choir of children. Credit for this interesting phase of the service is due Miss Webster and Mrs. Vansickle.

The secretary's report showed that the Sunday School had maintained a high standard of excellence through out the year.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Two recruits joined the 247th Battalion on Saturday, the city supplying one and the county the other. The city recruit was William Rogers, 48 George street south, and the other Amos Lyman, of Otonabee. Good progress is being made in the canvass of the city. When this is finished the recruiting campaign proper will be commenced.

Pte. Hunter of the 39th Battalion, invalided home from overseas, is in town for a day or two. He has to report back to the Convalescent Home at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Sept. 23.—Accompanied by the band of the 155th Battalion (through the courtesy of Lieut.-Col. Adams), and followed by the two big Kelly motor trucks from the transport section of camp, forty-seven members of the C.A.S.C. marched from Barriefield camp to the city station, to entrain for the east, on their way to the scene of conflict on the other side of the western ocean. The men were full of life and glee and no one would have suspected that they were going to war. The C.A.S.C. has given a great many men to the C.E.F. since the war began, and Maj. Hamilton has cause to feel proud of his command. These men who left last night were the ones whose splendid physique and appearance the Duke of Connaught praised so unstintingly at the review of Thursday.

Russian blouses, Paris says, will be longer than ever, and will be belted with sash pieces of exotic brilliant Russian embroidery in which there is a glint of metal.

OFFICER'S THRILLING DESCRIPTION OF A SUCCESSFUL CHARGE

A young company commander, a captain of the———, was almost the last wounded officer to be landed from the hospital ship at Southampton last night, says the London Telegraph. He had a good deal of the descriptive gift, and was perfectly unconscious of his occasional use of it. What I will set down here are just bits he regarded as "guff" convinced that "everyone knows about that, of course." His fluent strategy and tactics—they shall be preserved in the archives of his grateful country.

"Eh? Oh, just an ordinary front-line trench, you know; rather chipped about, of course, by the Boche heavies, you know; but—oh, hang it, you know what the ordinary fire trench looks like; along the north side of the Mametz Wood we were. What Oh, yes, we were packed pretty close, of course, while we were waiting; only got there a little before midnight. My chaps were all in splendid heart, and keen as mustard to get the word "Go!" I was lucky, met my friend———, almost directly we got in.

"The weather was jolly then; but, ther'd been a lot of rain, and the trench was in a beastly state. You know what it's like, after a lot of strafing, when you get heavy rain on the churned-up ground. It was like porridge with syrup over it; and we were all absolutely plastered—hair and moustaches and everything—before we'd been half an hour in the place. The Boche was crumping up pretty heavy all the time, but it didn't really matter, because, for some reason, he didn't seem to have got our range just right, and nearly all his big stuff was landed in front or behind, and giving us very little but the mud of it.

"What did worry me a bit was his machine-gun. His snipers, too, seemed fairly on the spot, though how the devil they could be, with our artillery as busy as it was, I can't think. But I know several of my sentries were laid out by rifle bullets. I particularly wanted to let the others get a smoke when they could, seeing we'd be there three or four hours; helps to keep 'em steady in the waiting, you know, but we had to be mighty careful about matches, the Boche being no more than a hundred yards off.

ANXIOUS TO GET MOVING.

"Just before three I got my position, right in the middle of my company. We were going over at 3:25 you know. The trench was deep there, with a hell of a lot of mud and water; but there was no sign of parapet left, just a gradual slope of muck, as though cartloads of it had been dropped from the sky by giants—split porridge. I wanted to be first out, if I could—good effect on the men, you know—but I couldn't trust myself in all that muck. So I'd collared a rum case from——'s dug-out, and was nursing the bloomin' thing, so that when the time came I could plant it in the mud, and get a bit of a spring from that. Glad I did, too.

"I passed the word along at a quarter past to be ready for my whistle but it was all you could do to make a fellow hear by shouting in his ear. Our heavies were giving it lip then I can tell you. I was in a devil of a stew lest some of my chaps should get over too soon. They kept wriggling up and forward in the mud. They were frightfully keen to get moving. I gathered from my sergeant then one fear was that if we couldn't soon get going our artillery would have left no strafing for us to do. Little they knew their Boche, if they thought that.

NOT LIKE PRACTICE CHARGE.

"I thought I could just make out our artillery life, about a minute and a half before the twenty-five but I wouldn't swear to it. On the stroke of the twenty-five I got a good jump from my rum-box, and fell head first into a little pool—whiz-bang hole, I suppose; something small. It loosened two of my front teeth pretty much. I'd my whistle in my teeth you see. But I blew like blazes directly I got my head up. Never made a sound. Whistle full of mud. But it didn't matter a bit. They all saw me take my dive, and a lot were in front of me when I got going. But I overhauled 'em and got in front.

"I believe we must have got nearly fifty yards without a casualty. But it's hard to say. It wasn't light, you know; just a glimmering kind of a greyness. Not easy to spot casualties. The row, of course, was deafening, and we were running like anglighters. You remember our practice stunts at home? Short rushes, and taking cover in folds of the ground. 'Remember your fil' of direction, sir; dressin' by the right', and all that. Oh! the boys remembered it right enough. But good Lord, it wasn't much like Salisbury Plains, you know. We were going hell for leather. You think you're going strong, and—Woosh! You've got your face deep in porridge, fallen in a shell hole. You trip over some blame thing, and you turn a complete somersault, and you're on again, wondering where your second wind is. Good, you haven't a notion whether you're hit or not.

"STICK 'EM! STICK 'EM.

"I felt that smack on my left wrist, along with a dozen other smacks of the sort and another, but I didn't know it was a wound for an hour or more. All you thought about was trying to keep your rifle muzzle up, and I guess the fellows behind must have thought a bit about not stickin' us with their bayonets more'n they could help. I was shouting——the local name of the regiment, you know. The boys like it. But my sergeant, who was close to me, was just yelling, 'Down 'em boys!' and 'Stick 'em! Stick 'em' for all he was worth.

"My lot were bound for the second line, you see. My No. 12 Platoon, with fifteen of 'D' were to look after cleaning up the Boch first line.

"There was no real parapet left in that Boche front line. Their trench was just a sort of gash, a ragged crack in the porridge. Where I was there was quite a bit of their wire left; but do you know, one didn't feel it a bit. You can judge a bit from my rags, what if was like. We went at it like follows in a race charge the tape; and it didn't hurt us any more. Only thing that worried us was the porridge and the holes. Your feet sinking down make you feel you're crawling; making no headway. I wish I could have seen a bit better. It was all a muddy blur to me. But I made out a line of faces in the Boche ditches; and I knew I gave a devil of a yell, as we jumped for those faces. Lost my rifle here.

"JUST SMASHED MY FELLOW"

"Fraid I didn't stick my man, really, because my bayonet struck solid earth. I just smashed my fellow. We went down into the muck together, and another chap trod on my neck for a moment. Makes you think quick, I tell you. I pulled that chap down on top of my other Boche, and just took one good look to make sure he was a Boche; and then I gave him two rounds from my revolver, with the barrel in his face. I think I killed that under one, too; but can't be sure.

"Next thing I knew we were scrambling on to the second line. It was in the wire of the second line that I got my knock-out; this shoulder and some splenters in my head. Yes; bomb. I was out of business, then; but as the light grew I could see my chaps having the time of their lives inside that second line. One of 'em hauled me in after a bit, and I got a drink of beer in a big Boche dug-out down two separate flights of steps. My Aunt! That beer was good, though it was German. But, look here, I'm in No. 5 train, that that chap's calling. I must get ashore. Just want to tell you about that dug-out of ——'s in your own line, you know. It was four o'clock in the afternoon, and we'd got the Bazentin Wood all right then, when my orderly, who never got a scratch, was helping me back, making for our dressing station. We crawled into what had been a trench, and while I was taking a breather I sort of looker round and made out a bit here and a bend there. Begad, it was the trench we started from.

HOME—IN THE DUGOUT.

"Seems nothing, but you've got no idea how odd it was to me; like dropping into a bit of England after about a century and a half in—in some special kind of hell, you know. Seemed so devilish odd that any mortal thing should be the same anywhere after that day. Not that it was the same, really. My rum-case was in splinters, sticking up out of the porridge, and I found my map-case there, torn off my belt as we got over at 3:25. 'Won't be much left of that dug-out,' I thought, and I got my orderly to help me along to see. Couldn't find the blessed thing, anyhow. Went backwards and forwards three or four times. Then I spotted the head of a long trench stick that———had carried, sticking out through soft earth at the back of the trench. The orderly worked that stick about a little, and the earth fell away. It was just loose, dry stuff blown in off the front part of the roof of the dug-out, and blocking the little entrance. Came away at a touch, almost, and there was a little hole you got in by. I worried through, somehow, I was really curious to see. If you'll believe me, the inside of that dug-out—it's liked like a drawing-room to me—after the outside, you know—it was just exactly the same as when we'd left it the night before. There was the fire stove we made, the cafe-au-lait on, with a half-empty box of matches balanced on the side of it, and the last empty tin of the coffee stuff we'd used, with the brokenhandled spoon standing up in it just as I'd left it; and ——'s note-book lying open and face down on an air-pillow in his bunk—most extraordinarily homely. There was I looking at his note-book, and his hold-all, and poor———dead. Yes, I'd seen his body. And the rats, too; the rats were cavorting around on the felt of the roof, happy as sand-boys. They didn't know anything about the Push, I suppose. By the way, we found only dead rats in the Boche trenches. They say it was our gas. I don't know; but there were thousands of dead rats there, and millions of live fleas. Very live they were. I must get. Cheero".

GIRL WORKERS IN MUNITIONS PLANTS ARE A JOLLY CROWD

Hotel Building Boom an Activity Stopped by the War.

LONDON, Sept. 23.— It would be hard to find anywhere a merrier or gayer crowd than the girl workers in the munition factories of the London area. They have had to do without their summer vacation, they are very much underpaid as compared with the male workers, and they have protested time and again to the minister of munitions without receiving anything but promises in return, but aside from wages they find nothing to grumble about.

Since Lloyd George appointed Seebohm Rowntree to supervise their "welfare," sympathetic intelligence has been applied to many matters important to health, but commonly overlooked in establishments run by men, such as rest rooms, meals and places in which to eat them.

Recreating Question.

The welfare department of the ministry of munitions is now tackling the question of recreation, which is urgent in these days when thousands of women and girls are suffering from overstrain. Lately a series of twice-nightly shows have been given in many munition workers' camps to crowded houses. This is only a beginning and the girls are being appealed to to take a hand in the business of organizing recreation.

There is now a club for girls at Woolwich, with Will Crooks, the well known member of parliament, as chairman of the advisory committee which is arranging sports on a ground near the arsenal. The girls themselves are everywhere forming dramatic societies and glee clubs and go in for dancing, gymnastics and many other forms of diversion to relieve the monotony of lives which would otherwise consist only of bed and work.

An Innovation.

British Royal academy intends next spring to introduce the great innovation of a black-and-white exhibition at Burlington house. At the same time it is intended to have an exhibition of war memorial sculpture in certain of the galleries. The winter show this year will be an art and craft exhibition on an unusual scale of variety and thoroughness. The black-and-white exhibition excites most curiosity because it has been the section of the academy that has been almost neglected, in spite of the fact that etching is the medium in which British art of the present generation has expressed itself most prominently in the eyes of the world in general.

Black and white pictures have hitherto always been hung in a sort of condemned cell which was only occasionally found by hungry people looking for the refreshment room, and here everything was jammed together, etchings, drawings, and engravings, just like the windows of a Regent street shop before Americans came over here and taught London shop-keepers the art of artistic window dressing.

Sound of Guns.

Apropos of London shops, the sound of the guns in France is to-day echoing in all of them, and the thoughts of the 'salesladies' are constantly turning to the men, who a year ago were just as busy as they in selling silks and calicos. Young salesmen from all the large London stores have enlisted by the thousands in the Kensingtons, the Queen's Westminsters, the London, Scottish, and other regiments which have covered themselves with glory.

News of the men is slow in coming through, though have heard many stories of individual bravery, but already there is word of many casualties in famous victories. Oxford street and Kensington High street stores are closely concerned with the taking of Pozieres and Regent street salesmen have fought bravely and with considerable losses at La Boiselle.

Boom in London hotel buildings which sat in just before the war, when London was crowded with Americans as it had not been since the coronation, was naturally one of the activities that was stopped by the war.

"The Bohemian Girl"

A passenger list that read like a page from "The Arabian Nights" was carried by a ship which sailed from Cairo a few years ago bringing a small regiment of Arab acrobats. Not all of these were to appear with the Aborn Opera Company in its New York revival of "The Bohemian Girl." Twelve of the silent, dusky performers were imported for that production and the remainder were to be divided between "The Garden of Allah" and the New York Hippidrome show. With three such massive productions appearing in New York at one time, and all tremendously successful, it was rather an Arab year for the Metropolis. The public has never tired of watching these wondrous Levantine tumblers who seem to defy the laws of gravitation, and the "Tzigani Whirlwind Arabs" have remained a sensational feature of the Aborn presentation of "The Bohemian Girl" for six seasons. This big organization, which combines the aspects of opera, melodrama and circus will come to The Grand Opera House, Peterborough, Thursday night, September 28th. Reserved seats on sale at box office Tuesday at 9 a.m.

Boxing Public Pulling For Clash Between Welsh And Johnny Kilbane

While New York does not seem to be greatly interested as yet, the rest of the country is rooting for a Kilbane Welsh match. In all the other boxing centres this has been the leading topic ever since the featherweight champion polished off George Chaney, his only rival for the honours of his class. Both of these men have disappointed so often in short bout that the fans are slow to become enthusiastic over a no-decision affair between the two, but there would be a great deal of interest in a twenty-round battle to a decision.

In the end New York probably will get the match, for Welsh is too shrewd to risk his crown with Kilbane until he has felt the featherweight champion out and discovered how he stands with him. The referee question and the size of the purse are other obstacles in the way of a twenty-round contest. If Welsh insists upon selecting his own referee, as usual, no promoter could afford to guarantee the men a large sum, because that would simply make a joke of the whole affair.

Kilbane is generally conceded to have a better chance of stopping Welsh than any other man who could be selected. Kilbane would be outweighed by many pounds of course, for, though he often fights at 130 pounds, his very best fighting weight is at the featherweight limit. On the other hand he is almost as tall as Welsh, and there is not much difference in their reach. The important feature is that Kilbane is by far the better hitter.

Kilbane is just as good a ring general and is much faster. His defence is not quite as complete as that of Welsh, but that is merely because Welsh devotes all his time to covering and playing safe. Kilbane is no mark for any one, but he is willing to take any reasonable chance in order to land solidly when the occasion requires such tactics. No real hitter can avoid everything that comes his way.

When Benny Leonard failed to defeat Welsh as decisively as he had done on a former occasion, a great deal was written to the effect that Welsh had been concealing his true form and that he was really just as good as ever. As a matter of fact, there is no doubt that he has gone away back. He showed that clearly enough when he failed to outpoint the slow-moving Charley White in their recent affair at Denver.

White, with his waiting tactics, is the one man that Welsh should be able to show up. The Chicago thumper is alays a mark for a straight left and Welsh with his jab and grab methods should have had no trouble keeping him back on his heels all the way. If Welsh could not do any better than he did with White he would be the easiest kind of a mark for Kilbane.

Big Jim Coffey has finally made up his mind to start again. The once popular Irishman will take things easy at first, meeting the ancient Gunboat Smith, whom he cracked on the chin last winter. Coffey has had a long rest from his labours in the ring. He has been trying to forget the walloping he was handed by Frank Moran, and he now believes that he has got his nerve back. If Coffey makes good in a few bouts he will receive an opportunity to tackle Frank Moran once more. As Moran has gone away back since he fell into a fortune through his two victories over the Irish idol, Coffey may be able to take him into camp in another attempt and so regain all his old popularity.

Little Johnny Ertle says that it is not his fault that he has not defended the bantam title against any of the good men. "These fellows are all shouting that they want to fight me because they have all to gain and nothing to lose," said the St. Paul midget. "Not one of them has been able to dig up a promoter who is willing to offer anything like a championship purse.

"It is not true that I am sidestepping any one. Of course I want more money to tackle the good ones than for meeting some of the lesser lights, but I'm never unreasonable in my demands. The trouble is they want me to take part in championship fights for a couple of hundred dollars. Any time they show me the money I will sign articles with any one who can make 116 pounds.

"It is not true that I have refused an offer of $2,000 to meet Kid Williams as he has given out. The truth of that matter is that I was offered $3,500 to meet Williams and I accepted. Williams absolutely refused to sign articles. Williams can't make 116 pounds, anyway. He's not a bantam and he knows it. He ought to be fighting Johnny Kilbane. He would, too, only he knows that he hasn't got a chance with Kilbane.

Benny Leonard is in great form right now and hitting harder than ever. Leonard outclasses the second raters so far that it is getting to be a joke to match them with him. Johnny Harvey, who prides himself on the toughness of his jaw, will be Leonard's next opponent. Harvey took everything that Leach Cross could hand out on two occasions without going down and Cross was supposed to be the hardest hitter among the lightweights. If Leonard can stop Harvey he will have to be rated as a harder hitter than Cross, whose wallop was his sole stock in trade.

Baker has made up their minds about Jimmy Dime, the Pittsburg veteran who took over his stable of fighters recently. When Baker heard that the men would be accompanied by a manager he made some very uncomplimentary remarks, in which he referred to Dime and all managers as unnecessary pests. When he met Dime, however, the latter made a great hit with the promoter, who had formed his opinion of American managers by his experience with the pilot of Jeff Smith.

The match between Fred Fulton and Frank Moran which has been hanging fire ever since Fulton appeared against Al Reich, will probably be staged in the near future. Last winter Fulton held out for $15,000 for his end, which was just his way of saying that he was not ready to tackle the Pittsburger. Since then matters have changed somewhat and both fighters are willing to listen to reason.

Now that Moran has been walloped by little Jack Dillon in such convincing style, Fulton has come to the conclusion that the Pittsburger is more or less of a joke and that it will be perfectly safe to take him on. Moran on the other hand, no longer can induce the promoters to grant him the large sums he received last winter so he is willing to be reasonable in order to get a fresh start.

If Fulton thinks that Moran would be easy, the latter is more than sure that the gawky giant from the west would be little more than a setup for him. Of the two Moran probably is the nearer to the truth. This looks like a great match for Moran. Fulton is just the kind of an opponent, against whom he shows to advantage. The bout would be almost sure to be a repetition of the Coffey matches.

The only difference is that Fulton is far less dangerous than Coffey was last winter. Moran, however, has gone back somewhat, so that Fulton might give him as much trouble as Coffey did. If Moran does flatten Fulton in short order his boosters will have a great chance to talk about his remarkable comeback. If Fulton could take a wallop or two without collapsing there is no reason why he should not be able to jab the clumsy Pittsburger to distraction and win easily on points. But Fulton still is to inexperienced to keep away from Moran's sweeping right handers and in the end he would stop one with his chin.

Johnny Dundee is so anxious to tackle Freddie Welsh over the long distance his manager offers to take the match for nothing and allow the champion to carry off all the fighters share of the receipts. The only stipulation he makes is that the referee must be neutral. Dundee would be a strong favourite in the betting if the match were made under these conditions.

The air is full of challenges from the various bantamweights, but there is very little action in sight. Kid Williams, who still claims the title, is doing all his fighting around 120 pounds and will not hear of a match at the weight limit of his class, no matter how much is offered. Little Johnny Ertie says he is willing to tackle any of the real contenders, but complains that the promoters will not offer him a fair purse, but prefer to run in an easy mark, figuring that the public will not know the difference, and the mark comes cheaper. Ertie may be matched with Billy Fitzsimmons, of Yonkers, in the near future. The latter is far from being a setup, and should extend the St Paul midget to the limit.

"BUCK" CROUSE IS ALSO A LES DARCY BOOSTER

Buck Crouse, the Pittsburg middleweight, has just returned from Australia, where he fell an easy prey to Les Darcy. Crouse, like the other Americans who have seen and felt the Australian crack in action says there is no doubt about Darcy's "class". "He is a great fighter, although not a flashy boxer," is the way Crouse sums his up.

There is no doubt that Darcy would have made a great hit had he been able to come to the U. S. He seems to have a very interesting personality as well as great talent as a boxer. The Australian has been a very willing fighter. He would make a satisfactory champion for that reason if for no other.

The Australian has sidestepped no one, taking them all as they came along. He has beaten McGoorty Clabby, Jeff Smith, George (K.O.) Brown, Billy Murray and Buck Crouse, and is matched to meet George Chip. Darcy beat all those men, and whenever there was the least doubt of his victory he repeated just to show that no mistake had been made.

There seems to be some doubt as to whether Darcy has joined the colours. The latest mail from Promoter Snowy Baker brings the news that when Darcy offered to enlist his mother refused her consent, and as the fighter is not yet 21 years old, her refusal operated.

Australians seem to have changed

MILITARY NEWS

That the 52nd Battery with some sixty Peterborough boys in its ranks is safe in England is evident from the following despatch from Ottawa:

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—It is officially announced that the following troops have arrived safely in England:

SAW THE RAID.

Capt. C. R. Widdifield of "A" Company, 93rd Battalion saw the recent big Zeppelin raid in London, which up to Saturday's was the biggest of the war. He was in London for the week end and writes to his father, Judge Widdifield of Owen Sound as follows:—

"We were roused about 2:30 a.m. by the sounds of bursting bombs. So loud were the explosions we thought they must be only a few rods away; as a matter of fact they were three miles distant. When we reached the outskirts of the city we could see the monster Zeppelin in the zone of the searchlight. As we watched, little specks of blue and green broke out all around the ship, like the fires thrown out of Roman candles. These were bursting shrapnel. After a time the Zeppelin appeared to stop for a few moments, then tilted over and started downward end first. For a moment we lost her in a cloud of smoke and when next we saw her she was on fire and descending rapidly. It was beautiful and spectacular, but at the same time an awful sight.

Off For Home.

To the Editor of The Examiner:
